The wedding of Miss Ruth A. Badgley and Dr. William K. Shepard will take place on Easter Monday, April 16, in the Church of the Heavenly Rest, and a small reception for relatives and intimate friends only will follow at the Badgley residence, 112 West Seventy-second Street. Miss Badgley, who is the daughter of Capt. Howard G. Badgley and Mrs. Badgley, who was Miss Adelaide T. Lyon, will have but one attendant, Miss Daisy Stedman. Dr. Shepard will have as his best man Dr. Newell Ferry of Memphis, Tenn., and his ushers will be selected from his classmates at Yale. He is a member of the Faculty of the Sheffield Scientific School.

⁂

The wedding of Miss Maude Robinson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George W. Robinson, and Arthur Corlies will be celebrated on Wednesday, April 18, in All Angels' Church. Miss Robinson will have as her only attendant her sister, Mrs. Joseph Dillette White. Mr. Corlies will have his brother, Howard Corlies, as his best man, and his ushers are to be Hamilton Fish Benjamin, Richard L. Morris, J. R. Goetchius, C. Arthur Comstock, Henry Sampson, Jr., Craig Colgate, Reune Martin, David Stuart, E. Hubert Litchfield, and James T. Terry. The ceremony will take place at 4 o'clock and will be followed by a reception at the Robinson residence, 340 West Eighty-ninth Street.

Mr. Corlies will give his bachelor dinner at Delmonico's on April 6.

Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish and Mr. and Mrs. Harry Symes Lehr will start on Saturday for North Carolina, where they are to spend a week at Arleight as the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Pembroke Jones.

⁂

The programme for the entertainment this afternoon for the benefit of the Lying-In Hospital will start with music by the Symphony Club, which has in its membership Mrs. George C. Clark, Jr., Mrs. Trenor Park, Mrs. Morgan Goetchius, Miss Barney, Miss Gladys Rice, Miss Dix, Miss Eleanor Alexander, Miss Frances Ives, Miss Dorothea Miller, and Grosvenor Atterbury; then will follow "Le Soirée du Seize," in which Mrs. Francis McNiel Bacon, Jr., and Ernest Perrin will appear. The Symphony Club will then play, and the tableaus will be given immediately afterward. Miss Josephine Flagg, daughter of Mrs. W. Allston Flagg, will pose as a Spanish Infanta portrait by Velasquez; Romney's "The Sisters" will be posed by the Misses Constance and Beatrice Pratt, and Miss Edith Deacon will be Sargent's "Spanish Dancer."

An Engagement.

Mr. and Mrs. John Smart Browne of 17 West Forty-third Street announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Ethel S. Browne, to Joseph Devlin of Kingston, N. Y.

THE WEATHER.

WASHINGTON, March 21.—The eastward movement of a barometric depression along the northern boundary has caused high southwest winds and warmer weather in the lake region and the Ohio Valley.

Cold weather is probable Friday in Atlantic Coast districts north of the Carolinas.

Winds along the New England and Middle Atlantic Coast will be brisk to high southwest, shifting to northwest; on the South Atlantic Coast, fresh southwest; on the Gulf Coast, fresh southwest; on Lake Michigan, brisk to high northwest.

Steamers departing Thursday for European ports will have brisk southwest winds and fair weather to the Grand Banks.

FORECAST FOR TO-DAY AND FRIDAY.

Eastern New York—Fair Thursday, except snow in and colder in north portion. Friday fair, colder in south portion; brisk southwest to west winds.

New Jersey, Eastern Pennsylvania, and Delaware—Fair Thursday and Friday, colder Thursday night and Friday; brisk west winds.

The temperature record for the twenty-four hours ended at midnight, taken from the thermometer at the local office of the United States Weather Bureau, is as follows:

This thermometer is 108 feet above the street level. The average temperature yesterday was 30; for the corresponding date last year it was 35; average on the corresponding date for the last twenty-five years, 37.

The temperature at 8 A. M. yesterday was 26; at 8 P. M. it was 35. Maximum temperature, 36 degrees, at 9:30 P. M.; minimum, 23 degrees, at 4:30 A. M. Humidity, 71 per cent. at 8 A. M.; 63 per cent. at 8 P. M.

DEATH LIST OF A DAY.

Albert Smith Gallup.

Albert Smith Gallup, who died at his residence, 47 West Twentieth Street, yesterday, in his eighty-third year, was born at East Berne, N. Y., in 1823. His father, Albert Gallup, was a well-known lawyer of Albany and a member of Congress under President Van Buren. At the age of 20, Mr. Gallup went from Albany to Providence, R. I., where he began his business career. As a member successively of the firms of Peckham & Gallup, Bailey & Gallup, Gallup Brothers, and A. & W. Sprague, he was identified with the cotton and manufacturing interests of the State.

He was a member of the House of Representatives of the State of Rhode Island in 1853 and 1854, and Postmaster of Providence from 1856 to 1861. He was connected with the military organizations of the city, the Providence Marine Corps of Artillery, and the Providence Horse Guards, and was Colonel of the latter during the civil war. He was one of the founders of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals.

In 1872 Mr. Gallup joined the firm of Hoyt, Sprague & Co., and became a resident of New York City. He was a lifelong Democrat. Mr. Gallup married in 1849 Jane Adams, daughter of Joseph Balch of Providence. Mrs. Gallup died in 1893. Their three children were Albert, a lawyer and President of the Park Board, who died in 1892; Howard, who died in 1903, and Jeanie, the wife of the Rev. Dr. Henry Mottet. The funeral will be held to-morrow afternoon at 4 o'clock at the Church of the Holy Communion, Sixth Avenue and Twentieth Street.

James C. Beach.

Special to The New York Times.

BLOOMFIELD, N. J., March 21.—James C. Beach died of pneumonia this morning at his home in Beach Street. He was taken ill about ten days ago. Mr. Beach was born at Cranetown, now Montclair, seventy-nine years ago, and was a son of Major Ephraim Beach, engineer for the Morris Canal and the Morris & Essex Railroad.

He was graduated from Princeton at the age of 18 years, and began his business career as a clerk in the American Exchange Bank and later entered the Marine Bank, New York. He gave up banking and went into the manufacture of cardboard at Montclair. Subsequently he manufactured paper at Wallkill, N. Y., and then purchased the patents of the Allen Paper Car Wheel Company. Until March 1 last Mr. Beach was Treasurer of the Railway Steel Spring Company of Manhattan, and was a large stockholder in the Lappin Brake Shoe Company.

He was one of the organizers of the Westminster Presbyterian Church, and was at one time Superintendent of its Sunday school.

Mr. Beach was an organizer and Director of the Bloomfield National Bank. He was also Vice President of the Bloomfield Coal and Supply Company. He is survived by a daughter and a sister.

Mrs. A. D. T. Whitney.

BOSTON, March 21.—The death of Mrs. A. D. T. Whitney, the authoress, at her home in Milton was announced to-day. Mrs. Whitney's stories for young people, and particularly for girls, made her name familiar the country over. She was born in this city in 1842.

Mrs. Whitney was educated at the school of George B. Emerson. In 1843 she married Seth D. Whitney of Milton, Mass. In the early part of her life she wrote for magazines, and contributed short stories to different publications. After her first book, published in 1859, many others followed. Mrs. Whitney also wrote many poems. She was the author of "Mother Goose for Grown Folks," "Boys at Chequassett," "Faith Gartney's Girlhood," "We Girls," "The Other Girl," "Sights and Insights," "Homespun Yarns," "The Open Mystery," and "The Integrity of Christian Science."

Capt. Charles W. Baxter.

Capt. Charles Willard Baxter died yesterday at his residence, 415 West 118th Street, after a lingering illness. Death was due to a complication of diseases. He was born in Quincy, Mass., in 1836. He joined the Eleventh Massachusetts Battery, and while at the front was made a Lieutenant in the Forty-second Massachusetts Infantry. He served throughout the war, and on his return became commander of Battery B of Boston, which post he held for a number of years. He was a member of John A. Andrew Post, G. A. R., of Boston and was well known among the Odd Fellows. He was long a successful contractor and builder. Two sons and two daughters survive him. The funeral will be held in Cambridge, Mass.

Obituary Notes.

BYRON L. SMITH, a lawyer of Bath, N. Y., died there yesterday of tuberculosis. He was born in Cameron, Steuben County, in 1851.

Col. OLIVER H. DOCKERY, ex-Congressman and candidate for Governor of North Carolina, died yesterday at the Johns Hopkins Hospital, Baltimore, after an operation for cancer. He was seventy-seven years old.

FREDERICK W. WITTE died at his home, 609 Twenty-third Street, Brooklyn, Tuesday. He was born in Germany in 1845. He established a plant for the manufacture of mineral waters which at the time of his death was the largest in Brooklyn.

SAMUEL HARRIS, who lived with his mother, Mrs. Margaret Harris, at 18 West 115th Street, died yesterday on a train outside St. Louis, while on his way home from a business trip in the West. He had been absent about two months.

WILLIAM CRUGER HUDDART, son of the late Rev. R. Townsend Huddart, died yesterday after a long illness. He will be buried from the Church of the Paulist Fathers, at Fifty-ninth Street and Ninth Avenue at 10 o'clock Friday morning.

CHAUNCEY PATTERSON, Vice President of the Agricultural Insurance Company of Watertown, N. Y., and one of the best-known residents of that city, died there yesterday. He was 80 years old. He had been in the service of the Agricultural Insurance Company for thirty-six years.

JACOB BECK, a widely known Detroit miller, died yesterday at the age of 90. He was born in Baden, Germany, but located in Preston, Ontario, early in life. He founded the town of Baden, Ontario, establishing a milling business in Detroit in 1877. He left a large fortune. Adam Beck of Toronto, a member of the Ontario Cabinet, is his son.

BENTON CLARK RUDE, one of the oldest members of the Wayne County (N. Y.) Bar Association, died Tuesday night at Lyons, N. Y. He was 69 years old. He was once a candidate for Supreme Court Justice in the Eighth Judicial District, and was defeated by only four votes. He retired from active practice in 1895. Benton S. Rude, a clerk in the Legislature, is his son.

GEORGE BALDWIN, a veteran of the civil war, died Tuesday night at West Caldwell, N. J., at the age of 86 years. He was a member of Company D, Twenty-sixth Regiment, New Jersey Volunteers, and served as color guard. He was born in Newark, but had been a resident of Caldwell for fifty-two years. He was a member of Bartlett Post, G. A. R., of Caldwell, and is survived by two children. Death was due to old age.

Lillian Russell Back from Europe.

Among the arrivals from Europe on the North German Lloyd liner Kaiser Wilhelm II. yesterday, was Miss Lillian Russell, the comic opera singer. She said it was the first time she had ever gone abroad during the theatrical season. She will return to the stage soon, she said.

CHATWIT:
The Man-Talk Bird

Philip Verrill Mighels has a way of writing about the West that is all his own. The success of "Bruvver Jim's Baby" attested this delightful originality. This time the author has written of the Western land that he knows so well, and has given the wild animals the leading parts in the story.

Chatwit is a magpie who learns "man-talk" while in captivity and escapes to the wilds to astonish birds and beast alike with his weird accomplishment. Mr. Mighels has given a human touch to Chatwit that is inimitable and truly humorous. Chatwit leads a chequered life, matching his wit and cunning against the forest creatures who take league against him because of his "supernatural" powers. There are exciting times in the woods, and the plots and counterplots of the animals assume a strangely human interest.

MR. BAILEY'S FATHER DEAD.

Texas Senator Was Debating Rate Bill When the News Came.

NEW ORLEANS, March 21.—Joseph W. Bailey, father of Senator J. W. Bailey of Texas, died in a sanitarium here early to-day. He was 74 years old. Senator Bailey left Washington to-day and will attend the funeral at Crystal Springs, Miss.

Mr. Bailey was a native of New York. He went to sea at an early age and then located at Vicksburg. He entered the Confederate Army at the outbreak of the civil war and served until the surrender.

WASHINGTON, March 21.—While Senator Bailey was speaking on the rate bill to-day he was called into the cloak room and the news of his father's death was told him by Senator Foster. He prepared immediately to go South to attend the funeral.

Mr. Tillman announced the news on the floor of the Senate and said Mr. Bailey could not continue the debate. The Texas Senator had nearly ended his remarks, but a number of Senators had shown a disposition to question him concerning his amendments when he was called into the cloak room by Senator Foster.

COIT.—At a meeting of the Alumni of St. Paul's School, Concord, N. H., held at the school on March 21st, the following minutes were read and adopted:

On Saturday, the 17th of March, 1906, Joseph Howland Coit, Rector of St. Paul's School, died at Camden, S. C., at the age of 75 years. On this Wednesday, the 21st of March, his burial day, we alumni, having come from his grave, desire to say a few words about him.

In the years that we have lived we have not known a wiser friend. As the head of a great Christian school, we count his influence upon our characters one of the benefits of our youth beyond expression precious, and in our memories his affection lives unforgettable. And as for us once his head was a steady and a kind guide, so more largely for the school was it likewise. His utter and invariable effacement of self in his tireless work nevertheless leaves in it everywhere the mark of his devotion, his sagacity, and his sweetness. As we remember and value his influence, so will the school remember it and value it; and for all of us, for our minds and for our hearts, it was a wholesome and inestimable blessing.

THE FINANCIAL MARKETS

Stocks Lower—Call Money Rates 4@5 Per Cent.

Gold Engaged at Berlin—Central to Authorize $100,000,000 New Stock.

Having fallen with unusual violence on Monday and recovered with vigor on Tuesday, the stock market yesterday provided a combination of these two movements, rising in the morning session and falling in the afternoon, with a final sharp rally at the close in the nature of an extra attraction. There was nothing in the news of Monday to explain the apparent extreme weakness of the market, nor were there any developments on Tuesday which might serve as causes for the market's strength, and in such matters as came to light yesterday there was certainly nothing of sufficient importance to convince ordinary observers of financial markets that the combination of strength and weakness was warranted. The rising prices of the fore part of the day were to all appearances due more to a continuation of the short covering under way at the close of the market on Tuesday than to any stimulus derived from the announcement of further imports of gold, this time from Germany, for it is now plain that an outflow of gold to Japan will so far serve to consume such importations as to leave the money market little better off than it is at present. The pretext for the vigorous attack on prices in the afternoon was the announcement of the calling of a special meeting of New York Central stockholders to authorize an increase of $100,000,000 in the capital stock of the road, but inasmuch as the stock when authorized is to be issued from time to time in moderate amounts for the general purposes of the road, there is presented no parallel with the similar announcement of the Pennsylvania in 1903, which was the signal for a long decline in prices, nor are underlying conditions in either the stock market or the money market at all comparable to those obtaining at that time. In the onslaught upon prices which followed the publication of this news, New York Central naturally suffered the most, falling some 3⅝ points in all, although it was closely pressed by Amalgamated Copper, Union Pacific, Reading, St. Paul, Great Northern, and Northern Pacific. The attempt to cover the sales which brought these declines about was attended by a rally in prices, in the course of which most of the issues which had fallen a point or more in the preceding decline, recovered all but fractions of their losses, New York Central itself regaining 1⅜ points of its fall. Northwestern's 7½-point advance was accompanied by indefinite reports of "pending developments."

Yesterday's announcement of the engagement of $1,250,000 gold in Germany for import to this city was received in the financial district with some surprise, since, with the prevailing rates of exchange, it is difficult to figure out a profit on this transaction, unless, indeed, some special facilities are involved. Nevertheless, it is understood that additional engagements of a similar nature may follow. The edge of this news was dulled by the fact that the agents of the Japanese Government here are arranging for further transfers of Japanese moneys, now on deposit here, to Japan. The foreign exchange market was a trifle lower, in spite of the day's news, while call money rates also eased off, owing largely to liberal offerings of the funds collected yesterday on the final payment on the Japanese loan. Foreign markets were heavy as a result of the everchanging news from Algeciras. Of interest were the shap rise, amounting in all to about $1.50 a bale, in cotton and the weekly review of the steel and iron trades, where inactivity in the iron market and a fair volume of business in the steel market are reported.

TRADING IN BALTIMORE.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, March 21.—The trading was more active to-day than for a week past, the United Railways issues taking the lead. The pooled incomes rose ⅞, to 74½, declining later, and easing back at the close to 73¾. United Railways free incomes developed strength and activity at the opening, and rose steadily to 75½ on heavy trading, declining later to 75. United Railways 4s sold actively between 92⅝ and 92½. Western Maryland 4s made a ⅜ rise, to 87⅝. City 3½s, 1930, lost 1 point on limited trading.

In the stock list more irregularity was shown. United Railways free stock was a pronounced leader, advancing ¼ on numerous sales. The pooled stock followed. Houston Oil was stronger at 11¾.

The market closed strong and fairly active. Shares, 4,224; bonds, $244,500.

LONDON STOCK MARKET.

LONDON, March 21.—Money was in good demand and scarcer in the market to-day owing to revenue collections and the approaching quarter-end. Discounts were quiet. Operators on the Stock Exchange were fairly cheerful and hopeful in view of the brighter outlook at Algeciras. The dealings, however, were restricted. Consols hardened.

Americans opened firm owing to good support and afterward were a shade lower. They became steadier and inactive at above parity, hardened during the last hour and closed steady at below the best quotations of the day.

Foreigners were steady and cheerful on Continental advices, though occasionally there was a slight drooping.

Kaffirs hardened in places, but closed irregular.

Japanese Imperial 6s of 1904 were quoted at 101⅛.

Bar silver steady at 30⅛d per ounce.

India Council bills were allotted to-day at 1s. 3 31-32d.

Gold premiums are quoted as follows: Madrid, 15.32; Lisbon, 4.50.

Bullion amounting to £111,000 was taken into the Bank of England to-day and £130,000 was withdrawn for shipment to South America.

N. Y. CENTRAL TO ISSUE $100,000,000 NEW STOCK

Meeting to Authorize It Will Be Held April 18.

NEWS CAUSES SHARP DECLINE

Secretary Pardee Says Additional Shares Are to Provide for Company's Needs for a Long Time.

The New York Central Railroad purposes authorizing $100,000,000 of new stock, increasing its total stock issue from $150,000,000 to $250,000,000. A special meeting of stockholders, to be held at Albany, April 18, for the purpose of authorizing this new issue, was officially announced yesterday. News of this proposed increase reached Wall Street before the close of the market, and caused a sudden decline of nearly 4 points in New York Central, as well as sharp declines in many other issues. This weakness of the market was partly due to a misapprehension in regard to the time of the issue of the new stock. Some of the first reports to reach Wall Street said that the whole $100,000,000 was to be issued soon.

None of the new stock is to be issued for several months to come, and only part of it will be issued then. The official circular announcing the special meeting makes no specific reference to the purposes to which the proceeds of the new stock are to be put. It was learned officially, however, that none of the new issue is intended to take over any other lines or to absorb the electric traction companies controlled by the New York Central. That any such use was to be made of the new stock was denied absolutely by D. W. Pardee, Secretary of the New York Central and Hudson River Railroad Company.

In explanation of the plan for the new issue Mr. Pardee said that it was intended to provide funds for the general needs of the company for a long time to come. He explained that the authorization of this stock was to provide the company with available Treasury stock which may be used for improvements involving additional charges against capital account.

Among the improvements now being made by the New York Central are the changes in the New York terminal, including the electrification of the road for some distance beyond the city lines. Provision for part of this work was made by the issuance last December of $17,192,500 of treasury stock. Only part of this sum, however, was set aside for the construction of the New York terminal, the total cost of which will considerably exceed the amount of the stock issued in December.

Practically all of the New York Central's present authorized stock issue of $150,000,000 is outstanding, so that no further stock is available for capital outlays. It was said yesterday that it was considered best in authorizing a new issue to make the amount large enough to cover the company's requirements for a long period instead of authorizing merely sufficient stock to meet expenditures contemplated in the near future.

It is proposed that the stockholders shall authorize the Directors to issue the stock or any part of it at such times and at such prices as they may deem advisable. The privilege is to be reserved to the stockholders, however, of subscribing to any stock sold by the company at the price fixed by the Board of Directors. What plans have been formed for the sale of the first installment of the new stock could not be learned yesterday. It was believed, however, in the financial district that in all probability the new stock will be issued on terms similar to those which covered the issue in December last, which was sold to the stockholders at par.

The last increase in the authorized stock of the New York Central was made in April, 1902, when the stockholders voted to increase the amount from $115,000,000 to $150,000,000. Up to April, 1900, the stock of the company outstanding did not exceed $100,000,000. In that year $15,000,000 was issued to the stockholders at par to provide new rolling stock. This issue exhausted the treasury stock of the company. In 1902 $16,912,900 new stock was sold to the stockholders at 125. This brought the outstanding stock up to about $132,000,000, at which figure it stood until the issue of $17,192,500 in December last.

The first news of the proposed increase in the stock of the New York Central to $250,000,000 reached Wall Street seemingly by way of London. A cable to a prominent Stock Exchange house told of a rumor as current on the other side that the New York Central proposed to issue from $100,000,000 to $400,000,000 of new stock. This exaggerated account spread through the street, and caused apprehension lest the market should be disturbed by such very heavy additions to the New York Central's stock issue. After the first selling of New York Central, which drove the price from 145⅛ down to 141½, the price recovered 2 points. The stock closed at 143½, showing a net loss of 2¼ points.

DOUBLED ITS EARNINGS.

Cambria Iron and Steel Company Prospered in 1905.

The iron and steel boom of the past year and a half is consistently reflected in the annual statement of the Cambria Iron and Steel Company.

President Powell Stackhouse showed in his report shipments of 34 2-10 per cent. more steel in the year ended Dec. 31 last than in 1904. The net earnings, $4,100,183, are more than 100 per cent. greater than in 1904.

For betterments and depreciation, $2,550,000 was set aside in 1905, compared with $350,000 in the preceding year, and $900,000 in 1903, and there remains a surplus of over $100,000, bringing the total surplus up to $2,278,71.

THOMAS BARING TO RETIRE.

Baring, Magoun & Co. Will Dissolve and Two Firms Result.

Thomas Baring of the banking house of Baring, Magoun & Co. has determined to retire from active business in New York on March 31, and on that date the firm will be dissolved by mutual consent. Hugo Baring and George D. Hallock, two of the partners, will organize a new firm, to be called Baring & Co. T. Suffern Tailer, who is the Stock Exchange member of Baring, Magoun & Co., will form the firm of Tailer & Co.

BOSTON STOCK MARKET.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, March 21.—Call funds slightly firmer, but otherwise the local money market is unchanged. The usual table of rates, &c., follows:

Call loans, 5½@6 per cent.; time loans, collateral, 5@5½ per cent.; time loans, mercantile paper, 5@5½ per cent.; Clearing House loans, 5 per cent.; New York funds, 7½@10 cents discount. Clearings, $27,663,740; balances, $1,901,020; Sub-Treasury debit, $102,079.

There was considerable more activity in the local market to-day. Copper shares were in better demand at the opening, and during the forenoon several advances were seen, but a reaction followed later in sympathy with the weakness in the New York market. Amalgamated declined to 104, but later recovered a part of the decline. Boston Consolidated lost about a point net for the day. American Pneumatic still continues strong, selling at 29, the record price for the stock. The market closed irregular, with selling orders in evidence, slightly above closing figures.

CHICAGO QUOTATIONS.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, March 21.—There was further improvement in the prices of the local underlying street railway stocks on the home Exchange to-day. The demand was limited and so was the supply at current bankruptcy prices. North Chicago was bought at 39 up to 40½ before noon, and West Chicago from 29⅝ up to 32. Union Traction common in New York was around 6. The preferred was dead.

Late in the day, West Chicago fell back to 30; North Chicago eased to 39⅞.

In other local stocks business was quiet. Brick rallied a point. Western Stone was firm. Edison lost another point and sold at 154. Subway was easy.

Money, 5@6 per cent.; New York exchange, 20 cents discount.

Meetings and Elections.

METROPOLITAN LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY.

Notice of Annual Election of Directors.

Notice is hereby given that the annual election of Directors of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company for the year 1906 will be held at the home office of the Company, No. 1 Madison Av., New York City, at 12 o'clock noon, on the 10th day of April, 1906.

Notice is also given that the charter of the Company permits the Board of Directors to extend the right of voting at elections for members of the Board of Directors to any class or classes of its policy holders, under such regulations as the Board may prescribe, upon obtaining the approval of the Superintendent of Insurance thereto in writing, and that pursuant to this amendment the Board of Directors on April 22, 1902, passed the following resolution:

"Resolved, Section 1, That every policy holder in this Company whose policy shall have been in force for the full term of one year before, and shall be in force at the time of any annual meeting for the election of Directors, shall have the right of voting for members of the Board of Directors; provided that such policy holder or proxy shall, not more than twenty nor less than ten days before the day of such election, file with the Secretary of this Company a written notice of intention to so vote at such annual election, and if by proxy a copy thereof."

This resolution has been approved in writing by the Superintendent of Insurance, and all policy holders of the Company who come within the class designated in said resolution will therefore be entitled to vote at said election upon complying with the conditions of said resolution.

JAMES S. ROBERTS, Secretary.
Dated March 21, 1906.

New York, February 16th, 1906.

To the Stockholders of National Railroad Company of Mexico:

You are hereby notified that the annual meeting of the Stockholders of NATIONAL RAILROAD COMPANY OF MEXICO will be held at the office of the Company in Salt Lake City, Utah, on Monday, April 2, 1906, at 11 A. THE TOBACCO CROP SHORT.

Heavy Rains in Cuba Damage Plants—Cigars May Cost More.

Recent advices from Cuba say that the tobacco crop this season will not be more than 35 per cent. of the average crop, owing to a succession of heavy rains that have beaten down the young plants in many districts. An officer of a tobacco company, which controls 200,000 acres of the best tobacco lands on the island, said yesterday:

"The crop of 1905 was 469,328 bales, while this year's product will probably not exceed 230,000. As the Havana cigar factories alone require 100,000 bales, it will be seen that the situation is a serious one.

"However, connoisseurs in cigars need have no fear that there will be any deterioration in the fine brands produced in Havana, because the tobacco of which they are made is grown on lands owned by companies which hold a reserve stock to meet just such an emergency as has arisen this year. I am not prepared to say what the effect of the shortage in the general crop will be on the prices of cigars, but it is quite probable that they will be advanced."

New Jersey Junction Railroad Company.

January 24th, 1906.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that Mr. J. Pierpont Morgan and Mr. Harris C. Fahnestock, as Trustees named in the Mortgage or Deed of Trust dated the 30th day of June, 1886, and received in the office of the Register of the County of Hudson, New Jersey, on the 25th day of August, 1886, and recorded in Book 188 of Mortgages for said County on Page 289, given by the New Jersey Junction Railroad Company to J. Pierpont Morgan and Harris C. Fahnestock, Trustees, having resigned as such Trustees, and having given due notice of such resignation, such resignation has been accepted this day; and that at a meeting of the Board of Directors of the New Jersey Junction Railroad Company, held this day, the Guaranty Trust Company of New York has been appointed Trustee of said Mortgage or Deed of Trust dated the 30th day of June, 1886, as successor of the said J. Pierpont Morgan and Harris C. Fahnestock, and to fill the vacancy caused by said resignation.

THE OUTSIDE SECURITIES

Except in Specialties, Curb Stocks Are Dull.

Manhattan Transit Sells Higher—Losses General in Coppers, and Trading Heavy.

Except for specialized movements in a few stocks, the curb market was extremely dull yesterday. Leaving out Manhattan Transit and Bay State Gas, the total sales of industrials were not up to 5,000. The rise in Manhattan Transit continued yesterday, with selling amounting to 8,000 shares. The price went from 4¼ to 4⅝, but closed at 4½. Coppers, too, were heavy for the greater part of the day, and losses were pretty general at the close of the trading. United Copper sold only 4,400 shares and declined to 65. Nevada Consolidated closed ⅝ down, at 17⅞. Boston Copper closed at 22½, a half-point loss, and Nevada-Utah, the most active stock of the day's market, went from 5⅛ to 4⅞ in trading of 12,000 shares.

FINANCIAL NOTES.

The Lawyers' Mortgage Company has raised its quarterly dividend from 1¾ to 2 per cent.

At the annual meeting of the stockholders of the Union Typewriter Company yesterday it was voted to turn into working capital all profits in excess of the $640,000 required for the dividend. A. A. Forest was elected a Director in place of D. S. Wycoff, and Edwin Packard in place of B. S. Fairchild.

Three shares of Bank of Commerce sold on the Stock Exchange yesterday at 189, ex dividend.

George F. Brown and Max Marx have been elected Directors of the Hamilton Bank to fill vacancies.

Joseph P. Grace has been elected a Trustee of the New York Trust Company.

The Montana Ore Purchasing Company, 95 per cent. of whose stock is owned by the United Copper Company, has declared a dividend of $10 a share, payable on April 30. In 1905 there were four dividend payments—three of $4 each and one of $15.

The American Locomotive Company has declared its regular quarterly dividend of 1¾ per cent. on the preferred stock. No action was taken on the common stock dividend.

The Directors of the Thirty-fourth Street National Bank have decided not to extend its banking hours to midnight. After a canvass of its customers they think there is not sufficient demand.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

The stock market yesterday underwent another abrupt reversal of speculative form. On Monday prices broke sharply because the days of financiers, as of other men, are few and full of trouble, and the days of some were falsely said to have expired. On Tuesday prices rallied sharply because none of this was true. Yesterday they broke again, ostensibly because the New York Central had proposed to create a large amount of new stock and would take what little loose money the other corporations had left in the country. Such is the market. Transactions were hardly any larger than on Tuesday. It was noteworthy that the attack brought out very few stocks. The bear crowd made less headway than on Monday, and was unable to keep up a sustained selling movement. Prices rallied moderately in the last half hour of trading.

⁂

In its present highly professional condition the market is a most unsatisfactory affair to brokers and clients alike. A broker who had unwisely loaded his clients up with Amalgamated Copper in the forenoon on what he supposed was trustworthy information expressed himself in the afternoon in this manner: "The market is more than exasperating. It is positively insulting. You are told to buy them and down they go; then you are told to sell them and up they go. Whatever you do the tape says: 'What a fool you are—what a bawling fool you are!' You finally agree with the tape that you are a born fool and proceed to undo what you have done, and you are wrong again, and the tape begins: 'What an idiot you are—what a sorry, sorry idiot you are!' I think it would be better to shut up shop and do no business at all." But people will trade, and there is a certain number who will trade in any kind of market.

⁂

Up to midday the market was very dull, relieved only by activity in a few stocks, notably Amalgamated Copper, which sold up 1 per cent. to 106½. It was evident that there was no "follow-up" to the buying movement on which prices recovered in Tuesday's session. Then appeared the unofficial announcement that the New York Central would call for an authorization of $100,000,000 new stock. Traders seized upon this as a pretext for attacking the market. Four or five aggressive traders decided that they had better begin issuing the new stock at once, while there was still a market on which it could be done, and they sold New York Central down from around 145 to 141⅝ with a whoop. That weakened the whole market. Pressure was brought simultaneously to bear upon other stocks. United States Steel common, which had been selling around 40, was sold down to 39¼, Amalgamated Copper was rapidly offered off to 105, and other stocks broke 1 to 2 per cent. all around. Very few stocks came out on this decline and the market recovered, New York Central going back to 143 on a few consecutive transactions. There was a second drive on which New York Central went to 141½, Amalgamated Copper to 104, and Steel common to 38¾. In the last half hour there was a recovery on which New York Central went back to 143⅛, Amalgamated Copper to 105¼, and Steel common to 39⅜.

⁂

It was reported from the floor that brokers had appeared in the New York Central crowd with instructions, evidently, to sell the stock as low as they could.

⁂

The weakness of the United States Steel stocks made a very unfavorable impression. The low point for Steel common on the break which culminated a little more than a fortnight ago, was 39⅛, and since then the stock has seemed to get strong support under 40. Yesterday's quotation of 38¾ was the lowest this year so far. The incident would not have attracted so much attention but for the manner in which the stock had previously been supported just above 39. The bear crowd had failed repeatedly until yesterday to make it sell below that figure.

⁂

While New York Central was declining Northwestern common was advancing. New York Central closed at a decline of 2¼ per cent., and Northwestern at an advance of 7½ points. There was no explanation of Northwestern's advance. One house was reported to have purchased 7,000 shares. This was really an astonishing feat in view of the fact that the total of transactions recorded was only 6,600 shares.

⁂

Although the New York Central's announcement yesterday may be supposed accidentally to have met the demand of traders for a pretext on which to attack the market, it is none the less unfortunate that the news should have had such a reception.

⁂

The Street was oversupplied yesterday forenoon with bull tips on Amalgamated Copper, many of them emanating, brokers said, from the House of Twelve Partners. Amalgamated Copper is a stock which is weakest when it looks strong and strongest when it looks weak. It looked very strong yesterday morning at 106½, with Flower & Co. and Ira Kip buying it openly, but it was really weak, and then an hour later it looked very sick at 104, but it was then stronger, for it closed above 105. It is also a stock in which a trader does well to choose his company with discrimination. There are certain people now active in the stock whose tips it is usually safe to "copper." On the whole the stock has been behaving in a very natural manner since its recovery from par a little more than two weeks ago. When it is sold by a bear crowd there is support; when it is rashly bulled by another crowd stock is supplied. The market apparently is controlled by the old Broadway crowd, and from its actions one would infer that plans had been laid for a bull campaign a little later.

⁂

The following opinion, expressed by one of the most prominent Stock Exchange houses in the Street, is fairly typical of that which is held generally in conservative quarters concerning the speculative future of Union Pacific: "There is no doubt that the buying of Union Pacific goes on steadily, and is for very good account. We have alluded to this so often that we are almost afraid of wearying our clients, but it is distinctly the best property, so far as we can judge, for speculative purposes upon the list at this time."

⁂

What little speculative interest there has been in Baltimore & Ohio seems at length to have lapsed entirely. The company published a fine statement of earnings yesterday morning, and the stock was not quoted until after midday. Only 1,400 shares were traded in.

⁂

Some people are curious to know why the Gould properties are so much more afflicted by yellow fever, short crops, and pestilence generally than other roads in the Southwest. Following Missouri Pacific's miserable report, the Texas Pacific made a sorry showing yesterday, and the apologies were the same as in the case of Missouri Pacific.

⁂

The list of securities offered for sale at auction by Adrian H. Muller & Son yesterday embraced forty-three stocks, of which thirty were bank and trust company stocks. A similar preponderance of this class of securities in auction sales has been noticed before in the last few weeks. It is very unusual.

⁂

The market this week, more than at any time previously this year, has shown a capacity for taking care of itself, without a great deal of assistance from the so-called larger interests. The most that they do apparently is to keep selling orders over the market to discourage independent bullish initiative and buying orders under it to hold the bear crowd in check. Under these conditions the market becomes easily oversold, or as easily overbought, and this, in the judgment of careful commentators, is what Wall Street may expect for several weeks more, or until conditions determine whether or not there shall be the traditional Spring rise. The strength of the market technically lies in the fact that speculators are operating either way they go in a reduced floating supply of stocks.

⁂

Traders who play tops and bottoms, chart followers, and all that crew, find the market to be in a critical position. The low day since the culmination of the January boom was March 5, when Union Pacific sold at 149⅛, Pennsylvania at 136¾, Reading at 125, New York Central at 144¼. Steel common at 39⅛, and Steel preferred at 104. After these low prices came a sharp recovery, since which the market has been sagging back of its own sheer weight. Of the stocks named three sold lower yesterday than on March 5—Pennsylvania at 136⅝, New York Central at 141½, and Steel common at 38¾. New York Central was the only one that sold materially lower yesterday than on March 5. Steel common and Pennsylvania went only fractions lower. The lowest price for Union Pacific yesterday was 150¾, as compared with 149⅛ on March 5, and the lowest for Amalgamated Copper was 104, as compared with 100 on March 5. The general market is back to about the low level of March 5, that is, the average of twenty active stocks is, and a further decline of 1 or 2 per cent. would probably, as such things go, bring in fresh liquidation.

BUYS MORE GOLD ABROAD.

National City Bank May Intend Shipments to Japan.

The National City Bank was negotiating by cable yesterday for further purchases of gold bars in Berlin in addition to the $1,250,000 engaged there by the bank on Monday. No estimate could be had yesterday of the total amount of gold likely to be brought to this market as a result of the transactions now being carried on. It was said, however, that the bank would bring to New York as much gold as possible.

Reports were current yesterday that the gold now being engaged in Europe would in effect be reshipped to Japan by telegraphic transfers from New York to San Francisco through the Sub-Treasury. It was learned that arrangements were being made yesterday for a large transfer to San Francisco, but it was denied that the gold which is being brought here by the National City Bank is to be used to secure gold on the Pacific Coast for shipment to Japan.

Demand sterling closed yesterday at 4.8545, which was the low price of the day.

PHILADELPHIA PRICES.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, March 21.—Pressure on Philadelphia Rapid Transit was exerted right from the opening; support was lacking, and the price broke to 27½, with a recovery at the close to 28. The fact that the Mayor did not sign the time-extension ordinance for the completion of the Market Street Subway, and rumors that the stock would be heavily assessed, were among the influences which induced liquidation in the stock.

The effect upon the general list was not marked, although fractional losses were sustained by a number of the leading issues, including Cambria Steel, Philadelphia Electric, United Gas Improvement, and Marsden, the latter selling down to the lowest price ever quoted for it. Wilkesbarre Gas and Electric was off 1½, while Inter-State Railway was up 6½ points, but their movements were exceptional. Trading was very dull, even in Philadelphia Rapid Transit. The sales aggregating only 5,448 shares.

Total sales, 22,111 shares.

IRON AND STEEL NOTES.

125,000 Tons of Rails for the St. Paul's Pacific Extension.

Trade advices from Chicago state that the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul has placed an order for 125,000 tons of steel rails with the Illinois Steel Company, a subsidiary of the United States Steel Corporation. The business is worth about $3,500,000, and the rails are chiefly for the new Pacific Coast line.

Commenting on the condition of the iron and steel trade, The Iron Age says:

"Pig iron buyers do not appear concerned about the possible effects of a coal strike; at least there is no buying that is recognized as precautionary. Negotiations between the Steel Corporation and the Bessemer Pig Iron Association for second quarter iron will be taken up shortly. It is likely that purchases in the second quarter will be month by month. Specifications on contracts in all finished steel lines are at a record rate. In the lighter materials accumulations against Spring demand are still impossible.

"The Pennsylvania Railroad has not bought 45,000 tons of open hearth steel rails, as widely reported. It has several thousand tons of such rails in track for experimental purposes, and if results are as favorable as anticipated will undoubtedly use considerable quantities. Any quantity of open hearth rail business would mean the shipment of steel from open hearth plants to rail mills and its reheating.

"The rail trade is a conspicuous exception to the general market condition. Each week adds heavily to the bookings of the mills, and the production record of 1906 now promises to go well beyond the 3,300,000 tons of 1905."

YELLOW FEVER CUT EARNINGS

Mr. Gould Thus Accounts for Texas and Pacific Decrease.

The paralysis of railroad traffic between Louisiana and Texas during the yellow fever scare of 1905 is blamed by President George J. Gould of the Texas & Pacific Railway Company for the decrease of $302,756 in the gross earnings compared with the preceding year.

The annual report for 1905 shows gross earnings of $12,130,391. Net earnings decreased in a greater ratio. The figures for 1905 were: $3,920,225; a drop of $401,230. Income from other sources than traffic earnings, however, increased by $522,418 over 1904, making the total income for 1905 actually greater than that of the preceding year. This income, not included in net earnings, was $584,162, and the total income for the year was $4,504,387.

The surplus for 1905 was $1,203,042, making a total surplus of $2,474,081, out of which dividends of $1,233,806 were paid on the income bonds.

Short crops of grain and cotton in Texas were not without their effect in cutting down the earnings, but the loss of business, according to the report, was actually in Louisiana and was directly attributable, President Gould says, to the yellow fever epidemic.

RETRIAL COSTLY.

Plaintiff Got $500 the First Time—Gets $1,200 the Second.

August Klassen, while driving a wagon across Third Avenue at Ninety-sixth Street, was struck by a northbound car. He brought suit against the railroad company through his counsel, Alfred and Charles Steckler, and the case came up for trial in the Supreme Court before Justice McLean and a jury. A verdict was rendered in favor of the plaintiff for $500.

The company moved for a new trial, which Justice McLean granted. The case was tried again before Justice Bischoff and a jury, and yesterday the jury gave a verdict for the plaintiff for $1,200.

SUPREME COURT—First Judicial District.—In the matter of the application and petition of George B. McClellan, Herman A. Metz, Alexander E. Orr, Charles Stuart Smith, Morris K. Jesup, John H. Starin, Woodbury Langdon, and John Claflin, constituting the Board of Rapid Transit Railroad Commissioners of The City of New York, for and on behalf of said city, for the appointment of Commissioners of Appraisal, under Chapter 4 of the Laws of 1891 and the various statutes amendatory thereof and supplemental thereto, relative to acquiring the perpetual easements necessary for the construction, maintenance, and operation of an elevated railroad in Westchester Avenue, from Third Avenue to the Southern Boulevard, thence along the Southern Boulevard to the Boston Road, thence along the Boston Road to One Hundred and Eighty-first Street, in the Borough of The Bronx, wherever said easements have not been already acquired by purchase or otherwise.

Notice is hereby given that an application will be made at a Special Term of the Supreme Court of the State of New York, to be held at Part III. at the County Court House in the Borough of Manhattan, in The City of New York, on the 29th day of March, 1906, at the opening of the court on that day, for the appointment of three disinterested persons, being citizens of the United States and residents of the City of New York, to ascertain and appraise the compensation to be made to the owners and all persons interested in the real property, rights, franchises, easements, or privileges sought to be taken, affected, or extinguished for the construction, maintenance, and operation of an elevated railroad in Westchester Avenue, from Third Avenue to the Southern Boulevard; thence along the Southern Boulevard to Boston Road, thence along Boston Road to 181st Street, in the Borough of The Bronx, wherever the same have not been acquired by The City of New York by purchase or otherwise.

The real estate sought to be affected is located in the Borough of The Bronx, in The City of New York, abutting on Westchester Avenue, Southern Boulevard, and Boston Road, as above described, and the property is laid out and indicated on three similar or triplicate maps, one of which was filed in the office of the Board of Public Improvements on the 27th day of July, 1900, and another in the office of the Register of the County of New York on the 27th day of July, 1900, and one in the office of the Board of Rapid Transit Railroad Commissioners on the 27th day of July, 1900, each bearing the following certificate:

"Board of Rapid Transit Railroad Commissioners of The City of New York.

"Map, survey, and plan of lands and property necessary to be acquired or to which there may be appurtenant rights, terms, franchises, easements, or privileges necessary to be acquired or extinguished by The City of New York for the construction and operation of the Rapid Transit Railroad described in the routes and general plan thereof adopted by the said Board on the 14th day of January and the 4th day of February, 1897.

"Memorandum.

"There are to be acquired in relation to each and every parcel of property shown upon the sheets of this map, survey and plan, abutting upon Westchester Avenue, the Southern Boulevard, and Boston Road, and bounded in blue, the right, franchise, and easement to construct and operate the said Rapid Transit Railroad.

"Adopted and approved by the said Board the 21st day of June, 1900."

REPORT ON CUSTOMS BILL.

Importers Would Change Some Parts of the Olcott Measure.

A representative gathering of New York importers discussed yesterday at the Broadway Central Hotel the Olcott Customs bill, which is designed to amend the Customs Administrative act. Samuel L. Goldenberg of Goldenberg Brothers presided, and William A. Prendergast submitted a report formulated by a committee named at a previous meeting. This report approves some sections of the Olcott measure, while other are disapproved.

The report was signed by Goldenberg Brothers, Mills & Gibb, G. Seidenberg & Co., Einstein, Wolff & Co., Muser Brothers, John Pullman & Co., Locke & Altherr, Arnold, Constable & Co., and Lord & Taylor. The signers disapprove these features of the proposed bill:

Establishing "export price" as the standard on goods consigned to this country; permitting a consignee to add or deduct to make market value; relief from penalty when the advance is not more than 5 per cent.; permitting penalties and forfeitures where an unintentional error has been made in the entered value; changing the mandatory requirement upon the Collector to make a seizure a permissive one; limiting a forfeiture to the goods actually undervalued without respect to other goods contained in the same package or case; depriving the General Appraisers of the right to inquire into the wholesale values in the United States, and open hearings.

The report approves the measures making the declaration of a consignee more specific; requiring that the declaration of an owner should specify that he is the owner by purchase; relief from penalty where the advance in a case of specific duty would not mean the payment of a greater duty than if there had been no advance; a retirement provision, with compensation for General Appraisers; defining the time in which a Collector may order of reappraisement or re-reappraisement; placing the burden of proof in forfeiture cases upon the defendant, and eliminating Section 8 of the Customs Administrative Act, which requires the filing by a manufacturer of a signed statement declaring the cost of merchandise entered for customs duty to be consigned for sale or for the account of the manufacturer.

After a spirited argument it was determined to withhold final action on the report until copies could be printed and distributed to importers throughout the city. The meeting then adjourned.

Receiver in Laundry Suit.

Judge Amend of the Supreme Court has appointed Conrad R. Schmitt receiver of the assets of M. Loewenstein & Son, steam laundry at 1,809 and 1,811 First Avenue, in the suit brought by Bertha Loewenstein, executrix of the estate of Meier Loewenstein, against Louis Loewenstein and other members of the family to liquidate the affairs of the partnership. Meier Loewenstein died on May 11, 1905. The bond of the receiver is $10,000. The business, it is stated, is solvent.

RECEIVER FOR T. O'ROURKE.

A Petition in Bankruptcy Filed by Ringler & Co.

A petition in bankruptcy has been filed against Thomas F. O'Rourke, who formerly kept the Delavan House, at 1,431 Broadway, corner of Fortieth Street, by George Ringler & Co., creditors for $4,821. Their claim is for $4,173, balance due on a chattel mortgage of $5,000, which was foreclosed, leaving a deficiency for the above amount with interest, and $477 judgment on a note obtained on Jan. 23 against Mr. O'Rourke and the 1,431 Broadway Company. It is alleged that Mr. O'Rourke is insolvent, has made preferential payments of $5,000, has transferred merchandise and accounts $5,000, and has removed a large part of his property. Judge Holt of the United States District Court appointed John Henry Hammond receiver of the assets, fixing his bond at $5,000.

It was stated that in November O'Rourke transferred all the assets and good-will of the business and the lease to the 1,431 Broadway Company, for which company a receiver was appointed in the Supreme Court on Oct. 3. The lease did not become operative to the company because it failed to give security and also because it was dispossessed for non-payment of rent.

The lease was subsequently sold to a Mr. Wiener for $10,000 and the money was to be paid yesterday. Mr. O'Rourke has promised, it is said, to pay some of this money to certain creditors, which would be a preference, and the petition was filed to prevent this.

THE COMMERCIAL WORLD

WHEAT.—Although wheat started out with a good undertone and some advance over the previous night, due to unexpectedly firm cables, it failed to hold, and when bears made a demonstration at noon against the market, prices crumbled away, selling eventually under 85c for May, where a lot of stop-loss orders greatly accelerated the drooping tendency. Last prices were ½@⅝c net lower, and about bottom for the day. Liverpool was partly ⅛c higher. All through the afternoon the market showed a good deal of weakness, declining altogether 1c under the opening price, which was about highest for the day. There was some increase in Northwest receipts, and a rather liberal interior total as compared with last year. Continental markets failed to reflect the English strength, Paris closing net unchanged, Berlin ¼@½ mark lower, and Budapest 2 points down.

The cash market in New York closed easy, as follows: No. 2 red, 84¾c, elevator, and 86½c, free on board, afloat; No. 1 Northern Duluth, 87⅝c, free on board, afloat.

CORN.—The corn market opened higher, and throughout the day was relatively firmer than wheat, although at one time it declined under the previous night on account of rather heavy pressure from bear sources and the break in wheat. It was steadier at the close and practically unchanged from the previous night, with receipts only about a third as large as last year, cables ⅛c higher, car lot estimates light, cash houses, buyers, and weather conditions reported to be unfavorable. Export business consisted of 8 loads; No. 2 corn closed firm in New York at 52½c, elevator, and 50c, free on board, afloat; No. 2 white, 51c, and No. 2 yellow, 51c, free on board, afloat.

COTTON.—The cotton market was active, and at times showed considerable excitement, with prices advancing more than half a cent above the low level of the previous day on aggressive bull support and covering. The close was steady at a net advance of from 26 to 38 points, with sales estimated at 600,000 bales.

The opening was firm at an advance of from 14 to 23 points, in response to higher cables than expected; due to come from 9 to 10 points lower on the New York close of yesterday. Liverpool showed its bullish interpretation of the census report which caused the local break of Tuesday by reporting prices unchanged to only 2 points lower, and spot sales were reported of 12,000 bales at an advance of 2 points. The market continued to advance until in the late trading May sold at 10.92 and July at 10.94, or 33 to 38 points net higher. The close was a little off from the best under realizing, but bull support was still in evidence.

BUSINESS TROUBLES.

M. J. BIENENSTOCK & CO.—Judge Holt of the United States District Court has confirmed the composition of M. J. Bienenstock & Co., fur manufacturers, of 143 Greene Street, with creditors at 25 cents on the dollar, payable 10 cents cash and 15 cents on notes at six, twelve, and eighteen months. Their liabilities were about $12,000.

GLASER SHOE STORE.—Schedules in bankruptcy of Joseph Glaser and Sophia Lewis, who did business as the Glaser Shoe Store, at 150 Fulton Street and 858 Broadway, show liabilities $5,575 and actual assets $3,237, of which $112 is cash on hand and in bank and $3,125 in the hands of the receiver from the sale of the stock and fixtures.

LEVY & MALOWITZ.—The petition in bankruptcy filed on March 12 against Levy & Malowitz, cloak manufacturers at 53 Greene Street, has been dismissed by Judge Holt of the United States District Court on consent of all the creditors. An arrangement has been made whereby a committee of creditors will liquidate the business and divide the proceeds realized from the sale of the assets among the creditors.

COONS & CO.—A meeting of creditors of Coons & Co. (corporation) of 277 Broadway, which has nine stores for the sale of 5 and 10 cent goods in this city and other places, was held yesterday at the office of Seaman Miller, referee in bankruptcy, at 346 Broadway. Many claims were filed, and Morris B. Arnold of Frank, Lequin & Arnold was elected trustee, with a bond of $30,000. The liabilities are $95,596 and nominal assets $41,000.

ABRAHAM H. FLEISCHER.—Abraham H. Fleischer, manufacturer of skirts, suits, and cloaks at 59 Fourth Avenue, against whom a petition in bankruptcy was filed on March 14 by Michael Bauman, a salesman, who claimed he was a creditor for $1,000, has put in an answer in which he denies that he is insolvent, and asserts that his assets exceed his liabilities. He also states that he is not indebted to the petitioner. He denies most of the allegations in the petition, but admits that he has made a contract for the sale of real estate at 164 East 107th Street for $19,700, which, he believes, is the market value. In regard to the allegation of pawning his jewelry, he states that during certain seasons when larger sums of money than usual were required in his business, he pledged some of his property as collateral security for loans which were subsequently repaid, except some third mortgages, which he sold for full value, and for all the moneys so received he can account.

STANDARD ELECTRICAL SUPPLY COMPANY.—The Standard Electrical Supply Company, dealer in electrical supplies at 87 Warren Street, made an assignment yesterday to William Lester Wemple without preference. R. H. Goffe, Jr., is President and Charles A. Secor is Secretary-Treasurer and general manager. The business was started in September, 1902, as the Carleton-Chase Electrical Company, and the name was changed in March, 1904, to the present style. The company is capitalized at $250,000, but has no rating at Bradstreet's. In April, 1904, the company suffered considerable damage by fire and received, it was said, $32,000 from the insurance companies. The last statement of the company, on March 31, 1905, showed assets $103,000 and liabilities $50,000. Mr. Secor, the Treasurer, declined to give any information yesterday regarding the failure. To Mr. Wemple was granted leave by Justice Greenbaum of the Supreme Court to file a provisional bond of $55,000. The assets are about $50,000, of which $25,000 is merchandise and $25,000 accounts. The liabilities are about $40,000. The company was unable to meet some large claims which are due, and it was deemed best to make an assignment and liquidate the business so all could share alike.

Out of Town.

MILWAUKEE, Wis.—A petition in involuntary bankruptcy, alleging debts exceeding $100,000, has been filed against the Milwaukee Rubber Company, whose plant is located at Cudahy, Wis. The company employs between 300 and 400 men at its plant. It is probable that a reorganization will follow the suit.

BANKRUPTCY NOTICES.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT, SOUTHern District of New York.—In the matter of the petition of WILLIAM SMITH et al. to have RAFAELLE SENNELLI, otherwise known as Frank Sennelli, and also Raffaele Sanelli, adjudged an involuntary bankrupt.

It appearing to the satisfaction of this court, by the petition of William Lesser, verified the 9th day of March, 1906, that a petition has been filed in this court praying that the above-named Rafaelle Sennelli, otherwise known as Frank Sennelli, and also Raffaele Sanelli, may be declared a bankrupt in involuntary proceedings; that a subpoena therein was issued out of this court to the said alleged bankrupt, returnable on the 21st day of February, 1906; that service thereof and of the petition could not be made by the Marshal of this court, as shown by the return of said Marshal, dated the 14th day of February, 1906, stating that said debtor could not be found, and which is now on file in this court, and it further appearing from the said petition that no appearance has been filed since said return day, and that the present whereabouts of the debtor is unknown and cannot be ascertained, and that service of the subpoena and petition herein cannot be made upon him within this district,

Now on motion of Lesser Brothers, attorneys for the petitioning creditors herein, it is Ordered that the said Rafaelle Sennelli, otherwise known as Frank Sennelli, and also Raffaele Sanelli, appear, plead, answer or demur on or before the 3d day of April, 1906, to the petition filed herein in the office of the Clerk of this Court on the 14th day of February, 1906, praying that the said party may be declared an involuntary bankrupt, and that in case of his failure to appear, plead, answer or demur, adjudication be made according to the prayer of the petition. And it is further Ordered that service of the order be made by publishing this order in The New York Times, a newspaper published at the City of New York, in said district, once a week for two consecutive weeks, the first of such publications to be made on or before the 16th day of March, 1906, and by mailing a copy of this order and said petition and subpoena to the last known place of abode of the said Rafaelle Sennelli, otherwise known as Frank Sennelli, and also Raffaele Sanelli, in said district, on or before the day of the first publication.

Witness the Honorable George C. Holt, Judge of the said court, and the seal thereof, at the City of New York, in said district, on the 13th day of March, 1906.

IN THE REAL ESTATE FIELD

Resale of Greenwich and Murray Street Properties—Deal for Amsterdam Avenue Corner on the Heights—Salesroom Transactions.

Voorhees & Floyd and J. N. Kalley & Son have resold for the Fort Amsterdam Realty Company the four-story buildings 262 Greenwich Street and 91 Murray Street, on lot 29.1 by 80 by 53.3.

Estate Sells on Tenth Street.

The Davies estate has sold 12 West Tenth Street, a four-story building, on lot 82.7 by 92.3. The parcel connects with the large Ninth Street and Fifth Avenue holdings of Charles De Rham, to which he has recently been making additions.

William A. White & Sons and F. A. Curry were the brokers in the sale of the corner of Duane and Elm Streets to The Staats-Zeitung.

West Side Houses Change Hands.

L. J. Phillips & Co. have sold for Mrs. Anita Piza 22 West Seventy-fifth Street, a four-story brownstone dwelling, on lot 21 by 102.2.

Slawson & Hobbs have sold for Henry A. James 119 West Eighty-fifth Street, a four-story brownstone dwelling, 18 by 55 by 100, to a client for occupancy.

To Improve Houston Street Corner.

Plans have been filed for the six-story telephone exchange and office building to be erected at the northeast corner of Wooster and Houston Streets for the New York Telephone Company. BROOKLYN.
FOR SALE.

DON'T PAY RENT OWN YOUR OWN HOME

Don't look at to-day or to-morrow; LOOK AT YOUR FUTURE. What is it—one of toil and slavery? Think of your old age and be prepared for it by taking advantage of our proposition while you have an earning capacity, and the old age and future will take care of itself. Do not delay, as delays are dangerous, for time and tide await nobody. The most valuable asset you can have is your own home. Our system of home buying is simple, conservative and safe. The Company is backed by reliable and responsible business men.

Since our plan has been in operation in America it has been very successful. It is patterned after the CELEBRATED SYSTEM which has been operated successfully in England for over sixty years, where thousands of HAPPY HOME OWNERS have benefited by it.

IMPORTANT TO HOME SEEKERS AND SMALL INVESTORS IN BROOKLYN LOTS

REALTY TRUST owns large Plots of Lots in various locations along the elevated railroad lines between Manhattan and Coney Island and along the lines of the proposed Subway recently promised by the Rapid Transit Board of the City in response to the requests made by the various local improvement associations. These lots are offered now at low price and on very easy terms of payment. THEY ARE BARGAINS NOW, and are being rapidly absorbed by the leading builders of this section.

Don't neglect this opportunity to buy. Write or call for locations, prices, and terms. A LITTLE MONEY INVESTED now in Brooklyn lots will bring BIG PROFITS IN the near future.

REALTY TRUST also offers TWO-FAMILY HOUSES in the same locations on very easy terms. THE PRICES ARE LOW, and the terms on which the houses are offered enable persons who are now renting to buy at a monthly cost about the same as rent. Write or call for particulars and prices NOW.
REALTY TRUST,

OFFERS ICE AT LESS THAN HALF TRUST PRICE

And Will Sell at a Profit, Too, Says Nathan Lane.

AIMS TO HELP THE POOR

Trust Asks $8 a Ton at Present—Mr. Lane Will Sell 30,000 Tons at Practically $3.60.

The subjoined letter, containing an offer to furnish 30,000 tons of ice for consumption in New York during the Summer at a cost to the consumer of about $3.60 a ton, allowing for shrinkage on the way from the ice house to the wharf, but not allowing anything for distribution or retailer's profit, was received by THE TIMES yesterday. Its chief interest lies in the fact that Nathan Lane of the stationery firm of Nathan Lane's Sons, 124 Pearl Street, who lives at 95 Lafayette Place, Brooklyn, says that a profit can be made by the seller at the price mentioned.

It may be recalled that persons dealing with the American Ice Company—the Ice Trust—received notice weeks ago that after March 1 ice would be sold at 40 cents a hundred pounds, or $8 a ton.

Here is Mr. Lane's letter:

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Owing to the scarcity of ice during the coming Summer the price will be extremely high. How would a plan strike you by which your paper would sell to the public a fine class of ice at cost, which would be one-half of the dealers' price, which will be at least $8 per ton after June 1? This is all crystal ice, said by experts to be the best on the Hudson River.

We have about 30,000 tons of ice stored a short distance from Albany, which can remain in the house until Dec. 31, 1906, at which time our lease expires.

This ice is 12 inches thick and over, and we will sell the same at $2.50 per ton, cubic measurement of 45 cubic feet to the ton. We have about fifteen ice boats that will deliver the ice direct to you in New York at 70 cents per ton and 10 cents per ton for loading at ice house, and you can have about 400 tons in two boats arriving every day.

If you are interested enough to take this matter up kindly let me know at once. If the whole amount is more than you would wish to handle, let me know what amount you would like to take. Very truly yours,

NATHAN LANE.

124 Pearl Street, New York, March 20, 1906.

Speaking in further detail of his proposal, Mr. Lane said to a TIMES reporter:

"I am acting for a person whose name I am not prepared to disclose to-day. I will have a talk with him to-morrow and in all likelihood he will make the offer upon his own responsibility. The offer, of course, is made in perfectly good faith. The ice was cut in the river near the Billings estate on the Hudson, about fifteen miles above Albany. It is covered in an ice house on the banks of the river and the facilities to have it shipped to a wharf in New York are ready.

"In view of the high prices which are to obtain this Summer, as the newspapers have stated the case, the person for whom I am acting thought it would be a good thing to offer this ice for practically its cost so that poor persons in need of ice may be accommodated at a minimum sum.

"Of course 30,000 tons of ice is a mere drop in the bucket for New York in Summer. My understanding is that approximately 2,000,000 tons are consumed here during the heated spell. But on the principle that every little helps, my man is ready to produce what he has and will dispose of it at the figures I have named.

"Add to our price of $3.30 a ton an approximate loss of 15 per cent. in shrinkage on the trip down the river, and your cost will be about $3.60 a ton for the whole block. At our price we would make a small profit, but the size of it would be comparatively insignificant. Yet the offer gives an idea of just what kind of a profit is to be had when ice is sold for $6 or $8 a ton. If THE TIMES, for instance, should buy this ice it could sell it at $4 a ton and still make about 30 cents profit on the ton.

"Wesley M. Oler, President of the American Ice Company," concluded Mr. Lane, "said recently in THE TIMES that he was prepared to furnish a wharf on the East River, thoroughly equipped with the necessary paraphernalia for handling ice, to any one who might wish to sell ice in this city at a price lower than that demanded by his company.

"This makes an opportunity for him and for any one who wishes to take advantage of our and his offer. Any one who cares to accept the proposal can show Mr. Oler that he is radically wrong in his calculations, and that with the proper facilities ice can be sold profitably for 20 cents a hundred weight when the American Ice Company is now demanding 40 cents a hundredweight, and even then at a profit to the man who undertakes the easy responsibility."

When the letter was shown to President Oler of the American Ice Company he declined to comment on it.

DEFECTIVE CHILDREN'S NEEDS

Education Board Takes Up Case of the Blind and the Crippled.

As an initial step toward providing instruction for the thousands of blind, crippled, and otherwise physically defective children in this city, who have at present no means of education, the Board of Education, at its meeting yesterday, adopted a resolution presented by Commissioner Felix M. Warburg providing for the appointment of a committee of three to study the situation, with the assistance of the Board of Superintendents.

"Up to the present time the instruction of blind, crippled, abnormal, and otherwise physically defective children has been in the hands of various societies and private schools, who have given instruction according to their own ideas," Mr. Warburg said in presenting the resolution: "It is now time for the city to look after the needs of these children."

Mr. Warburg's motion and remarks were in line with a recommendation made to the board by City Superintendent Maxwell.

The board ratified the nomination of William J. O'Shea, Principal of Public School No. 171, Manhattan, as Division Superintendent, to succeed Edward B. Shallow, who has been promoted to the position of Associate Superintendent.

It appropriated $9,000 to cover the expenses of the Summer cruise of the schoolship St. Mary's. It also increased the salaries of the officers of this ship as follows: Y. C. Hanus, Superintendent, from $2,500 to $2,750 per year; Christopher Marsden, executive officer, $2,200 to $2,400; C. E. Littlefield, senior instructor, $1,800 to $2,000; Keran O'Brien, M. D., surgeon and instructor, $1,700 to $1,900.

DEUEL'S REPLY TO-MORROW.

It Will Be His Only Answer to Demand for His Removal.

Justice Joseph M. Deuel of Special Sessions announced yesterday through his colleague on the bench, Justice Olmsted, that his only answer to the charges prepared against him by District Attorney Jerome, James W. Osborne, and Edward M. Shepard will be filed to-morrow when the charges are formally presented to the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court. His three accusers, acting as private citizens, will ask for his removal from the bench on the ground of admissions as to his connection with Town Topics and other of Mann's publications made in the trial of the criminal libel suit against Editor Norman Hapgood of Collier's Weekly.

"The answer is now ready," said Justice Olmsted yesterday, "but it will not be made public until presented to the court."

Justice Olmsted has taken a decided position on the side of Justice Deuel, and has acted as his counsel since the papers in the removal proceedings were served. Justice Deuel himself had only this to say yesterday:

"I am faithfully attending to the business of the court."

He has been presiding in Special Sessions since the beginning of the March term, and intends apparently to continue serving while the hearing on the charges, if one should be ordered by the court, is going on before a referee.

MR. AND MRS. "BUTCH" MEET.

Reunited in the Shadow of the Rogues' Gallery Camera.

Thirty-seven pickpockets and cheap crooks—the overnight "suspicious person" grist—were lined up yesterday morning by Inspector McLaughlin's detectives at Police Headquarters.

In the squad assembled for inspection by the sleuths and for additions to the Rogues' Gallery was Grace Bennett, whose professional name is Mrs. "Butch" Bradley.

Also in the group was "Stalwart George," alias "Butch," Bradley. He had been dragged in with a dozen confrères at Seventh Avenue and Twenty-fourth Street.

For a minute the pair looked at each other. Then Mrs. "Butch" cried:

"Oh! it's me own Butch."

Then she threw herself into his embrace.

"Rattles, as I live!" said Mr. "Butch," stroking her blonde hair tenderly with one hand. "Rattles, me girl, me little wife! Wait till I have me picture took and get interdooced to the detectives, and, surest thing you know, Mr. and Mrs. Bradley will have a celebration."

The formalities of the occasion over, the reunited couple left arm in arm, Mr. Bradley telling the tender-hearted lady pickpockets to brush away their tears and the professional gentlemen who stood by with moist eyes to brace up and accept his invitation to help them celebrate.

The Bradleys were separated some time ago, when "Butch" was sent to prison in Nashville for killing a co-worker in a dispute over loot.

CIRCUS BEGINS TO-DAY.

Many New Features Shown at Yesterday's Dress Rehearsal.

There was a busy scene in the Madison Square Garden yesterday. It was the last day before the opening of the Barnum & Bailey Circus, and there were many details to be completed to insure a smooth and satisfactory first performance.

In the morning there was an undress rehearsal. The afternoon was devoted to putting the finishing touches to the new Peace Pageant, in which more than 500 men and women will take part. At night there was a general dress rehearsal, at which the entire performance was given practically as it will be presented at the opening exhibitions this afternoon and to-night.

The rehearsal revealed a surprisingly large number of new displays, in addition to "The Limit," this year's new aerial automobile thriller, and other sensational auto and bicycle acts.

Coincident with the rehearsal in the large arena there was a rehearsal of the freaks in the "Curio Hall." There are a number of new prodigies, as well as several seen here in former years, and the freak introductions and the reunions between the prodigies caused considerable amusement.

There will be two performances daily during the circus engagement at the Garden.

TIMS WANTS TO GET BACK.

Shakespearean Sergeant, Retired by McAdoo, Says He's Still Fit.

Ex-Police Sergt. Oliver Tims, who was known as the Shakespearean scholar of the Police Department, applied to Justice Clinch in the Supreme Court yesterday, through his attorneys, Grant & Rouss, to be allowed to proceed with the trial of an alternative writ of mandamus obtained by him to compel Commissioner Bingham to restore him to duty. He was retired by Commissioner McAdoo last May, on a pension of $1,000 a year, on the ground that he was physically unfit to perform his duties.

The application was opposed by Assistant Corporation Counsel Riggs on the ground that Tims had delayed bringing his action until four months had elapsed after his retirement, contrary to law. Tims declares that he waited on the advice of counsel because similar cases were being tested in the Court of Appeals. A test case was recently decided in favor of the plaintiff.

Tims asks to be reinstated on the ground that he was never dismissed from the force, and that he is physically able to perform all the duties of a Police Sergeant. Justice Clinch reserved decision.

FOR NEW PROMOTION PLAN.

Assistant Superintendent Edson Is in Favor of It.

Associate Supt. Andrew W. Edson of the Department of Education has declared himself in favor of the adoption of the proposed system of promotion by subjects and of the abolition of the present system of promotion by grades in the high schools. He believes that the needs of the individual child and not of the educational system should be looked after by the educational officials.

MAJOR PRICE DRUGGED, COUNSEL WILL CONTEND

Witnesses Wouldn't Swear That Officer Was Drunk.

DIZZY DAYS IN SYRACUSE

Witnesses Declare the Major Looked "Dopey"—Bartender Gave Him Jamaica Ginger and Ginger Ale.

So far the Judge Advocate who is prosecuting Major David Price of the Artillery Corps, U. S. A., for conduct unbecoming an officer, intoxication and violation of a pledge of total abstinence, has failed to prove that Major Price, with the exception of two or three drinks of whisky, drank anything much stronger than a mixture of ginger ale and Jamaica ginger, some birch beer, a couple of sleeping powders in solution, some mineral water, a bromo seltzer and a tiny glass of beer. The court martial, which is sitting in the Army Building, under the Presidency of Col. Grimes of Fort Hamilton, was resumed yesterday, and during the day many witnesses were sworn, by whom the Judge Advocate, Major Shanks, tried to prove the charges against the artillery officer.

Charles Pryer, a night clerk and bartender in the Mansion House, Syracuse, was the first witness. Pryer said that he had served to Major Price and two drummers a round of drinks, and added that at the time the officer looked "dopey."

"What do you mean by 'dopey!'" asked Major Shanks, and the witness said:

"He did not appear as active as he ought to be. He looked as if he was under the influence of some drug."

Joseph Kelly, a bellboy in the Yates House, Syracuse, testified that on the night Major Price arrived in Syracuse, he had received a call from the Major, and was told by the officer that he could not sleep. He went to a drugstore and got the Major some sleeping powders. Kelly also brought a bottle of mineral water.

"Major Price," said Kelly, "was in a Mr. Loomis's room when I received the call to get the mineral water. I gave a glass of the water to Mr. Loomis and also poured out a glass for the Major. Afterward Mr. Loomis asked me to take Major Price to his room, which I did."

"Was the Major sober?" asked the Judge Advocate.

"He walked all right, but he looked as if he was under the influence of some drug. His eyes kept rolling about and he kept talking to himself."

The next morning, according to Kelly, Major Price borrowed $2 from the hotel clerk, and when the clerk sent after the Major he found him standing before the bar in a nearby saloon. The bartender, he said, asked Major Price to have a drink, which the officer at first declined. A minute later he changed his mind and took a drink of whisky. After two rounds he and the Major went back to the hotel. Kelly said that the Major's face was flushed and he was unable to talk.

Policeman John Fleming of Syracuse said that he was in Police Headquarters, Syracuse, the night Major Price was brought in. The officer was locked up in a cell three or four hours, when at Major Price's request he took him to the Yates House, where bail was furnished for his release.

"Did Major Price appear to be intoxicated?" asked the prosecutor.

"I would not swear to that," replied the witness.

"Was he arrested on the complaint of a woman?"

"A woman came to headquarters when he was brought in. I do not know her name, neither do I know whether a record was made of the arrest. The defendant said at the time that he was Major Price of the United States Army, and I felt sorry for him because I saw that he was a gentleman."

The next witness was Martin Lennan, a bartender in a saloon in Syracuse.

He said he had seen Major Price in the saloon on several occasions, and that he always appeared "dopey." He always drank a combination mixture out of a special bottle, consisting of ginger ale and Jamaica ginger, Lennan said. It was prepared in the saloon.

"Was not whisky also sold in the saloon?" asked the court.

"Why, certainly," said the witness. "We had all brands of whisky which we could sell. We drew the whiskey from barrels and filled up the bottles to suit the taste of customers. When a man came in looking dopey we would hand him out the fake whisky bottle, containing the ginger ale and Jamaica ginger. If he made a howl we would hand him out the real stuff. If he didn't say anything we didn't argue with him."

"Do you know whether or not Major Price's action was produced by drinking bad whisky?"

"Well, I do not think so. I saw him several times when I was tending bar. He generally sat at a table by himself, and never talked to anybody."

When Lennan finished testifying, Major Shanks called Capt. A. J. Bawley of the Artillery Corps. Capt. Bawley said he was ordered by Gen. Grant to find Major Price and return him to his station, and that on Feb. 18 he found Major Price in the Yates House. He appeared to be under the influence of whisky or drugs or both, said the witness. He could not definitely state what the Major had been drinking.

When the court adjourned it was said that the prosecution would probably conclude its case to-day.

The defense, it was intimated, will try to prove that Major Price went into a Syracuse resort for refreshment after leaving the train, and was quickly put under the influence of some drug, which prevented him from making the inspection of some military organizations in Syracuse, Albany, and Troy to which he was detailed by the commander of his department.

DEAD GAMBLER WAS A JUROR.

Fined $100 for Being "Absent" Yesterday—Fine Officially Remitted.

Louis Nosser failed to respond to his name when it was called on the roll of jurors in Trial Term, Part IV., of the Supreme Court yesterday, and Justice Van Kirk fined him $100. Clerk George Lyons then informed the Justice that Nosser was the gambler who killed Mrs. Estelle Young in the Hotel Pierrepont last week, and then committed suicide.

"The fine is remitted," said the court. "I have no jurisdiction in the case of the juror named."

SAYS THE 71ST WANTS ST. REGIS FURNISHINGS

Finance Department Engineer Criticises $55,000 Plan.

THINKS $20,000 WOULD DO

Soldiers Don't Need 20 Clocks, Declares Withington, Nor Other Luxurious Equipment.

Officers and men of the Seventy-first Regiment have run into trouble in their efforts to get $55,000 for the furnishings of their new armory. The Armory Board reported in favor of the appropriation a couple of weeks ago, but the Sinking Fund Commission yesterday received an adverse report from Controller Metz.

This report was signed by Chandler Withington, an engineer of the Finance Department, and it declared the furnishings desired "more befitted the St. Regis Hotel or the Metropolitan Club than a soldiers' barracks." Mr. Withington suggests that, as the furnishing of seven armories in the last four years cost but $44,000 in the aggregate, $20,000 should be ample for the Seventy-first Regiment now.

"This regiment is composed of 750 officers and privates," reported Mr. Withington, "and an examination of the specifications reveals that it is proposed to furnish them, among other things, with 354 armchairs, 40 revolving chairs, 1,672 chairs of other styles, and 2,634 opera chairs, 51 mahogany and oak tables, 81 Davenports and couches and divans finished in mahogany and oak, 297 bentwood stools, 25 Saxony rugs of special sizes, besides Wilton and Brussels carpets, 43 French beveled plate-glass mirrors, 64 pieces of tapestry, and velour curtains and shades for all the windows. Also a full kitchen equipment, including a 24-foot range, a 30-inch broiler, 20 electric clocks, and an interior telephone system. Many of the chairs, tables, &c., are of special design, and are to be carved from models approved by the architects.

"I take it that the first purpose of an armory is to furnish a drill hall for volunteer soldiers," Mr. Withington writes, "and all other purposes are secondary. Therefore, I see no reason why the city should provide all these expensive and costly furnishings.

"The essence of soldierly service is promptitude. A soldier is expected to be on hand at the designated time, and I see no reason for the electric clocks or for the interior telephone system. The kitchen equipment may be useful in case a mob were besieging the regiment in its armory, but even then the equipment could be purchased at the same time as the food supplies for the siege are bought."

Col. Bates of the regiment declared the report unfair, and said that the descriptions of the various articles of furniture proposed are "trade descriptions," and do not mean all the things Mr. Withington had taken them to mean. The Sinking Fund Commission instructed Col. Bates to talk the matter over with the Controller.

Both Mayor McClellan and President McGowan of the Board of Aldermen, who had voted for the appropriation in the Armory Board, expressly reserved the right to vote adversely in the Board of Estimate, which has to finally pass on the appropriation.

COUNTESS DODGES A WRIT.

Count de Festetics Takes Her Child, Saying She's a Christian Scientist.

All attempts to serve the Countess Elsie H. de Festetics with a writ ordering her to show cause to Justice Sutherland of the Supreme Court why the custody of her child, Arthur, should not be legally transferred to his father, Count Gyula de Festetics, failed yesterday. The chain was kept on the door of her apartment at 214 West Eighty-second Street, and admission was refused to all callers.

On Tuesday afternoon the Count took the child away, and it is surmised that they are outside the jurisdiction of the courts of this State. For some years there have been difficulties between the Count and Countess, and they have lived apart. The boy lived with his mother, but the father had the right to see him at certain intervals, and on Tuesday afternoon called to take him to the dentist's. Instead he carried him to the Grand Central Station, where trace of them was lost.

The explanation lies in the condition of the boy. He is about 9 years old, and suffers from a complaint involving a tendency to hemorrhage. The Countess, however, is said to be a believer in Christian Science, and will not employ physicians. She is willing to provide "absent treatment" and "healers" of the Christian Science order, but has been known to send for the police when her husband has called in a physician.

Dr. J. S. Hopkins of 52 West Eighty-fourth Street said yesterday: "The condition of the lad called for continual medical care. When I saw him a few days ago his limbs were drawn up and his knees were discolored. With proper treatment this would disappear, and he would be comparatively well again. When I have attended Arthur at his mother's home his father has had to threaten her with the police before she would allow me to see him."

The affidavits filed by the Count with the Supreme Court state that in five years the child has only increased nine pounds in weight.

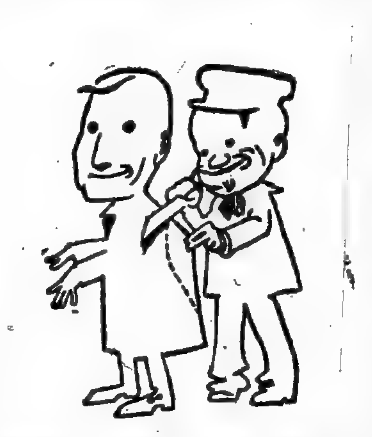
THE COLLAR-BUTTON JAG

Comes to Light in Bayonne and Is Classified as a Case for Sympathy.

John Reynolds of Avenue C was charged by his wife Jenny in the Recorder's Court in Bayonne, N. J., yesterday with having been drunk. Said he to Recorder Lazarus:

"I was not drunk, your Honor—far from it. I merely dropped my collar button and it rolled beneath the dresser. I searched an hour for it, and became so dizzy that perhaps I acted queerly. I didn't find the button."

"I have been all through that lost collar button problem," responded the court. "I sympathize with you. You are discharged."



Back to back—it's a question which back we most fancy ourselves.

The moderately full back which hangs straight from the shoulders, or the somewhat fitted back which flares from the hips.

We've an idea that careful men will divide on this question when it comes to Spring overcoats; and so have prepared for both.

Naturally the more ultra fabrics, such as lightish grays, have been made in the less conservative fitted back fashion.

MR. ROOSEVELT'S PLAN IN FAVOR AT ALGECIRAS

It Is Believed It Will End the Franco-German Difficulty.

IS A MIXED POLICE SCHEME

It Has Not Yet Been Decided Whether Mr. White or the Austrian Delegate Will Present It.

ALGECIRAS, March 22.—A mixed police scheme proposed by Ambassador White, under instructions from President Roosevelt, appears to be the solution of the Franco-German controversy offering the greatest chance of success.

It is now stated in influential circles that the delegates have practically decided to place Tangier and Mogador under mixed control, the other six ports to be divided, France and Spain taking three each, with an Austrian inspection officer, who shall report monthly to the Sultan of Morocco and the Diplomatic Corps at Tangier.

Mr. White, not desiring to intervene in a direct manner, conferred to-night with Count Welsersheimb, the senior Austrian delegate.

The delegates of the other neutral powers show an inclination to accept the American scheme, but it has not yet been decided whether the Austrians will include it in their proposal or whether Mr. White will present it in the form of an amendment.

LONDON TIMES—NEW YORK TIMES.
Special Cable. Copyright, 1906.

ALGECIRAS, March 22.—The new Austrian proposal which is to take the place of the discarded Casablanca project is still in petto, but we may presume that it is in an advanced state of preparation, for early this morning it was considered probable that it would be submitted to the conference this afternoon.

Rumor has it that two separate proposals are in contemplation, one being an improved version of the Casablanca project extended so as to include a compromise in regard to the question of the State Bank, and the other a project in which the principle of internationalization would assume a new and very complicated form not likely to be accepted by the powers chiefly concerned.

Thus it is quite possible that the delay in holding the meeting at which the new departure is to be taken may proceed from hesitation concerning the comparative merits of the two proposals. In any case, the meeting could not have been conveniently held to-day, as the delegate of one of the powers mainly interested is suffering from slight indisposition.

If no new complications arise the meeting will be held on Saturday and will take the form, not of a plenary sitting, but of a sitting of the General Committee, in which proposals can be put forward without a decision being taken.

PARIS, Friday, March 23.—The suggestion of mixed police at all ports, including Casablanca, in Morocco, emanated from President Roosevelt, according to the Temps's Algeciras correspondent, who says:

"Instead of giving to France the sole control of a certain number of ports and to Spain like control of an equal number of ports, the appointment of an equal number of French and Spanish officers at each port is suggested. Rivalry or the acquisition of special spheres of influence, it is urged, would thus be avoided.

"The suggestion is President Roosevelt's. He considers that such a combination is most conformable to the principles laid down by the conference.

"The intention of this proposed solution may be excellent, but it is not practical, and is full of danger."

SPY ARRESTED IN GERMANY.

Supposed to be French—Offered a Big Bribe to a Soldier.

COLOGNE, March 22.—The Volks Zeitung says that a stranger was arrested to-day at Essen after offering a soldier several thousand marks if he obtained a plan of the mobilization in the Essen district.

The military authorities, it is added, regard the prisoner as a French spy.

CRUISER'S TRIAL IN DOUBT.

New Propeller Blades of the Charleston Not Satisfactory.

ROCKLAND, Me., March 22.—Unless careful figuring of horse power statistics gives unlooked-for results, the restandardization trial of the cruiser Charleston, held to-day over the Owl's Head course with the ship equipped with enlarged propellers, was not regarded as a success by members of the Naval Trial Board.

Rear Admiral Charles H. Stockton, Chairman of the board, expressed the opinion at the conclusion of the trial that the propellers used by the Charleston on her acceptance trial a year ago were superior to those used to-day. The present propellers have a greater diameter and a larger blade area, and with them the Charleston made a maximum speed of 21.7 knots an hour in sixteen runs over the course, compared with a fraction over 22 knots attained on the trial last year.

At the end of last year's trial the Charleston was accepted from her builders, the Newport News Shipbuilding and Dry Dock Company, but the data obtained showed that more than the indicated horse power was necessary to make the speed. It was because of this fact that the Navy Department decided to substitute the new propellers.

SYDNEY PAGET FINED $125

By the Bachelors' Club of London for Getting Married—Bride an Actress.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, March 22.—The dispatch from New York, announcing the arrival of Sidney Paget with his wife probably will cause great astonishment to the members of his family and their friends when they hear of it to-morrow.

When inquiry was made by telephone at his father's house to-night it was said there that no word of Sydney's marriage had been heard there. It was also said that Sydney was supposed to be in Ireland, and that a letter dated in Ireland had come from him within a few days.

Mr. Paget, Sydney's father, had retired when inquiry was made at his house.

No one at the clubs of which Sydney is a member had heard of his marriage. At the Bachelors' Club, a member said:

"We shall look into the matter, for, if he is married, he must pay the marriage fine of £25 or leave the club."

Mrs. Sydney Paget, who, with Mr. Paget, arrived in New York from Europe on Wednesday and took apartments at the Waldorf-Astoria, was formerly Miss Marie Miller, at one time an actress. This fact was learned yesterday, but not from the bridal couple. Remaining in their apartments on the ninth floor of the Waldorf-Astoria, Mr. and Mrs. Paget declined to see callers.

For many years Mr. Paget and Miss Miller had been close friends. But although Mr. Paget and Miss Miller were often seen together their marriage came as a surprise to friends of both. Miss Miller's carrer on the stage was brief.

Sydney Paget, though known in New York chiefly for his ownership of horses, is the grandson of the first Marquis of Anglesey. He served in the war in South Africa. One of his brothers, Almeric, married Pauline Whitney, a daughter of the late William C. Whitney, and another, Arthur, married Mary Stevens, daughter of Mrs. Paran Stevens. Mr. Paget was closely allied with the Whitney racing ventures. Now he is associated with E. R. Thomas.

AUSTRIA ANNOYED BY US.

New Envoy Accepted, but Disregarding of Precedent Is Resented.

VIENNA, March 22.—Secretary Rives of the American Embassy to-day informed the Foreign Office that Bellamy Storer, the retiring American Ambassador, had ceased his connection with the embassy on March 19. Mr. Rives requested the Austro-Hungarian Government to agree immediately to the appointment of Charles S. Francis.

This the Foreign Office declares is a most unusual proceeding. According to European diplomatic traditions, Mr. Storer remains Ambassador until the presentation of his letters of recall either by himself or his successor, and until this is done this Government must regard Mr. Storer as Ambassador.

Some surprise is expressed here that the Austro-Hungarian Government was not previously informed of the facts in the case, but it is thought that the Government of the United States must have good reasons for acting as it did. The officials regret that the United States did not follow the usual diplomatic precedent, especially as Mr. Storer's recall does not interest Austria-Hungary, and because Mr. Francis will be as welcome to official Austria as the previous American representative.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 22.—The Senate in executive session to-day confirmed the nomination of Charles S. Francis of New York as Ambassador to Austria-Hungary.

No surprise is felt here that the Austrian Government should be displeased with the brusque manner in which Ambassador Francis's appointment was made known to it. None of the examples given under President Roosevelt of the new diplomacy has been more striking.

To inquire whether a proposed Ambassador will be acceptable to the head of the Government to whom he is to be accredited is part of the established courtesy of diplomacy, but European countries has grown used in late years to violations of the usual procedure by this Government, and the announcement from Vienna, received by the Washington Government to-day, that Mr. Francis would be acceptable to the Austrian Court was expected here. It is recognized abroad that President Roosevelt does not do things in the way that other heads of Governments do them, and actions which would arouse protests if committed by other rulers do not cause a ripple when they proceed from Washington.

SWAP SISTERS FOR WIVES.

Brother of One Proposes the Trade and Double Wedding Follows.

Max Bookbinder and his sister Annie of 944 Central Avenue, Peekskill, and Harry Elwich and his sister Sarah of 10 William Street, Ossining, have been lifelong friends, so it did not create any great commotion when a fortnight ago Bookbinder said to Elwish: "You marry my sister and I'll marry yours."

The young women were willing, and last night the double wedding was performed in New Clinton Hall, Clinton Street, by Rabbi Boskowitz of the First Congregation of Peekskill, who came down the river with the brides and bridegrooms-elect, in the presence of about 200 friends. A big feast and merrymaking followed.

CAT CAUSES PARK MISHAPS.

Two Riders Thrown When White Tabby Appears—Who Owns Her?

Central Park has a mystery. It is a cat—snow-white—whose ownership isn't known and whose appearance, the Park Police say, always presages action, and sometimes accident.

The cat appeared on the bridle path at Seventy-fourth Street yesterday afternoon. Stopping in the middle of the road, it settled upon its haunches and cast a wicked eye at a horse ridden by Dr. Richard H. Derby of 9 West Seventy-fifth Street. Dr. Derby's mount balked and, plunging forward, threw his rider and galloped off.

That wasn't all. Mounted Policeman Dowling saw Dr. Derby's horse run and, applying spurs, gave chase. His horse stumbled, threw its rider, and then fell on him. Then Dowling's horse started in the wake of Dr. Derby's. Mounted Policeman Devlin then took a hand, captured Dowling's horse, and returned it to his fellow-policeman. Then he raced for Dr. Derby's steed and captured that also at Sixty-fifth Street. Dr. Derby wasn't hurt. Dowling sprained his right wrist. The cat disappeared.

CANNON GIVES A PLEDGE TO ADMIT OKLAHOMA

On That Basis He Wins the Fight on Senate Amendments.

41 REPUBLICANS DESERT

Speaker's Rule Bitterly Assailed in His Own Party—Statehood for Oklahoma Seems Sure Now.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 22.—By a majority of only 19 votes Speaker Cannon gained one step to-day in his fight for the arbitrary joinder of Arizona and New Mexico before their admission, with Oklahoma, as States. Forty-one members of his party voted against him, and he was saved from defeat only by the support of ten Kansas and Missouri Republicans who chose to follow the will of the Speaker rather than that of their constituents.

The most strenuous efforts have been put forth by the Speaker to hold these men in line. With their districts calling to them to vote for the admission of Oklahoma they have been practically forced to do the Speaker's will. But they have obtained from him a promise that Oklahoma shall be admitted at this session.

A special rule was jammed through this morning disagreeing with the Senate amendments to the Hamilton bill, and sending it to conference. Some notion of how it will fare in the conference may be gathered from what happened in the Senate this afternoon when the formal word came from the House asking for the conference. The regular procedure would be to appoint the Chairman of the Senate Committee on Territories as the head of the Senate conferees. But that would put Senator Beveridge in that place. Beveridge is in favor of the Hamilton bill, and was outvoted by the Senate when it struck out Arizona and New Mexico.

When the matter came up to-day Senator Foraker objected to naming Beveridge to head the Senate conferees. He said such a course would be to select a man who was not in accord with the views of the majority of the Senate, and the matter went over until to-morrow. The friends of Arizona in the Senate believe that the House conferees go into the conference already handicapped, and that they will be able to win out for the bill as amended, admitting only Oklahoma.

Immediately upon reporting the rule, Mr. Dalzell, from the Rules Committee, moved the previous question, which was ordered by a vote of 171 to 140. That gave twenty minutes for debate to each side. John Sharp Williams, leader of the Democrats, controlled the time of the opponents of the bill, but gave most of it to the Republican insurgents. Humphrey of Washington led off.

"It is perfectly apparent," he said, "that the object of this proceeding is to coerce the minority of this side to vote against their judgment. It is to compel us to commit a crime against Arizona in order to do justice to Oklahoma. The only argument of the majority is 'You are an insurgent.' That commands neither my respect nor my fear. The people are looking on in amazement and disgust."

Mr. Foster of Vermont was the only organization man who attempted to justify what was being done.

Head Insurgent Babcock made a little speech in which he predicted that the bill would never be heard from again. Then Mr. Williams yielded five minutes to J. Adam Bede. He said:

"If we are all in favor of admitting Oklahoma—and you say it is one of the Administration measures—you have the opportunity to do it in ten minutes. Why don't you get busy and admit Oklahoma, and not hitch it up with some other proposition that is not an Administration question? [Loud applause.] When I think of the proposition of hitching up Arizona and New Mexico, I am reminded of the two Mormon boys who went to school and gave their names the same. The teacher said: 'You are brothers, are you?'

"They said, 'Yes,' and gave their ages the same.

"'Twins, are you?' asked the teacher.

"'Yes,' said the boys, 'on our father's side.' [Laughter.]

"So Arizona and New Mexico are twins on the father's side. They both came from Mexico, but they had different mothers, and they learned different things at different times. It is an insult to both of them to hitch them up together.

"Now, you say we are against the Administration. I am with the Administration on everything but this bill, and the wife-beating bill. [Laughter.] In his message a year ago the President gave eight lines to advocating the whipping-post for wife-beaters. This year he gave us fifteen lines in favor of this bill. Now, which is the Administration measure? I'll tell you. Neither is. Both these recommendations were made by the President upon the advice and at the request of other persons.

"We hear a lot of criticism of the Senate. I want to go on record as saying that never in the history of the United States have we had so able a Senate as we have to-day. We have heard a great deal about how the Senate once held up the whole country, but we have in this House a strong man who is holding up 100,000 square miles all alone." [Laughter and applause.]

Mr. Dalzell gave Mr. Bede a chance to demonstrate exactly what the force was that was driving the rule through.

"Do you deny that if the Speaker would give his consent we could get unanimous consent?" demanded Bede. Dalzell's attempt to reply was lost in the confusion of applause.

The roll call showed 175 for the rule and 156 against it. As the Speaker began to announce the result Mr. Williams started down the aisle from his seat, shouting, "Mr. Speaker!" At last the Speaker recognized him, and Mr. Williams moved to instruct the conferrees to agree to the Senate amendment cutting Arizona and New Mexico out of the bill. But Mr. Dalzell made the point that the rule required the immediate announcement of the conferrees and that the motion came too late. The Speaker held that the conferrees had been announced, and so the point of order was sustained. Mr. Williams appealed, but the Chair was sustained. The conferrees are Hamilton, Chairman of the House Committee on Territories, and Brick and Moon of Tennessee, members of the committee.

THE HUNTINGTONS DIVORCED.

Mrs. Huntington Sails for Japan After Court Proceedings.

Special to The New York Times.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 22.—It took scarcely seven minutes this morning for the court to divorce Mrs. Mary A. Huntington from Henry E. Huntington, who had been her husband for thirty-three years.

When asked if she had in any way contributed to their estrangement, Mrs. Huntington replied: "I don't think I ever gave him any reason for deserting me—not to my knowledge, certainly."

For six years Huntington has been living in Los Angeles, whither he went after leaving her. Edward H. Prentice, brother of Mrs. Huntington, served as the necessary corroborative witness.

The matter of dispocition of $40,000,000 which had accumulated from the Collis P. Huntington estate was scarcely mentioned. Mrs. Huntington was asked if there was any community property and answered that there was none. It is understood that her ex-husband has made liberal provision for her.

At noon Mrs. Huntington sailed with her daughter Marion on the Korea for Japan. She was visited by Mrs. Eleanor Martin and several other society women and her stateroom was filled with flowers.

SWEPT OUT $31,983.

Porter's Refuse Contained a Doctor's Fortune—Policeman Found It.

HATTIESBURG, Miss., March 22.—The negro porter in the Connor Brothers' shoe store was about to pitch the sweepings of the store into the rear alley to-day, when Policeman Norwood reached down into the pile of rubbish and picked up an envelope, from which he drew greenbacks, checks, and negotiable papers aggregating $31,983.

The money and papers were the property of Dr. J. A. B. Sikes of Iron City, Ga., who spent the early part of the week here and then traveled on to New Orleans before he discovered that his fortune, carried in an envelope, was missing.

LIVELY FIREWORKS BLAZE.

Storehouse in Richmond Burns, Setting Off Many Rockets.

The storehouse of the Consolidated Fireworks Company on Richmond Avenue, Graniteville, was destroyed last night in the most spectacular fire Richmond Borough has had. The storehouse was a one-story frame building 400 feet long. It contained a large amount of skyrockets and other fireworks which the company had begun to manufacture for the coming season.

The firemen and police devoted themselves to the task of keeping the curious out of range of the flying balls of colored fire.

7-TON PUMP IN EVIDENCE.

Produced in His Office Before Examiner in a Patent Case.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 22.—The largest exhibit ever shown in a patent case was taken into the Patent Office to-day in a case involving claims for improvements in a centrifugal pump. The claim was in charge of F. W. Barnaclo, a New York patent attorney, who had asked the Examiner to allow him to show the mechanism by means of drawings and photographs. The Examiner refused, and appeal was taken to the Commissioner of Patents, who sustained the Examiner's decision.

Then the attorney stood on his right and took the actual machine into the Patent Office. It weighed seven tons and required twenty men to roll it up the Ninth Street steps and into the Examiner's office. As there is $500,000 involved in the claim in dispute, Mr. Barnaclo said he felt that he was obliged to comply with the ruling of the Commissioner, no matter how great the cost or inconvenience. He had tried to get the Commissioner to send the Examiner to the works at Trenton, N. J., to see the pump there, but that also was refused.

MANY KILLED IN A MINE.

Ten Are Known to be Dead and from 25 to 75 Are Missing.

FAIRMONT, West Va., March 22.—Ten men are known to be dead, twenty-five are injured, and from twenty-five to seventy-five are missing and believed to be dead as the result of an explosion of gas in the shaft of the Century Coal Company, at Century, a small mining town fifty miles south of Fairmont. The explosion occurred at 4:30 o'clock this afternoon, but owing to the telephone wires being damaged by the high winds of to-day, details are lacking, and the names of the victims, six of whom are known to be foreigners, had not been obtained at a late hour to-night.

The Century Mine, which is owned by Shaw Brothers of Baltimore, is one of the largest independent operations in Northern West Virginia. Over 250 men are employed daily in the shaft, and had the explosion been an hour earlier the loss of life would have been appalling. As it was, there were but few in the shaft, most of the miners having quit for the day.

The giant fan which furnishes air for the shaft was partially wrecked by the force of the explosion, but was repaired immediately, and within an hour after the accident Supt. James Ward had a relief gang in the mine. The first trip out brought ten men—five dead and five badly burned.

A second expedition immediately went down and explored the main heading. Four more bodies were found there. Fourteen sub-headings at midnight were yet unexplored.

Relief trains bearing physicians were hurried from Phillipi and Buckhannon, and the doctors took care of the wounded in the office building, which was transformed into a temporary hospital.

CONEY'S SUBWAY APPROVED.

Rapid Transit Board Formally Acts on the Plan.

The Rapid Transit Commission yesterday formally approved the proposal to build a subway to Coney Island as an extension of the Fort Hamilton route.

The extension will run from Atlantic and Flatbush Avenues in Brooklyn down Fourth Avenue to Fortieth Street, to New Utrecht Avenue, to Eighty-sixth Street, and then, at a point between Twenty-third and Twenty-fourth Avenues it will come to the surface and run as an elevated road to Coney Island.

Nothing quite equal to the train service offered by the New York Central Lines. 20 trains a day to Buffalo and Niagara Falls, 12 to Chicago, 6 to St. Louis, 5 to Cincinnati.—Adv.

JUSTICE DEUEL QUITS BAR ASSOCIATION

His Resignation Accepted at Meeting March 14.

CHARGES COME UP TO-DAY

Appellate Division of the Supreme Court Will Hear Judge's Reply to Accusations.

It was authoritatively stated last night that Justice Joseph H. Deuel had resigned from the Bar Association on March 14 and that his resignation had been accepted. Charges against Justice Deuel are pending before the association.

There was a rumor that when the charges were to be brought against Deuel he asked for an adjournment. This, it is reported, was refused. It is said he immediately presented his resignation. That it was accepted is shown by a statement of Einar Chrystie, attorney of the Grievance Committee, who said last night:

"Justice Deuel presented his resignation to the committee of the Bar Association, from that body, on March 14, and it was accepted."

When asked whether this action would have any bearing on the charges to which he is to make reply to-day before the Appellate Division, Mr. Chrystie said:

"That has no bearing on the case at all. We are only concerned with his connection with the Bar Association."

Justice Deuel became a member of the Bar Association of New York in 1884. An effort was made to see him at his home, 125 West Eightieth Street, last night. An elderly woman said to a reporter:

"You can't find him to-night, and he has nothing to say to-night to any one."

Justice Deuel did not preside in Special Sessions yesterday, although scheduled to do so this whole month. He was in the building, however, and had several talks with his colleagues. He would not say anything for publication.

The charges against Justice Deuel by District Attorney Jerome, Edward M. Shepard, and James W. Osborne, which will be heard to-day grow out of the trial of the criminal libel suit brought by Deuel against Editor Norman Hapgood of Collier's Weekly, which suit resulted in the acquittal of the defendant by the jury.

GERMAN MINERS MAY STRIKE.

Now Working Overtime as a Result of the Situation in France.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, March 22.—It is not unlikely that the French miners' strike will extend to Germany. The miners in the Ruhr district are working overtime, and the labor newspapers declare that it is because of the strike in France. They urge the miners not to aid the operators to take advantage of the situation in France.

Meetings will be held on Sunday to determine the attitude of the German miners.

LENS, March 22.—Reports from various mining centres show that the strike is now general.

Some disorder has occurred, and a number of the companies' wagons have been smashed.

Twelve hundred additional troops have arrived here and the whole district is now occupied by the military forces.

VOTED ALL BY HIMSELF.

Hardwick Opposed Salary for Mrs. Roosevelt's Social Secretary.

WASHINGTON, March 22.—When that section of the Legislative Appropriation bill appropriating for the executive offices and salary of the President was reached in debate in the House to-day Mr. Hardwick (Ga.) inquired which paragraph provided for the salary of the social secretary for the wife of the President.

Mr. Littauer replied that he did not know that any such salary was provided. It had always been the custom of the Appropriations Committee to take as law the suggestion from the White House regarding the number and salary of clerks required, and nothing was known as to what any of these clerks did.

Mr. Hardwick stated he wished to make a point of order against the provision if he could distinguish it. Not being able to do so, he offered an amendment providing that no part of the appropriation should be used to pay the salary to a person to perform the duties of social secretary to the wife of the President or any service of that nature. When the motion was put Mr. Hardwick seemed to be the only one voting in favor of his proposition.

$25,000,000 PAPER TRUST.

New York, Pennsylvania, and Ohio Plants to Merge.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURG, March 22.—All the paper mills in Northern Pennsylvania, Eastern Ohio, and New York are to be merged under the management of the Straw Pulp and Paper Manufacturing Company of New York.

With this end in view the capital stock of the Eastern company has been increased to $25,000,000, and this will be used in taking up the stock of the independent concerns.

Through the Corporation Trust and Development Company of this city the Twin City Paper Mills at Baltimore, Ohio, were taken over to-day. The company has a large plant in New York making paper from straw. The decrease in the supply of timber has forced the adoption of the new material for making paper. All the plants taken over by the company are to be equipped for this process.

Inspectors for the company have been in this section for two weeks looking over the plants to be taken over.

Plan to Muzzle the Dogfish.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 22.—The Government, having more or less successfully subdued and civilized the pocket gopher and the boll weevil, may next be called upon to extend its sway to the dogfish. Representative Green of Massachusetts is father of the project. He introduced in the House to-day a bill "to reduce the ravages of the dogfish and to create a market for such fish." According to the terms of the bill, the United States Fish Commission is to be voted $25,000, which sum is to be expended in an effort "to determine the most effective method of reducing the number of dogfish and of capturing them in wholesale quantities."

$6,000 FOR AN ORCHID.

Record Price Paid for a Prize Specimen at a London Auction.

LONDON, March 22.—A record price, $6,000, was paid this afternoon at a local auction room for a prize orchid from the collection of H. T. Pitt.

CHOATE MIGHT NOT ACCEPT.

Asks What's the Matter with Higgins for Governor Again.

Joseph H. Choate was asked yesterday afternoon at his office, 60 Wall Street, if he would accept the Republican nomination for Governor of New York should it be tendered him. He smiled and replied:

"Well, perhaps I would, and perhaps I would not—very probably I would not."

Mr. Choate then asked:

"What's the matter with our present Governor; isn't he all right?"

"Do you believe in a second term for Governor?"

"Well," he replied, "isn't a dollar bill always good for its face value until proved worthless?"

NEW ROCKEFELLER ESTATE.

John D. Purchases a Place at Pasadena for About $300,000.

Special to The New York Times.

PASADENA, Cal., March 22.—John D. Rockefeller has purchased the Reed estate in this city, considered to be one of the finest residences in the State, and it is said he will spend at least two months of each year in California. The deal involved nearly $300,000.

This property had been in litigation along with other holdings of the late Mrs. Simon G. Reed. The heirs who are trying to break Mrs. Reed's will contend that the will is invalid on account of a certain clause which bequeathed two-thirds of her fortune to found the Reed Institute in Portland, their contention being that the California law forbids such bequests.

It was in the Reed house that Helen Hunt Jackson wrote "Ramona."

WANTS MORE ON MT. DAJO.

Senator Culberson Interested in Messages from Roosevelt to Wood.

WASHINGTON, March 22.—In the Senate to-day Mr. Culberson presented and asked for the immediate consideration of a resolution directing the Secretary of War to send to the Senate full copies of any communications that may have passed between officials of the United State in this country and in the Philippines with reference to the Mount Dajo battle, but Mr. Lodge objected to present consideration, and the resolution went over until to-morrow.

In presenting the resolution, Mr. Culberson said that the response received to the first inquiry of the Senate was manifestly incomplete. He had noticed, he said, that latterly Gen. Wood had been reposted in the public press as having said that no women or children were killed in the Dajo crater. This information he considered important, as he did also that as to whether the President had sent other communications to the Philippines on this subject than those sent to the Senate.

SNOWBOUND FOR 12 DAYS.

Passengers Ill on Train at Summit of Cumbres Pass.

DURANGO, Col., March 22.—After being snowbound for twelve days on the lofty summit of Cumbres Pass, at the crest of the San Juan Range, fifty miles from the nearest town, a Denver & Rio Grande train containing fifty passengers to-day arrived in Alamosa in the San Luis Valley.

The train left Durango on March 10 and became stalled that night. Snow continued falling day after day until it lay on the level higher than the smokestack of the locomotive. Railroad employes carried provisions to the imprisoned passengers by climbing the mountain on snowshoes, and the passengers were made as comfortable as possible, but owing to the high altitude several passengers became sick.

A rotary snow plow penetrated to the train last night, and to-day the train ran to Alamosa.

LEGAL TO ROLL A CIGARETTE.

But Factory-Made Ones May Not Be Sold. Nebraska Court Says.

LINCOLN, Neb., March 22.—The Nebraska Supreme Court to-day gave a decision on Nebraska's anti-cigarette law, which was tested in the courts by a young man arrested on the charge of rolling a cigarette.

The effect of the decision is to sustain the law in general, making the sale and manufacture of cigarettes in this State illegal, but the rolling of cigarettes by individuals for their own use is not called "manufacturing."

A few fines have been paid and sentences served under that part of the law which is now declared unconstitutional.

CITY GETS CATSKILL WATER.

Fowler Bill Passes and Clears Away All Opposition.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 22.—An understanding between New York and Ulster County relating to water supply was finally reached to-day, when the Fowler Omnibus Compromise Water bill passed the Assembly.

By the terms of the bill New York obtains privileges for which it has been contending for many months, and Ulster gets certain rights recognized by New York.

This bill was practically the last legislation necessary to clear the path for New York's greater water supply from the Catskills.

BEALL'S AUTO KILLS A BOY.

Chauffeur of Senator Knox's Former Partner Attacked by Crowd.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURG, March 22.—Danny Breen, aged 11 years, was this evening run down and instantly killed by the auto of James H. Beall, former law partner of Senator Knox. The chauffeur, William Devine, was almost mobbed by a crowd of angry passersby, and is in the lockup, the authorities refusing to admit him to bail.

The child, who lived at 1,119 Poplar Alley, was on his way to the store for his mother, who lay sick at home. On reaching the corner of Sixth Avenue and Grant Street he hesitated just as the heavy auto of Mr. Beall came rushing along. Devine apparently did not see the child, and the machine struck him with full force, knocking him against the curb and crushing his skull.

FIRST FIGHT IN SENATE ON INSURANCE REFORM

Brackett Assails Malby, Who Appeals for Delay.

ALSO CRITICISES JEROME

Bill Finally Sent to Committee for Amendment and Advanced for Third Reading.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 22.—That there will be a prolonged fight on the floor of the Senate when the Armstrong Committee's Insurance bills come up for final passage became apparent to-day when the first skirmish in the insurance battle took place. Senator Malby, with Senator Raines, the leader in the Senate, served notice that he would not feel constrained to consider the actions of the Armstrong Committee in the light of inspiration, and that he would oppose any hasty action on the bills.

Mr. Malby clearly indicated that he believed some of the bills could be improved by amendments, and although he did not particularize, it is understood that he referred to the measure limiting the amount of business and placing restrictions on the expenses of companies.

Senator Tully started the ball rolling when he presented, on behalf of the committee, one of the revised bills which calls for the election on Nov. 15 next of new boards of Directors or Trustees of all mutual companies. The original bill nullified all proxies given prior to July 1, but as amended it provides that the proxies must be obtained after Sept. 15, and it provides, too, that the boards shall be divided into classes.

In presenting the amendments, Senator Tully asked that the bill be advanced to third reading. He said that the Mutual Life would hold its next annual meeting on April 11, and that it was therefore necessary that this bill, affecting the election of the Trustees of mutual companies, should be a law before that date.

The motion to amend and advance to third reading brought Mr. Malby to his feet.

"I desire to state right here," he said, "that I shall insist upon the most careful consideration of these insurance bills and I shall object to the hasty action proposed. I don't want to be understood as opposing this legislation and must not be looked on in the light of an obstructionist, but the fact is that the public mind is very much inflamed at present over the insurance situation and there is grave danger that this important legislation, if dictated by public clamor at such a time, will militate against orderly and deliberate judgment on these bills.

"In the cry for vengeance on these companies which has gone up the fact seems to have been overlooked that every blow struck at one of the companies is likewise a blow to the policy holder."

This roused Senator Brackett, who launched forth into a fiery speech.

"This is the time for drastic action," he announced. "We can't hit these Directors too hard or get them out too quickly. Let us stop this rot about conservatism. Radicalism of the most pronounced stripe is what we want now, and the time is ripe to strike, and strike hard. In my opinion, this bill is not radical enough. It ought to legislate the whole brood out of office at once and provide, further, that not one of the old gang could ever hold office again."

"Would you have us pass legislation which says that any particular class of citizens shall not hold office?" asked Senator McCarren.

"I say that a bill can be passed providing that not one of these Directors whose affirmative wrongdoing or negligence has been responsible for these evils shall ever hold office again," was the reply. "I know what the Senator has in mind in his anxiety to protect from legislation these people, and I'll tell it to the Senate if he won't. It is that men who do not own a corporation, who have done wrong to that corporation should not be put out; that they should be protected, and the men who really own the corporation, the policy holders, should be kept out of their rights.

"We seem to be very careful of the interests and rights of some of the men who may be in jail yet, in spite of the conservatism of the Senator and in spite of the attitude of the District Attorney of New York, who, standing and thinking, or sitting and sleeping, may hold that no harm has been done by these Trustees, and who also holds himself aloof from public clamor.

"If the policy holders want to commit the grievous mistake of taking what belongs to them and running it themselves, for God's sake let them do it. They've got the right to administer their own property as they see fit, and if they should make mistakes they will not be a circumstance to the wrongs inflicted on them by the Trustees who forgot their trust, and the Directors who didn't direct."

Senator Raines interrupted to say that this did not seem to him to be the time to debate the provisions of the bill, and that the motion to recommit should first be disposed of, as one single objection would keep the bill from being advanced on the calendar.

"I don't object to advancing this particular bill," said Malby, "but I do object to the rush order that seems to have been issued. The insurance committee was appointed to get certain information for this body, and when that information is before us I will act upon it as I think proper. These bills do not come under the order of Holy Writ. Three weeks ago they were said to be perfect and yet I understand there are meetings progressing in New York where amendments are being talked about. I won't be swerved from my course by any Russian whips or by hot irons of denunciation. There is a possibility that even I may be able to inject a grain of added sense into the bills. I have no apologies to offer for my present attitude nor for my attitude at any previous time on insurance legislation."

"There's the pity of it," said Brackett, closing the debate.

The motion prevailed to send the bill to the committee for amendment, and there being no objection it also went on to the third reading calendar.

MARCH 1906

SAYS HAMILTON ALONE KNEW ABOUT PAYMENTS

Fowler Committee Absolves Auditors from Blame.

RECEIPTS GAVE NO CLUE

No One Would Have Been Shielded, Declares Mr. Mackay, Had Improper Outlays Been Shown.

The Fowler Investigating Committee of New York Life Trustees addressed a letter to Andrew Hamilton yesterday, reviewing its efforts to look into the legislative expenses of the company. The letter does not make any new proposal to Hamilton, but recites conditions as the committee understands them and defends the Auditing Committee of the New York Life for seemingly not knowing what were the purposes of the Hamilton expenditures.

In its letter the committee gives the correspondence that passed between it and its agents in Paris relative to its effort to bring Hamilton back, and the letter it sent to Hamilton in Albany on his return, notifying him of its willingness that he should appear before it. These communications contain no new information. From this point the letter sent yesterday continues:

"The main question before the committee as to your matters was what had you done with the company's moneys, amounting to about $1,300,000, which in one way or another had come into your hands during the past ten years. You alone could tell as to the great bulk of them. Something over $100,000 appears from your vouchers to have been paid to you for legal services. Your receipts for the $600,000 or thereabouts received for what has been called your legislative bureau were simply receipts in the ordinary form and threw no light on what you had done with the money.

"Even if every one of these receipts had been examined by the Auditing Committee from time to time they disclosed nothing as to the particular uses to which you put the money or the persons to whom you paid it. They simply show that sums of money from time to time were being paid to one who was a lawyer retained and engaged in the legal service of the company.

No Record of Secret Service Work.

"They did not show, nor did any records or books of the company, that there was a legislative or secret service bureau, or that you were engaged in any such work. You have, moreover, failed to observe that out of the $1,300,000, over $500,000 is not claimed to have been received by you in connection with your legislative work.

"The vouchers you signed for the various sums aggregating $235,000, which Mr. McCall repaid because you did not, read that you were to account for them. At that time you were acting in a legal capacity for the company in connection with its real estate purchases and mortgage loans. There was no reason for any one of the Auditing Company to suspect that you would not account in accordance with the terms of the vouchers, though you have not done so.

"Then there is the sum of $75,000 you used out of the check given you in June, 1904, with which to pay the company's State tax, and which you deposited to your own credit in your bank and checked against. That use by you of this sum never came before any auditing or other committee. The same is true of the $90,386.47 you received in 1905 out of the company's credit with the State for the overpayment of its franchise tax in previous years.

Does Not Mention Agreement.

"The resolution of the Finance Committee to which you refer does not mention the agreement under which you claim that sum. It simply authorized the President to execute 'assignments of part or parts of the tax credit awarded to the company against the State of New York in payment of the expenses attending such award or for cash payments upon any transfer to a purchaser of an interest therein.' You can read the condemnation of that whole transaction in the report of the Armstrong Committee, which is much more sweeping than anything that was said by this committee in its report of Feb. 7, 1906.

"The same is true with respect to the sums remitted to you from Paris: Sept. 14, 1900, $50,000; Oct. 4, 1900, $20,000; Nov. 27, 1902, $25,000; April 1, 1903, $25,000, and Nov. 19, 1903, $14,500, a total of $134,500.

"The directions to make these payments to you and your receipts for them were never before any auditing or other committee, and there were no entries on the books here of any kind concerning them. Until this committee directed whatever papers there were pertaining to these payments to be sent here, on information that payments had been made from Paris, they had laid in the Paris office. They disclosed nothing but the fact of payment to you, and refer in no way to the purpose or purposes for which the money was directed to be remitted. You alone can furnish the information showing what was done with these sums.

Would Have Shielded No One.

"These facts make clear the reason why the committee desired from you the information you could furnish as to the use and disposition of these large sums of money. Had that information disclosed that any of these sums had been used by you for improper purposes there would have been no shielding by this committee of any officer or Trustee who had approved such payments.

"Referring to your letter you say that the committee should by this time be satisfied that the statements contained in its report of February 7, 1906, 'are seriously wrong.' That report is a plain statement of facts, which is not impeached in any particular by anything you have said, and which is corroborated by the report of the Armstrong Committee.

"Your statement that any document in the company's official files which has been brought to the attention of the committee, or any official action spread upon the records of the proceedings of this committee, or any correspondence to which it has had access, has been ignored by it to give a false color to any of your transactions or to make unwarranted accusations against you, is absolutely without the slightest foundation.

"The committee devoted fully seven weeks to consideration of your affairs, called for every paper and document in the files of the company or anywhere else that could possibly in any way bear upon them; sought for information from every quarter where there was likely to be any, including yourself, and its report was the result of a careful, conservative study of all the information before the committee, and expressed and still expresses the deliberate judgment of every member of the committee.

"You need have no fear of any suppression of documents because a careful minute has been made in the records of the committee of every paper and document which was furnished to it before its return to the company's files. I am, yours truly,

CLARENCE H. MACKAY,
"Acting Chairman."

Talk of Disbarring Hamilton.

The anger of some members of the Fowler Committee against Hamilton was indicated yesterday by a semi-official statement that steps were being considered for Hamilton's disbarment in connection with the suits against him. Disbarment proceedings, however, would have to be undertaken before the Bar Association or through the District Attorney's office.

It was said that the grounds upon which Hamilton's disbarment might be sought were, first, that he had improperly disbursed large amounts of money for legislation while acting as counsel for the New York Life, and, second, that as counsel for the company, and hence for all the trustees and policy holders, Hamilton led John A. McCall into the expenditure of large sums of money improperly, and in so doing had violated his trust to his clients.

Various comments were made yesterday regarding the split which has developed by reason of the Hamilton episode in the Fowler Committee. Some members of the committee said there had been no split. Another member said that he did not know whether he would call it a split or a "healthy difference of opinion." He rather inclined to the latter theory, adding, "Now, of course we are quite agreed as to present work. We are reviewing the question of agency expenses."

Andrew Hamilton in Albany last night declined to discuss the reply of the Fowler Committee.

McCALL'S LAST LETTER.

Defines Hamilton's Position — There Was to be No Accounting.

President Alexander E. Orr of the New York Life gave out yesterday the letter which John A. McCall on his death bed addressed to him as a final explanation of the relations of Andrew Hamilton to the New York Life. The letter was written after McCall had received the last rites of the Church and voices the confidence which Mr. McCall always expressed in Hamilton and his work.

This is the letter:

"The Laurel House,
"Lakewood, N. J., Feb. 16, 1906.

"Alexander E. Orr, Esq., President New York Life Insurance Company:

"My Dear Mr. Orr: I am conscious that I have but a slight chance to recover, and I am desirous that you and the company officials through you shall have no doubt of the nature and character of the employment of Andrew Hamilton, if I am not here to be heard when the time arrives to have it made known.

"He was employed by me in 1895 on behalf of the company to attend especially to matters of taxation and legislation in the United States and other countries affecting the company's interests.

"He refused to accept the duty unless it was made confidential and secret, and that no accounting of moneys advanced to him should be asked of him, or rendered by him, and I assented to that proposition.

"He told me that this condition he would impose as an absolute one, and unless it was accepted he would not undertake the work.

"Whether my action was legal or not it will be left for others to say. I believed it was, and that I was clothed with full power so to act, and that the interests of the company and the policy holders demanded steps of this nature to be taken, but aside from this the main reason for my present writing is, that there may remain no doubt as to what my statement would be if I were here as to the nature and character of Judge Hamilton's retainer and contract. Sincerely yours,

"JOHN A. McCALL."

The total expense for grand opera at the Metropolitan Opera House for the season just ended was $1,177,058.66; the one item for orchestra amounted to $95,083.40 is capable of reproducing most of the music heard at the Opera House, with its rich orchestral effects, its great variety of tonal coloring. In fact, the Orchestrelle brings all orchestral music—operatic, symphonic, popular, dance—into the home. The distinctive feature of the Orchestrelle is its great variety of tone color—its many absolutely different voices.

The Orchestrelle

Its range of prices makes it available for any home. Its infinite musical possibilities make it eminently desirable for every home.

Anyone can play the Orchestrelle.

THE PLAYER ON THE ORCHESTRELLE is like the leader of an Orchestra.

For instance, supposing a music-lover, unskilled in keyboard playing and ignorant of orchestral technicalities, wished to play selections from "Lucia di Lammermoor" or "Parsifal," "Mlle. Modiste" or the "Beautiful Blue Danube" waltzes. The perforated music roll sounds every note, every chord, every run, without thought on the player's part.

Expression, however, is entirely in his hands, yet so plainly marked, that even the novice cannot go astray. Like the orchestra leader he can have the music loud or soft, fast or slow, at will. When the music calls for strings, or woodwind or brass, for flute or oboe, the Orchestrelle player is enabled to sound all these different tonal qualities simply and easily—separately or in any combination.

While the non-musician can play artistically through the simple means provided, the musician will find its resources for individual expression practically inexhaustible.

Only by hearing it can the beauty and variety of tone and the infinite possibilities for pleasure of the Orchestrelle be appreciated. You are, therefore, cordially invited to visit Aeolian Hall for this purpose at any time.

Interesting printed matter, giving more detailed information, will be sent on request.

LAUGH AT LAWSON CHARGE.

"A Plant," Say Officials of New York and Mutual Life.

Officials of the New York and Mutual Life Insurance Companies gave their theory yesterday of the charges that Thomas W. Lawson has made to the Massachusetts Attorney General and to the District Attorney of Suffolk County in that State that policies were being issued in exchange for proxies to the present management.

They declared that the scheme would only be a "plant."

President Peabody of the Mutual, indeed, said that he considered the charges an insult to the intelligence of the managers of the companies, quite aside from the moral aspects of the case. He explained that the general agents of the Mutual Life had sub-agents working for them, any one of whom would be able to rebate a first premium to an applicant in case he entered into an arrangement to furnish the Boston financier with evidence for the Grand Jury.

The process, Mr. Peabody said, would be for the sub-agent to have the prospective policy holder examined, and then to issue to him the policy, which would, however, not become binding on the company until the first premium had actually been received. In so doing a basis would be furnished for any affidavits of the kind that Lawson presented without an apparent misstatement of facts.

The Mutual Life, according to Mr. Peabody, will look up the policies on which the Lawson charges are based. The explanation offered on behalf of the New York Life was substantially the same as that made by President Peabody of the Mutual.

Mr. Peabody said that the management of the Mutual freely conceded the probability of passage of the bills now before the Legislature, canceling all proxies hitherto issued or that may be issued prior to two months before elections, postponing all pending elections in mutual companies until Nov. 15, and decreeing that all existing Trustees shall go out of office on that date.

CHANGING INSURANCE BILLS.

Armstrong Committee Working to Meet Criticisms.

The Armstrong Committee, in its supplementary sessions which are now being held here, has taken up the question of mutualization of stock companies and the question of stock retirement, with the result that changes are being worked out in the bills as proposed by the committee originally which are designed to meet the criticisms passed upon the first draft.

The committee has not yet determined the details of its modified plan, but it is learned that it has reference particularly to the charge that the original scheme was unduly favorable to Thomas F. Ryan, the owner of the majority stock of the Equitable Life. The committee, in the course of its general act amendatory of the insurance law, proposed that in stock companies the stock could be retired with the consent of the policy holders and a majority of the stockholders after an agreement had been reached on the price to be paid.

Objection was made that this would place the entire question of mutualization in the hands of the controlling stock interest, and that in the Equitable particularly the purchase of Mr. Ryan's stock by the society for the $2,500,000 that he paid for it would in effect take this amount from the surplus at a time when the ownership of the surplus was under adjudication in the courts.

McCALL HOME IS MADE OVER.

N. Y. Life's Mortgage on Shadowlawn Canceled on Feb. 8.

A deed was recorded yesterday in the office of the Monmouth County Registrar at Freehold, N. J., from Mary I. McCall, widow of John A. McCall, to Myron H. Oppenheim, a lawyer of this city, for the property at West End, Long Branch, known as Shadowlawn, which was the country seat of Mr. McCall, and which had only been completed by him shortly before his death at a cost of nearly $1,000,000.

The deed is made to Mr. Oppenheim individually, and a nominal compensation is stated. The deed bears date March 13 and conveys fifty-seven acres of choice land.

When Mr. McCall died there was $250,000 against the property of record at Freehold. Of this amount $100,000 was a mortgage to the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, dated March 1, 1905, and a mortgage for $150,000 to the New York Life Insurance Company, dated Dec. 29, 1905.

The last-named mortgage to the New York Life Insurance Company was canceled Feb. 8, 1906. An extension of the $100,000 mortgage to the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company for one year was filed in Freehold this week.

ODELL FULL OF FIGHT.

Confers with Party Leaders to Defeat the Roosevelt Movement.

Chairman Benjamin B. Odell of the Republican State Committee spent several hours yesterday in the Fifth Avenue headquarters going over reapportionment plans with Lemuel E. Quigg. He found time, too, to talk on a plan of campaign to defeat the views of President Roosevelt on the party organization in the State. It is openly declared that "White House interference" will be fought bitterly, and predictions were made yesterday that even Senator Platt would join the opposition to the Roosevelt-Higgins plans.

The reapportionment plans for New York County will be ready for the Legislature shortly after April 1. Republican leaders, in addition to the sub-committee of the County Committee appointed by President Parsons to work out an apportionment scheme, are bending their energies to keep both party organizations intact in every district possible.

SUES N. Y. LIFE FOR $100,000.

Wightman Says He Originated Insurance Club and Alleges Broken Contract

A suit for $100,000 damages, alleging breach of contract, was begun at White Plains yesterday, before Justice Keogh and a jury, in which Richard Wightman, an insurance man of this city, who lives in Mount Vernon, is plaintiff against the New York Life Insurance Company. Wightman was the last witness to testify before the Armstrong Investigating Committee.

In 1903 Wightman says he originated an insurance club scheme and a yearly contract was entered into between him and the company.

In three months' work Wightman says he turned over to the company 375 policies. He says that he made, while his contract was in force, about $8,000 per month.

Wightman says that after four months he was notified by the officials of the company to stop all advertisements respecting his club. This he refused to do. The company then refused to accept any more contracts made by Wightman, which resulted in the suit.

The case will not go to the jury until Monday.

MAYOR HALTS FRANCHISE FOR CONNECTING ROAD

Tells Rapid Transit Board Its Terms Are Guesswork.

CUT TO SUIT PENNSYLVANIA

Cassatt for His Stockholders, I for the City's, the Mayor Says, Warmly—Board Resentful, but Yields.

Vigorously attacking the Rapid Transit Commission's proposed franchise terms for the New York Connecting Railroad, Mayor McClellan, in a speech that also criticized the board members so sharply that some of them expressed their resentment, succeeded yesterday in blocking the further progress of the franchise until the Rapid Transit Board and the Board of Estimate confer on it.

The franchise was held up on the Mayor's motion, after he had stated bluntly that he would veto the measure when it came before him as Mayor unless this action were taken. In accordance with the resolutions that were adopted, the board sent the franchise back to its Committee on Plans and Contracts, which committee was constituted a conference committee to deal with a committee from the Board of Estimate.

Several times in the Mayor's speech before the board yesterday, President Orr and Controller Metz protested at his attitude and at his criticism of the members. The Mayor plainly was angry. His voice was high-pitched, his face flushed, his manner belligerent, and his language severe.

The Mayor went to the board meeting accompanied by Assistant Corporation Counsel Hoyt, who is attached to the Mayor's office; by Harry P. Nichols, head of the Board of Estimate's Bureau of Franchises, and by two of Mr. Nichols's assistants. When he arrived the board was listening to a representative of the North Side Board of Trade, who wanted to have the Connecting Road's bridge over the East River so built that it could accommodate general traffic, vehicular, foot passengers, and trolley cars. He said that the bridge would be twice as long as the Williamsburg structure, which cost $11,000,000, and that by compelling the company to throw it open for general use the city would be saving $22,000,000 ultimately by the transaction.

Said Commission's Hands Were Tied.

Albert B. Boardman, of counsel to the commission, explained that the board could do nothing on this proposal, as the law permitted the commission to pass on the construction of a bridge for railroad traffic only, and that if the other plan was to be made effective the delegation would have to obtain legislative amendments to the existing law.

Mayor McClellan then moved, as a point of order, that the board should take up the Connecting Railroad matter.

"We're on it now," replied President Orr.

"Since I have been Mayor," said Mr. McClellan, "I have made it a strict rule, which I never have broken until now, never to discuss or vote on measures in various boards when such matters later would come before me as Mayor. This is such an important matter, however, that I feel I must break that rule now.

"I have always tried to be fair to corporations, and in return have insisted that they shall be fair to the city. I have a high opinion of Mr. Cassatt, and understand that he is working in the interests of the stockholders of his company; but I am also the President of one of the largest corporations in the world, and it is my right and duty to protect my stockholders, the citizens of New York City.

"I do not want to criticise the action of the other members of the Board of Rapid Transit in this matter or to say that they are not earnest in the performance of their duty, but to state that the only difference is, the point of view is not the same. I understand the board considers the building of this road is absolutely necessary for the development of the City of New York, and that is why concessions have been made to the Pennsylvania and the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroads.

Railroad the Real Beneficiary.

"That is a sort of Boomtown idea, and gives the franchise to the corporations practically at their own terms; but I insist that the benefits be conferred on the grantor, and not the grantee. I concede that the granting of this franchise will hasten the growth of the city, but for the present the benefit will be chiefly to the corporations securing the right. It will be simply a connecting railroad, and the only excuse for the granting of the franchise at the present time is that ultimately the city will be benefited.

"I have no desire to charge a corporation one cent more than it ought to pay for a franchise, but I believe that a corporation should pay to the city every cent a franchise is worth, and that is why I am opposing this grant. It is difficult to ascertain the exact value of a franchise, because there is no set formula, but I understand that the difference between the value of a railroad and its cost of construction is what is known in the vernacular as 'water.'"

The Mayor then proceeded to pick what he called other flaws in the board terms, saying they had been built on guesswork when $1,100,000 was fixed for a twenty-five-year franchise. He also declared that the committee had merely fixed haphazard terms, and then had sent them to Vice President Samuel Rea to see if he was satisfied with them, and that when he was not the committee had changed the figures to meet his terms. The Mayor insisted that the terms of $2,250,000 fixed by Mr. Nichols were just to the company.

Mr. Orr Defends the Terms.

"There was no guesswork in fixing those terms," declared President Orr, with some heat. "They were based on the Pennsylvania Railroad contract. The Mayor should remember that the city goes on forever, and that this franchise is merely for twenty-five years. The road would build up the section and the city would have ample opportunity in twenty-five years to find what the franchise was worth, so that a renewal would be on right and fair terms."

"That shows that the committee went by guesswork," insisted the Mayor.

"It did not," retorted Controller Metz, who had served o[illegible]mmittee. "It was no more guesswork than was the work of Mr. Nichols in fixing on the terms he proposed. We were careful in preparing our figures, and if, after we have worked hard on a proposition, the Mayor is going to come along and kill all our work, we might as well turn the whole affair over to him in the first place. We are business men, and it is ridiculous to keep us sitting here night after night until 7 o'clock and have the work go for nothing."

The Mayor then found fault because at the previous meeting he had not received a copy of the proposed franchise terms before the meeting. He said that finally, after he had complained, he got a copy from an attorney for the road.

"That is unfair, Mr. Mayor," said President Orr. "We have tried to keep nothing from you, but we knew you never acted on such matters until they came before you at City Hall."

Mayor McClellan then objected to the clause in the franchise which leaves it to the courts to decide whether the city or the company shall pay the cost of street openings along the right of way. The original Nichols terms put this expense on the company, and the Mayor wished those terms adhered to.

"We put it up to the courts because it belonged there," retorted the Controller.

The Franchise Sent Back.

After talking for more than an hour the Mayor got the board to adopt his resolutions for a conference committee between the Rapid Transit Board and the Board of Estimate, and sending the franchise back to the Plans and Contracts Committee in the meantime. For the benefit of this committee the Mayor also filed a brief in support of his contentions on the contract, the brief having been prepared by the Mayor, Mr. Hoyt, and Mr. Nichols.

In this document the Mayor holds that the road to be built will be of great value to the Pennsylvania and to the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroads as a connecting link, but that it will be worth little to New York City except in the taxes to be collected from the railroad. He therefore argues that the value of the right to the railroads as a connection should be considered in fixing a price to the city for the grant. The Mayor's brief also says:

"The fact that the granting of this franchise may contribute to the prosperity of the city should not, from a business point of view, be given much consideration to reduce the value of the franchise. As a practical matter, it is questionable if it should be given any consideration except to enhance the value of the franchise because of the immense income which will result to the road from operating in these boroughs.

"In view of all these facts, therefore, I believe that the true measure of compensation to which the city is entitled should be an equivalent of the value of the franchise to the corporation. In other words, the applicants should be required to pay whatever the right is worth to them.

"There is no set formula that I know of by which the value of a franchise may be computed with exactness, but a rough idea of its worth to the corporation may be obtained through some such method as this. The value of a railroad property using the word 'value' in its commonest acceptation, is obviously made up of two chief elements, namely the cost of constructing and equipping the road and the value of the intangible right to maintain and operate its line.

Possible to Estimate Profits.

"It is quite possible to arrive at a correct estimate of the first item, and it is equally feasible to ascertain in a measure what should be the prospective net profits of the road when built. These profits must bear a certain relation to the final value of the whole property, and by capitalizing them we should be enabled to estimate what in all probability that final value will be.

"Here is an enormously valuable franchise sought by a corporation in perpetuity for the advantage of two great railroad companies, promising little or no benefit to the city at the present time. Yet all that is asked as compensation for the granting of such privilege is the payment of $100,000 down and the sum of $25,000 per annum for the first ten years, to be increased to $50,000 per annum for the succeeding fifteen years, after which time a new adjustment is to be made.

"In addition to the question of adequate compensation there are several other respects in which the city might suffer were the proposed contract to receive the approval of the local authorities in its present form. I desire to call attention briefly to what I consider the more serious of these defects.

1. If the city should desire to open additional streets across the proposed right of way and the railroad company should refuse its consent, it is provided that an application should be made to the Supreme Court to decide whether the said streets are necessary. This clause is most unfair to the city, for the Board of Estimate and Apportionment should have the absolute right under all circumstances of determining the necessity of cutting a street through the property of the railroad.
2. There should be a provision restricting the width of the road. The existing clause is too broad.
3. Some provision should be made requiring the submission of the plans of the bridge and superstructure to the Municipal Art Commission for its approval.
4. The use of any part of the property of the railroad for advertising purposes should be prohibited. It is no offense to the company to insist upon such a restriction.
5. Provision should be made for the transportation of passengers, not merely upon the line of the connecting railway, but also upon the lines with which it connects from any point within the city to any other point within the city in the same direction for a sum not exceeding 5 cents for each passenger.
6. Deviations from the terms of the proposed certificate should be granted only after the concurrence of the Board of Estimate and Apportionment, and then on such additional terms as it may deem advisable.
7. The right to acquire and maintain terminals, yards, and stations should be restricted to such points as may be approved by the Board of Estimate and Apportionment upon such terms as they may require.
8. The company should not be permitted to string wires or other electrical conductors along the line of its road, but should be required to place them in conduits, to the use of which the city to some extent, at least, should be accorded the right.
9. The company should be required to bear the expense of any alteration to existing sewerage systems which may be made necessary by the construction of the road. The clause of the proposed contract is not broad enough to cover such a case.
10. Provision should be made that the sums which may be required to be paid as compensation shall be in addition to all taxes in order to avoid any misunderstanding such as has arisen in similar cases.
11. The company should be required to commence its annual payments from the date of the acceptance of the grant, as during the period of construction it will be exercising its privileges to the detriment of the surrounding property.

Would Forbid Earth Embankment.

"Another feature of the proposed road, which, in my opinion, is highly objectionable, is the earthen embankment which the company contemplates running through a portion of the Borough of Queens.

"Generally speaking, the time has gone by for such construction within the territorial limits of the city. There is constant agitation at present to compel all railroads running at grade or upon an embankment within the city to sink their tracks below the surface of the streets. If the Connecting Railroad is allowed to construct its road in this manner, it will be only a question of time before an attempt will be made to force it to lower its tracks, and the city may have to contribute heavily for the purpose of accomplishing this result.

"In order to forestall such a possibility, it would be wiser, in my opinion, to compel the railroad to run as far as possible under the surface along the proposed route. It could not be much of a hardship to the company, as the distance is not great, while the future benefit of the city would be large, in that an important territory would be freed from a great prospective obstacle to its natural development.

"Finally, I desire to call the attention of the commission to the fact that the amounts which the city has already been compelled to contribute by legislative enactment to the railroad companies interested in this very project, for the purpose of removing existing tracks from the surface to overhead or underground positions in the Borough of Brooklyn, between New York Bay and the easterly line of the Borough of Brooklyn, for the so-called "Bay Ridge improvement" is two and one-half millions, while the total amount which the present certificate imposes upon the New York Connecting Railroad Company to pay in twenty-five years does not exceed $1,100,000."

What Hot Blood Said to Laziness

It rebuked it, of course. Any absurd unreasonable form of life insurance is also rebukable; unnecessary to incur it when there are policies with the real insurance in them. They're much the cheapest.

ROCKEFELLER, JR., THERE IN SPITE OF NEW HEIR

Talks of Parental Burdens at the Bible Class Reunion.

MARK TWAIN SENDS LETTER

Timothy L. Woodruff Says Pernicious Tendencies in Business Are Not in Life Insurance Alone.

The responsibilities of fatherhood were mentioned by John D. Rockefeller, Jr., before a church full of people last night. He didn't say much about them, but what he did say evoked long applause. Though he'd been the father of a son not quite a day, Mr. Rockefeller said the responsibilities were sufficient excuse for not making a good speech.

The new Rockefeller baby arrived late Wednesday night, at 13 West Fifty-fourth Street. Immediately, telegraph, cable, and telephone wires spread the news to grandparents and other relatives. John D. Rockefeller, third, is a healthy youngster, one of the family physicians says. That the mother, who is a daughter of Senator Aldrich of Rhode Island, is doing well was shown by the father's presence last night at the second quinquennial reunion of the honorary members of his Bible class. There was great rejoicing at Lakewood over the advent of the heir presumptive to the world's greatest fortune. A cablegram told the news to Mrs. Aldrich, who is in Paris, and a telegram went to Senator Aldrich.

John D. Rockefeller, Jr., was not on the programme for a speech last night. He is not an honorary, but an active, member of the class. Most of the men and women in the pews of the Fifth Avenue Baptist Church, 8 West Forty-sixth Street, did not even know that the leader was there. He sat in the body of the church.

Dr. Edward M. Foote, Chairman was just about to dismiss the meeting, when he decided that it ought not to break up without a word from the most important person connected with it. So he called on Mr. Rockefeller. As the latter rose and went to the platform the audience, with the news of the new baby's arrival still fresh in their minds, clapped their hands delightedly.

Mr. Rockefeller had not been talking long before he approached the topic for which everybody was waiting.

"There are two reasons why I really should not be here on the platform," said the leader, talking slowly. "One is that I am not an honorary member, and only honorary members are supposed to speak to-night. Another reason is—and many here will I am sure appreciate it—that the responsibilities of twenty-four hours of fatherhood—"

Mr. Rockefeller could get no further. He was interrupted by a volley of applause and laughter. His face had been serious, but now his lips parted in a broad grin. He had to wait for the applause to die down before he could proceed.

"The responsibilities of fatherhood, especially the responsibilities of being the father of a boy, [more laughter and applause,] really make me unfit to serve as savory a dish as you deserve to-night."

Before last night John D. Rockefeller, Jr., never exhibited his talents as a humorist. His talks have all taken place at religious meetings, and jokes would have been out of place. But last night it was not a religious meeting, and the leader's talk was almost frivolous.

Apologizing for being obliged to lengthen the meeting by his speech, he said the audience was in the same predicament as a certain little boy who went to a Sunday school picnic. After eating "from morn, all day, to eve," as Mr. Rockefeller expressed it, the boy had all he could eat. Just as he was about to start home a woman put a large chocolate cake before him and invited him to eat.

"Take one piece, Johnny," she said.

"Well, I can't swallow any, but I can chaw," replied the boy.

"And that is the condition in which the audience finds itself to-night," said Mr. Rockefeller, "when, after having heard all the other speeches it has to listen to me." Toward the end of his short speech the leader summed up the real purpose of such an institution as the Rockefeller Bible Class, saying that it was organized to guide them in the right way and to help them to resist the temptations which beset them on every side.

Mark Twain and Martin W. Littleton, two honorary members invited to speak, did not appear. The Chairman read a note from Mark Twain. Here is what the humorist said:

"I am sorry I am not able to be at the meeting of honorary members this evening. My doctor said that if I were a young man, instead of the Methuselah of American literature, I might come to no harm by attending. If that was a compliment I shall find it in the bill. There ought to be a law against such graft as that."

Timothy L. Woodruff, ex-Lieutenant Governor, was one of the speakers. He said that railroads and industrial corporations, as well as insurance companies, must consider themselves bound to act for the public welfare, and not only for their own coffers. He said they were under an obligation to the public as well as to stockholders.

The speaker said he had been asked to talk about the probable effect of the insurance investigation.

"Referring to the insurance investigation," he said, "let me ask right here: What would James H. Hyde, Richard or Robert McCurdy, James W. Alexander, and some other insurance men give of their wealth accumulated by their greed for power and for the almighty dollar, to recover the reputations they all enjoyed, with so much pride of place, a year ago to-day? They are, however, nothing but the victims of a pernicious tendency which has not been and is not now, I regret to say, confined entirely to the business of life insurance."

KILEY RESIGNS AS HEAD OF NORTH SIDE BANK

Brooklyn Bigamist Heard from Through a Friend.

POLICE STILL AFTER HIM

District Attorney Clarke Issues Instructions for Missing Man's Arrest—No Fear of Suicide.

While detectives were doing their best to find him yesterday Thomas W. Kiley, the missing Brooklyn banker and merchant, who is accused of bigamy, sent in his resignation as President of the North Side Bank.

The resignation was contained in a letter which was brought to the bank by one of Kiley's friends. The friend did not say where Kiley was or if he intended to return and face the bigamy charge.

Deputy Police Commissioner O'Keefe yesterday instructed Inspector Cross to find the banker and arrest him. These instructions were the result of a communication sent the Deputy Commissioner by District Attorney Clarke.

A special meeting of the Directors of the bank has been called for to-morrow morning, when the resignation will be accepted and a successor chosen. The chances are that Cashier Bonner will be the man to take the place. Kiley has been President for seven years.

"I haven't the remotest idea where Kiley is," said Mr. Bonner last night to a reporter for THE TIMES.

"Did he draw out any money before he left?" Mr. Bonner was asked.

"I cannot answer that question," was the reply. "Mr. Kiley is not the kind that runs away."

"But detectives are looking for him and haven't found him," it was suggested.

"I certainly do not know where he is," the cashier declared.

"Was his resignation a surprise?"

"Not after what has come out in the papers."

"Did Mr. Kiley own the controlling share of the bank's stock?"

"He did not."

A report was started last night that the missing banker was hiding in the house of Mrs. Colt. This was denied at the Colt home last night. Another report was that he was in hiding in Sullivan County.

Fears that Kiley has killed himself were freely expressed, but they were scoffed at by Wilkins Colt, son of wife No. 2.

"Do you know where Mr. Kiley is?" Mr. Colt was asked.

He started to make a direct answer, giving the impression that he did know, and then replied that he could not answer.

"Should the police demand knowledge of his whereabouts from you, would you give them the information?"

"I would if they were armed with the right papers," he replied.

Mrs. Colt was prostrated and could not be seen. Her attorney, W. F. Scott of Scott, Upson & Newcomb, said that his client did not know that Kiley was married when she consented to wed him. He added that no one knew that he was married. She kept the marriage secret at Kiley's earnest request.

T. W. Kiley, the namesake of his uncle, was as much astonished over the announcement that he was his uncle's stepson as he was when the disclosure came that Kiley had two wives.

Kiley was reared in an orphan asylum and started with nothing. Every cent he has he earned by the hardest kind of work. His word was considered as good as his bond among financiers and business men.

Yesterday none of his old friends expressed any sympathy for him. The feeling against him, based on his statement that he married Mrs. Colt because he thought that his first wife was dying and would be dead soon enough to allow him to announce publicly that he had another wife, is strong.

At the Kiley home yesterday it was said that nothing had been heard from the missing man and that there was no clue as to his whereabouts. At the hardware company it was said that Mr. Kiley had been expecting to go away for some time. His departure, however, was not planned, as he left his home without baggage.

A lawyer was on duty at the Kiley home yesterday, and at the Colt home the son of wife No. 2 stood guard. Mrs. Colt, as Flora Brown, was the daughter of one of the wealthiest men in the Eastern District of Brooklyn. She was thrice married. Her first husband was George Tousey and her second the son of a Dr. Colt, who was himself a physician.

Kiley's two nephews, now in business with him in the Kiley Hardware Company, did not know until the exposure of his bigamy that their uncle was also their stepfather. He had kept secret even from them his marriage to their mother. The marriage with Mrs. Colt was also kept secret, and by relatives as well as friends Kiley was supposed to be a bachelor.

BEEF TRUST DECISION MAY UPSET OIL CASE

Garfield May Have Shed Immunity on Standard Suspects.

GOVERNMENT IN A QUANDARY

Search for a Ground for Appeal from Decision Is Not Promising—To Prosecute Corporation, Anyhow.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 22.—Probably the angriest Administration ever seen in Washington is doing business here at the present moment. The Beef Trust decision has infuriated the officials here, from the President down. Everybody who has any connection with or responsibility for suits against corporations is in a state only to be described by the word "sore." None of them discusses it without a gloomy brow and a bitter tone.

What the Administration will do about it is not yet decided. All the officials concerned are vehement in their declaration that the decision is utterly erroneous, but when asked on what ground they would seek an appeal, they look perplexed and are silent.

Every effort has been made to-day to find some loophole out of which to fire at the trust officers again, but so far in vain, and to-night neither the President, Attorney General Moody, Commissioner Garfield, nor any other member of the Administration has any idea whether anything more can be done or not.

On one thing the officials always fall back, and that is the promise that the case against the corporation will be pressed to an early trial, whether there is any hope of getting at the individuals or not.

What pains the Administration more than even the result of the Beef Trust case is the fear of its effect upon the Standard Oil investigation. The Beef Trust decision settles Commissioner Garfield's status. He is in charge of the Immunity Department of the Government. Wherever he goes he sheds immunity. If he talks to a trust officer that individual immediately becomes immune. Not only that, but what Garfield does by his agents he does by himself. Any official who dreads an investigation has only to find Garfield or one of his agents and pour a confession, or some fragment of a confession, into that person. He then becomes immune.

It is known that a very large number of the Standard Oil officials have been talked to by Garfield or his agents. He has personally seen only a few, but his agents have talked to the rest. The knock of a Bureau of Corporations official at a trust officer's door is equivalent to a proclamation of amnesty.

That, at least, is the fear which now perplexes the Administration. The effect of Judge Humphrey's decision is seen to be far reaching. It may totally nullify the purposes for which the Bureau of Corporations was created. That bureau has been acting on the assumption that its mission was to investigate trusts and, where criminal practices were discovered, to lay the evidence before the Department of Justice. The latter has been simply the arm of the Bureau of Corporations, which has assumed gigantic proportions in the situation created by the anti-trust laws.

Attention is being called to the fact that when Secretary Morton was accused by the special counsel engaged by the Government, Attorney General Moody rendered an opinion, which was indorsed by President Roosevelt, extending immunity to Morton the individual and proving that it was right to proceed only against the Santa Fé, the corporation. Some astonishment is expressed that Mr. Moody should be angry because Judge Humphrey has taken the same view as regards the Beef Trust.

GRADY WANTS PASSES.

Would Force Railroads to Give Them to Legislators.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 22.—The feeling against the railroads for cutting off the passes of legislators found its first public expression on the floor of the Senate to-day, and Senator Grady announced that he purposed to stand for an amendment to an existing bill which would compel the State railroads to carry free all elective officers traveling on official business.

The matter came up when the Committee on Railroads reported out a bill of Senator Brackett's, which provided that railroads must not give passes to any one except employes of the road under penalty of committing a misdemeanor. The bill came out with this amendment:

"Except to members of the Legislature and all other elective State officers, who shall be transported over the railroads of the State free of charge when in the discharge of their official duties upon certificates which the Secretary of State shall sign and issue, but no such certificate shall be delivered to any member of the Legislature until he shall have assigned to the State his mileage allowance for the year."

"I hate to own paternity to a brat like that," was Brackett's comment when his amended bill was read. "It has been my aim to prevent the petty larceny of rebates of this kind."

Senator Grady objected to the bill going to third reading. He said he wanted to debate it in Committee of the Whole.

"We've been counted out long enough," he said. "There is no reason why our virtue in this regard should be exalted when every other State makes the railroads carry legislators on official business for the State. Every week I have to go down in my pocket for $6.20, and the State allows me $3 for mileage. Whenever I get buncoed like that you may expect to hear a howl from me."

The bill as amended went to the Committee of the Whole.

WOULD OPEN BALLOT BOX.

Assembly Committee, as a Test, Asks the House for Power to Act.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 22.—The Assembly Committee on Privileges and Elections desires to open a ballot box used in the election in November in New York City, and to-day called upon the House to give it power to compel the production of the box.

It had subpoenaed Chairman John R. Voorhis of the New York City Board of Elections to produce the box used in the Fifty-fifth Election District of the Seventh Kings, in the contest against Assemblyman Grady brought by Mr. Hyatt of the Municipal Ownership League, but Voorhis declined to act as desired by the committee without an order from the Supreme Court. The committee wants to establish whether the Legislature is not supreme and its power absolute in election contests.

Discussion of the matter was postponed to next Wednesday.

For Savings Bank Tax Repeal.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 22.—Senator Page's bill to repeal the tax on savings banks' surplus was reported out of the Committee on Taxation and Retrenchment to-day. This is a measure to which the Administration is pledged, Gov. Higgins having stated in his campaign that he would work to have the tax repealed, and it was made a part of the platform on which he ran two years ago.

This Business

It has become the biggest of its kind in the world for just one reason—we have given our patrons a distinctive service that has paid THEM.

Live, progressive American business firms have tested Colortype illustrations—they KNOW they pay; that is why they are steadily increasing the use of them.

There are two reasons: They show purchasers what the goods they are considering look like, and they make your advertising literature so attractive that it gets attention from those who wouldn't notice commonplace printed matter.

NEW POLICE INSPECTOR ACCUSED OF GRAFTING

Charges Against Gallagher by Brooklyn Saloon Man.

NO MONEY, THEN A RAID

Taxpayer's Complaint Against Kurzel's Resort Came Through Jerome's Office, the Captain Says.

While a witness in his own defense before Magistrate Voorhees in Brooklyn yesterday Gustav Kurzel, Jr., a saloon keeper of 469 Flatbush Avenue, accused of keeping a disorderly resort, made charges of graft against Capt. Edward Gallagher, who was appointed Acting Inspector two days ago and transferred to the Fifth Inspection District, Manhattan. Capt. Gallagher denied the charges.

The saloon keeper testified that Capt. Gallagher, when in command at the Flatbush Avenue Station, demanded money from him, and gave specific instances when he had paid the Captain or his subordinates sums ranging from $5 to $25. His arrest was due, he said, to his final refusal to pay for police protection. The testimony of Kurzel in some details was corroborated by his wife and four other witnesses.

Inspector O'Connor, who was the superior officer of Capt. Gallagher in Brooklyn, after the examination was adjourned talked with Assistant District Attorney White of Brooklyn. It was intimated that charges might be preferred against Gallagher.

Kurzel gave his testimony after Charles Ernst and John J. Flood, plain clothes men, had testified that Capt. Gallagher sent them to investigate Kurzel's place, and that they obtained the evidence on which he was arrested.

The saloon keeper said he went into business four months ago, and that shortly afterward the Captain came to his place in plain clothes and introduced himself. The first thing the Captain told him, Kurzel said, was to have his wife move somewhere else and rent the rooms above the saloon to transients.

"I told him I had no desire to do that," the witness said. "Then Gallagher remarked: 'Well, suppose you took in $6 a day. That would be $180 a month, of which $100 should come to me.' I gave the Captain a $10 bill and a box of cigars.

"Gallagher came to me again a few nights later. He told me that $10 was not enough and that he was going to give it back to me, but he didn't. The next month I tried to do a little better, and gave him $25. I don't remember what date it was, but it was about 4 o'clock in the afternoon, and I had gone round to the station in response to a request Capt. Gallagher sent me through my bartender.

"Around Christmas time I called Wardman George Meadows into the café and gave him $5 as a present. I gave Policeman McDonald $5 also. I gave Meadows $20 to give to the Captain as a present. My wife was present at the time."

Kurzel said that the Captain saw him again in January and demanded money, and that when Kurzel told him business was slow, a uniformed man was placed in front of his place to warn persons away. The policeman, Kurzel said, even tried to prevent him and his wife from entering the premises. On March 1 Kurzel was arrested.

Acting Inspector Gallagher declared the testimony a fabrication from beginning to end. He denied ever having seen Kurzel until he was arrested on the evening of March 1.

"On Feb. 25," said Gallagher, "I received a complaint about Kurzel's place from District Attorney Jerome, with an unsigned letter from a taxpayer in the vicinity, declaring the place a public nuisance. I detailed Flood and Ernst to get evidence against the place, which was a Raines law hotel. I had had the place under surveillance two or three weeks before that."

Gallagher later volunteered the statement that he inspected the hotel in December and "repeatedly told Kurzel that he must not allow his wife to sit in the back room of the saloon, as it gave the place a bad reputation."

On the night of the arrest, after a fruitless raid, Kurzel said, according to Gallagher:

"I'll get square with you."

ENGLAND TO PROMOTE GAELIC

Government Considering a Scheme to Encourage Its Study.

LONDON, March 22.—Irish education grievances were the subject of a long debate to-night in the House of Commons. Irish members declared that the existing system was deplorable and that Ireland would never rest until she obtained a university representing the interests of the Catholic majority.

James Bryce, the new Chief Secretary for Ireland, made a conciliatory speech, admitting the existence of the grievances. The Government, Mr. Bryce added, was considering a scheme to promote the study of the Gaelic language.

Lodge Attacks Commissioner Prouty for Assault on Railroads—Tilt with Tillman.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 22.—Senator Spooner held the attention of the lawyers of the upper house for two hours to-day, during his close argument on the Rate bill. Mr. Spooner confined himself strictly to the constitutional aspect of the court review idea. The greater part of the speech was devoted to making clear the distinction between the jurisdiction conferred on the courts by Congress and the judicial power that they derive from the Constitution. The use of the word "suspension" in the Hepburn bill, he said, did not add to or take from the power of the court under the law as it came from the House.

"You may leave it out and that would make no difference," said Senator Spooner. "Leave it in and it confers no jurisdiction. But put in the amendment proposed by the Senator from Texas, Mr. Bailey, and undertake to create a prohibition against the power of a United States court to grant a preliminary injunction, and in my judgment the bill becomes unconstitutional, and this amendment would necessarily be so intertwined with the whole bill that it would drag down the whole measure. We expect to see passed a strong, safe bill on the lines of the House bill, but to put this amendment in would be to challenge the downfall of the whole bill."

Taking up the constitutional question, Senator Spooner said that the laws of Congress defining the manner of exercising judicial power should not be confused with the judicial power of the courts derived from the Constitution. The framers of the Constitution did not intend a Judiciary dependent on the will of Congress.

If Congress could prohibit temporary injunctions by the Circuit Courts clothed as they are with equity jurisdiction by the Constitution, why could not the power to issue permanent injunctions also be taken from them? It was not the purpose of the framers of the Constitution to create these courts so that they would be subject to the will of Congress. They were created to restrain Congress and the Executive in the use of powers. They were thus intended to be placed beyond the caprice of Congress.

"Suppose," interrupted Senator Rayner, "that Congress had never created the lower courts?"

"Certainly that could have happened," said Senator Spooner.

"Well, will not the Senator admit that what Congress ordained and established Congress could abolish?" asked the Maryland Senator.

"Congress having once conferred jurisdiction on the Federal courts, does my friend from Maryland mean to say that it can proceed to chip off again and again from the judicial power given these courts by the Constitution? If he does, let me say it would be a sorry day for the people when that should come true. In the last analysis, the protection of the people is not in Congress nor in the White House, but in the courts."

Senator Tillman arose to say that he was only a cornfield lawyer, but he remembered the legal tender cases, where Congress told the Supreme Court that those cases should be held to be Constitutional, and the court did not obey, and somehow, by an increase of the court, the cases were finally sustained.

"I suppose," retorted Spooner, "that if the Supreme Court does not square itself with 'cornfield common-sense law' now it will be reformed. The Senator from South Carolina admits that the right of trial by jury, like the judicial power of a court, may exist under the Constitution, even if not declared by law?"

"I do," cried Tillman.

"Well, did you learn that in the cornfield?" demanded Spooner.

"Yes, there and in another place," replied Tillman. "I learned something of English jurisprudence and American liberty with my mother's milk."

Senator Spooner twitted Tillman with improper comment on Senator Knox in a recent speech when he charged that he was, or had been, attorney for the Pennsylvania Railroad, "and yet the Senator from Pennsylvania," added Spooner, "has accomplished more in the high office of Attorney General to enforce the anti-trust law than all other lawyers in the country would have done in thirty years."

"Well, why don't you lawyers help us to get this bill in shape so it will do what the people ask shall be done?" demanded Tillman.

"Well, we are getting together," said Spooner.

Senator Spooner made no allusion to his own amendments that have been studied by Senators more or less for several weeks.

Before Senator Spooner's speech Senator Lodge replied to a speech recently made in Boston by Commissioner Prouty of the Inter-State Commission, in which the latter had expressed the opinion that the New England Senators were pursuing a mistaken course in the question of rate regulation.

With its varied interests, Mr. Lodge said, New England desired railroad legislation, but desired also that it should be carefully guarded. He referred to current criticisms of the Senate, and said that body would continue to perform its duties regardless of them. The Senate and the Executive could take care of their own fortunes, but the courts could not reply. He, therefore, pleaded for fair treatment of them, saying that "no greater harm could be done than to breed distrust of the courts."

When an official like Mr. Prouty gave out utterances, as he said that gentleman had done, in which he said that the courts were controlled by the railroads, coming from a high official of the Government, they became deeply serious. He contended that the efforts to shut the courts out of the consideration of railroad questions added to the suspicion and should not be encouraged.

Mr. Lodge dwelt upon the power of the commission to help or injure any section of the country. He referred especially to the possibilities in a mileage rate.

"How much cotton would reach New England if rates were fixed on a mileage basis?" asked Mr. Foraker, and Mr. Lodge replied by saying that under such a system "every manufacturing industry in the State would be destroyed."

"Is there any proposition in the pending bill to establish a mileage rate?" Mr. Nelson inquired, and Mr. Lodge admitted that there was not. He said his purpose was to show the enormous possibilities of such system.

A CITY CLUB REVERSAL.

Trustees Ordered to Support Elsberg Bill, Unamended.

The City Club decided last night at a largely attended meeting to support the Elsberg rapid transit bill as it stood prior to the elimination of the provision for competition. And not only does the club withdraw its opposition, but the Trustees have been requested, in a manner not to be disregarded, to employ whatever influence the club has toward the passage of the bill as originally reported.

The decision was so nearly unanimous that only a single vote was recorded against it. It marked an unmistakable defeat for the Trustees and, in a way, a vote of disapproval of the policy pursued by them in this matter. Though few speeches were made, and, though what was said was not sensational, it was made clear beyond a doubt that the membership of the club has been for the bill from the beginning, and that the opposition to it within the club has rested almost exclusively with the Trustees.

The retreat of the Trustees was decided on at a meeting held Wednesday night, and their change of attitude was made clear to the meeting last night by a report of one of the Secretaries, proposing on behalf of the Trustees the withdrawal of further opposition to the bill. But this was not enough to satisfy the members.

Julius Henry Cohen and Frederic W. Hinrichs, both attending in the double capacity of members and representatives of the Citizens' Union, made the principal speeches in favor of a more definite action. Mr. Cohen introduced the resolutions, which were adopted after having been amended by motion of Judge William N. Cohen so as to exclude the Grady amendment from the approval of the club. The resolutions read:

"Resolved, That it is the sense of the City Club that the bill as now amended before the State Legislature, (except the Grady amendment,) known as the Elsberg Rapid Transit bill, should be enacted into law; and

"Resolved, That the Trustees be requested to use the influence of the club to the utmost in securing its enactment by the Legislature and its approval by the Mayor and Governor."

ELSBERG BILL IN DANGER.

On Final Vote Some Senators Now with Him May Desert.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 22.—Senator Elsberg to-day began the battle to have retained in his Rapid Transit bill the provision which Senator Grady succeeded in having stricken from it yesterday, the taking out of which Elsberg says removed from it every competitive feature.

Elsberg to-day moved for a reconsideration of the vote by which the Grady amendment was carried. At the same time, he asked that the motion lie on the table. When the bill comes up for final passage, if he can hold all the votes he had yesterday and muster three more he will be able to pass the bill in its original form.

There is still some doubt, however, that the bill will pass at all. The vote was such yesterday as to leave large loopholes for some of the Senators who voted with Elsberg against the amendment to vote against the bill in its entirety. Elsberg, however, is satisfied that the bill will finally go through.

MINERS ON BRINK OF STRIKE.

Breach Between Men and Operators at Conference Widens.

Special to The New York Times.

INDIANAPOLIS, March 22.—Nothing but a miracle can prevent the strike of 250,000 miners throughout the bituminous coal fields of the country is the belief here to-night. The breach between the operators and their men widened rapidly to-day, forcing the conclusion upon both sides that the reconvened joint conference will break up within twenty-four hours without a settlement having been reached.

The miners offered a compromise proposition to-day in the joint Scale Committee meeting, and it was rejected by the operators, the basis of the proposal being the restoration of the 1903 wage schedule, which would mean an increase of approximately 5.55 per cent. Francis L. Robbins of Pittsburg, former leader of the operators, was the only employer to vote with the miners in favor of the scale. Operators from Illinois, Ohio, and Indiana voted solidly against it.

In this condition the matter is left to-night. There will be another meeting of the Joint Scale Committee to-morrow morning, when the final effort to bring the two sides together will be made.

National officials of the Miners' Union said to-night that if the strike is called it will affect practically every union bituminous miner in the country and may precipitate a general anthracite strike.

URGES SUBWAY REFORMS.

More Sunday Expresses Among Them—Plan for Bronx.

Chief Engineer George S. Rice's report on conditions in the Subway, part of which was made public by President Orr last week, came before the Rapid Transit Commission yesterday for action. It was sent to Vice President E. P. Bryan of the Interborough with the request that the recommendations be met by the company.

The report, which complained of lack of express service on Sundays, holidays, and at certain hours in the evening, gave the following totals of tickets sold for the Subway during the four days on which the chief engineer was examining conditions and taking data:

Saturday, March 3	446,884
Sunday, March 4	280,081
Monday, March 5	539,248
Tuesday, March 6	478,605

The report urges passengers to distribute themselves through all the cars of the Subway trains, recommends a Sunday and holiday express service of about the same frequency as week days, and says that the local and express service on week days is about as good as could be arranged, even though at times the cars are carrying passengers to their utmost capacity. Eight-car express trains from 6 A. M. to 9 P. M. on week days are recommended. The report closes with the following recommendation:

> We have noticed that it is often the practice of the guards at the forward end of the trains when at stations, when no passengers are directly opposite the doors to close them before the bell has been rung starting the trains, and it is quite frequent to see people who are crowding around the doors of the middle part of the train rush to the forward doors to find themselves shut out, and in that way very often lose their opportunity to board the train.

Controller Metz moved that the commission require the operating company to post notices in all express stations when service was to be curtailed.

President McAdoo of the New York & Jersey Railroad, which is constructing Hudson River tunnels and a Sixth Avenue subway to Thirty-fourth Street, requested approval of the proposed terminals of the company at Dey Street and at Thirty-third Street. The request was granted by the board, which also approved the form of the $200,000 bond to be given by the company.

The Chief Engineer reported that work was progressing favorably on the East River tunnel, and the board adopted a request that the Interborough Company arrange to run half of its Second and Third Avenue elevated trains on the viaduct section of the subway north of 149th Street and half over the suburban division of the elevated, instead of running all over the latter, as now.

No One to Buy His Cheap Ice.

Nathan Lane of 95 Lafayette Avenue, Brooklyn, who, in a letter to THE TIMES yesterday, offered to sell 30,000 tons of ice at $3.60 a ton, said yesterday that he had not found a purchaser. The ice is open for inspection at an ice house on the Hudson just above Albany. "The Ice Trust is selling ice at $8 a ton," he said, "and you'll find that next July it will be selling at $12 a ton."

Greenwich Bank Not a Creditor.

President William C. Duncan of the Greenwich Bank said yesterday that the Jassoy Company, manufacturing jewelers at 14 John Street, does not owe the bank $3,600, as set forth in the firm's bankruptcy schedules filed on Wednesday. Mr. Duncan said that the Jassoy Company does not owe the bank a cent.

Witte and Other Ministers Are Also in Favor of It.

WOULD AID TIES WITH US

Lamsdorff Says It Would Tend to a Russo-American Rapprochement—Favorable Decision Expected.

ST. PETERSBURG, March 22.—The sympathy of Emperor Nicholas, of Premier Witte, and other members of the Ministry and of powerful influences at Court has been elisted by Baron Loicq de Lobel in the project of the American-Trans-Alaskan-Siberian Company for the construction of a tunnel under Bering Strait and 3,000 miles of railway to connect it with the Siberian Railway. The opposition of a portion of the bureaucracy, which fought the scheme bitterly because the negotiations were conducted over their heads, is breaking down. The outlook for a favorable decision is now bright.

In addition to the benefits which would accrue to the nation by the development of the resources of the present waste of Northeastern Siberia, the imperial family owns an immense extent of land which would be benefited. The National Defense Committee also considers the project as essential from a strategic point of view, and, more important still, there is in the higher Government spheres a distinct disposition to cultivate the United States as Russia's natural ally in the Far East.

It is believed that by interesting Americans materially in Siberia the political ties between the two countries would be strengthened. A statement to this effect has been submitted by Foregn Minister Lamsdorff to the commission under the Presidency of Ziegler von Shaffhausen, Minister of Ways and Communications, which has been considering the project, which statement really amounts to an important declaration of foreign policy, as is evident from the following extract:

"From the standpoint of general policy, the project is considered more than desirable. The investment of foreign capital, and especially American, in an enterprise so important for Russia will certainly tend to an economic, financial, and political Russo-American rapprochement. It will also contribute to the creation of greater confidence in our foreign policy, which sensibly suffered by recent events.

"By interesting Americans we will be the better able to combat the injurious agitation against us which produced so much harm before the Russo-Japanese war. I believe the projected railroad would serve to paralyze any aggressive movement against us in the Far East. Everything which can help to place Russia in a more independent position with regard to Japan and China cannot fail to strengthen Russia both in the Far East and in Europe."

Six of the twelve representatives of the various Ministries on the Shaffhausen commission have already pronounced in favor of the project. Gen. Boldureff, representing the Ministry of the Imperial Household, told the commission how much his Majesty was interested and personally challenged the arguments of M. Touchinski, who has combated the project.

M. Grebnetsky, on behalf of the Ministry of the Interior, went to the extent of declaring that if the railroad were not constructed Russia's position on the Pacific would be lost. He expressed the opinion that the railroad was feasible, and that Americans were capable of carrying out the project.

Baron de Lobel is making the changes in the proposed line of the railroad which were suggested by the Committee of National Defense on strategic considerations.

TOOK GREAT MEN'S PICTURES.

Municipal Art Commission Photographed City Hall Portraits for Record.

George Washington, Alexander Hamilton, Henry Hudson, and a dozen other great men had their photographs taken down at the City Hall yesterday. Though some of them posed for half an hour or more they did not know a thing about it, and did not even have to look pleasant. The photographs were taken by the Municipal Art Commission, which aims to preserve copies of all the historic paintings in the city for record in case the originals are injured or destroyed.

The commission's photographer was half an hour getting a proper pose for Alexander Hamilton, owing to the uncertain light. He snapped Washington and Hudson with ease, and they stood it as if they were used to the proceeding.

GOV. PATTISON NEAR DEATH.

Fatal Issue Expected Unless There Is a Turn for the Better Soon.

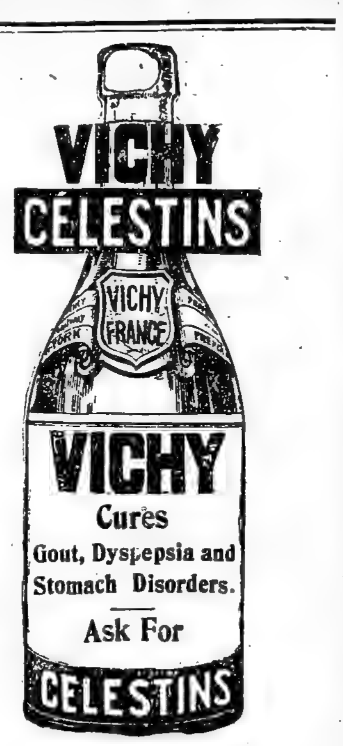
Special to The New York Times.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, March 22.—Gov. Pattison is in an extremely critical condition. His secretary, Lewis Houck, admitted to-night that he feared the end was near, and the members of the Governor's household were told to-night by the physicians that Mr. Pattison's death might be expected unless there were a turn for the better soon.

The bulletin issued to-night by the three physicians—E. J. Wilson, C. S. Hamilton, and Oliver P. Holt—gives encouragement, but close friends of Mr. Pattison assert that the Governor is much worse than the bulletin indicates.

Dr. Holt, the Governor's family physician in Cincinnati, was called here to-day because of Mr. Pattison's alarming condition. He will remain constantly at the side of the patient.

Gov. Pattison's death would result in the Republicans regaining control of the State.



Distinctive
Suits & Topcoats for Men
RADICAL & CONSERVATIVE MODELS.
At $15.00 to $40.00

Exercise your strength along the right lines and you will find power. Our tailormen have found it. How? By leaving the whole garment after they had it mastered and each exercising all his talent upon a specific part. One found his work in the collar, another in the sleeves, pockets or lapels, and so on, instead of trying for perfection in all things.

So a garment of ours has the benefit of the might of seven specialists, each giving it all his cleverness and abnormally developed power.

Let us prove our faith in the proposition by this: you may multiply the stock of the average shop in this town by three and still will we have a greater diversity of new spring suits and coats, both in models and fabrics.

FOR FRIDAY AND SATURDAY
50c Half Hose for Men at 35c
Three Pairs for One Dollar

Good? On every count as good as any shop can offer in the regular course of business at 50c.

Every pair of half hose involved was imported for spring service. They are of lisle thread or fine cotton, plain or highly mercerized, in black and colors, with silk clocks or embroidered designs.

$3.00 Silk Half Hose at $1.95

About as fine as they can be made—from fifty to sixty threads to the square inch. Black with elaborate cathedral clocks or embroidered designs in white or colors.

Negligee Shirts for Men at $1.75

Ours is not the disposition to take things as we find them. If we see our way clear to do a thing better than it is being done, we do it. We have done it with our new shirts at $1.75. Perhaps that has influenced us to make them our specialty—to make it the biggest series in our shop.

The fabrics, madras and percale, are imported and in the shades and designs which the to-measure shirt men present. Coat models, plain or plaited bosom, cuffs attached, in white, black-and-white and quiet colors.

THIS CATTLEMAN DEFIED A WHOLE SHIP'S CREW

Tried to Kill the First Mate with an Axe.

BOARDED UP IN A PEN

He Was Still Full of Fight When the Atlantic Transport Liner Mesaba Made Port After a Stormy Voyage.

When John Doyle, an Irish-American cattleman, whose home is in this city, arrived at Pier 39 yesterday morning on the Atlantic Transport liner Mesaba, he was promptly placed under arrest. It had taken the entire crew of the Mesaba to subdue him at sea, and the combined skill of the ship's carpenters to nail him up in a cattle-pen. It required the reserves from a police station to arrest him at the dock, and the disposition of his case demanded two courts, two Judges, the British Consul, two detectives, and three marshals.

Doyle went to London on a Transport steamer with cattle. He had a return ticket by the Mesaba of the same line. Arriving at London, he began to drink. He admits that he was still suffering from the effects of drink when he boarded the Mesaba, which sailed from London on March 8.

When two days out, a stowaway, who had been smuggled aboard by Doyle, was brought on deck and sent back to England on the Minneapolis, which was sighted that day. Chief Officer Johnson declares that Doyle was then suffering from delirium tremens and swore revenge against him for sending the stowaway back.

That night, according to Johnson and others of the crew—and this part of the story is proudly corroborated by Doyle himself—the cattleman armed himself with an axe and went to the officers' quarters.

Entering the cabin of the chief officer, Doyle struck him twice with the axe and then bolted to the chart room. Johnson hed been badly cut, but was conscious and able to raise an alarm. Members of the crew pursued Doyle, who put up a fierce fight in the chart room. He was finally overcome and confined in a spare cabin.

Doyle, who is 6 feet in height, broke open the door, and, arming himself with a club, started out with the avowed intention of killing all hands. Again the crew tackled him, and a second time he was confined, this time wearing a straitjacket.

A second time Doyle escaped and went on the warpath. When he was subdued it was decided to take no more chances. He was carried to a vacant cattle pen, thrown inside, and the entrance boarded up with eight-inch planks. A small hole was bored in the planking, and his food was pushed to him through the opening for the rest of the voyage.

When the Mesaba arrived at Pier 39 yesterday morning, Policeman O'Donnell of the McDougal Street Station was invited aboard to arrest the cattleman. He was shown the pen, but, seeing the nails and hearing the noise inside, decided to telephone the station for help before proceeding further.

When the boarding was removed Doyle emitted a howl of joy and renewed hostilities. The sight of a New York police uniform soon quieted him, though. When the handcuffs were on his wrists he expressed a desire to shake hands with the policemen and insisted on telling them how superior Americans were to Englishmen.

Doyle was taken to the Jefferson Market Court, where Magistrate Barlow read the complaint of the Chief Officer, made through Sir Percy Sanderson, the British Consul. A representative of the Consul appeared in court. Magistrate Barlow sent Doyle to the Federal Court, where Commissioner Alexander, after hearing both sides of the story, remanded the prisoner until to-day.

"The man had the nerve to ask if he might go home," said Commissioner Alexander after the hearing, "and in the same breath assured me that he was still determined to kill the mate."

THREAT BY N. Y. CENTRAL.

If Governor Signs 11th Avenue Bill Company Will Tie It Up in Court.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 22.—Gov. Higgins gave a hearing to-day on the Eleventh Avenue Tracks Removal bill. Senator Saxe, Father John P. Chidwick, and others who have led in the fight, appeared for the bill. Ira A. Place, general counsel for the New York Central, made the chief argument against it. Assemblyman John C. Hackett of the Thirteenth New York and Assemblyman Owen W. Bohan of the Fifteenth New York, in whose districts most of the fatalities have occurred, were also present.

"This is a bill of doubtful validity," began Mr. Place. "It was framed to meet a political condition—I might say a necessity. That it will lead to endless litigation there can be no doubt. We are asked to vacate certain sections, yet I want to say we have a right to be there. The Legislature appears to want to go ahead blindly without any actual knowledge of the situation."

James E. Walsh, on behalf of certain hay exchanges located on Eleventh Avenue, said the elimination of the tracks meant the destruction of the business of these concerns. The Subway proposed by the bill, he said, could not afford the switching and shipping facilities that are now afforded, and that this condition should condemn the bill from the standpoint of Eleventh Avenue shippers and manufacturers.

"This bill," shouted Walsh, "is a morsel in payment of campaign promises made."

Senator Saxe reviewed at length the history of the bill. Father Chidwick detailed the conditions on Eleventh Avenue. His argument was on the basis of a broad humanity, that no corporation had a right to endanger the lives of citizens.

METHODISTS SPLIT ON STRIKE

Open Shop Declaration Causes Uproar in Conference.

PHILADELPHIA, March 22.—The controversy between the Methodist Book Concern and Typographical Union No. 6 of New York came up for discussion at to-day's session of the Philadelphia Methodist Conference. Some of the pastors requested an explanation concerning an anonymous circular which had been distributed declaring that the Book Concern had locked out its printers and had published questionable literature.

The Rev. Dr. H. J. Eaton answered that the Typographical Union was fighting the concern because the publishers desired to conduct their business according to their own ideas.

"We will not be dictated to by our employes," he said. "We fly the flag of an open shop."

A resolution was presented by the Rev. Dr. A. G. Kynett expressing confidence in the Book Concern and indorsing its attitude on the open shop question.

This resolution met with the disapproval of many pastors, whose charges are among the laboring population. It threw the conference into an uproar and the resolution was referred to the Book Committee which went into secret session to enable Dr. Eaton to appear before it. The committee probably will make a report to the conference to-morrow.

THREE AUTOMOBILE BILLS.

Bail Measure Passed, Tax Bill Reported, Speed Bill Recommitted.

ALBANY, March 22.—The automobilists of the State gained a double victory to-day in the passage of the Cox bill and the recommittal of the A. E. Lee bill. The former, which now goes to the Governor, enables motorists arrested for violating the speed laws to leave a security company bond instead of their machines as guarantee for their reappearance in court.

The Lee bill, which is especially objected to by the automobilists, would compel the driver of a motor vehicle under severe penalties to slacken speed to six miles an hour within twenty rods of a fractious horse, and if the driver of the horse so signifies, to stop altogether within ten rods.

The Committee on Taxation and Retrenchment to-day reported out Senator L'Hommedieu's bill taxing automobiles by weight and amending the measure so that the tax shall be $1 for every 500 pounds or fraction thereof, instead of 50 cents, as provided for in the original draft.

CHEAP GAS IN PHILADELPHIA.

Councils Adopt Sliding Scale and Will Examine Company's Books.

PHILADELPHIA, March 22.—Both branches of City Councils to-day voted to reduce the price of gas from $1 per 1,000 feet to 90 cents during the year 1907, to 85 cents from 1908 to 1912, 80 cents from 1913 to 1817, and 75 cents from 1918 to Jan. 1, 1928, when the present thirty years' lease held by the United Gas Improvement Company expires.

The reduction granted simply gives to the consumer the rebate per 1,000 feet which is now retained by the city under the terms of the lease with the gas company.

Councils also authorized the appointment of a commission to investigate the accounts of the United Gas Improvement Company with the city under the lease. This was done so that the city may determine the amount of money needed in case it wished to terminate the lease. Under the terms of the lease the city can regain possession of the gas plant Dec. 31, 1907, the end of the first ten years of the lease, providing the municipality pays for all the improvements made to the property during the decade.

W. L. MATHOT SUCCEEDS MACK AS POLICE DEPUTY

Bingham Picks as Third Helper Man McClellan Never Heard Of.

APPOINTEE IS FROM QUEENS

He's an Independent Democrat, and Says So—May Be Ejected from His Home, Too, Any Day.

Police Commissioner Bingham yesterday appointed William L. Mathot, a lawyer of 99 Nassau Street, Third Deputy Commissioner, to take the place recently vacated by James F. Mack.

The new Third Deputy, who is 36 years old, and a resident of Jamaica, walked into the office of Mayor McClellan in the City Hall at 10 o'clock yesterday forenoon, and, presenting a letter of introduction from Commissioner Bingham, demanded to be sworn in. The Mayor was much surprised, and through his secretary told the newspaper men that he had never heard of Mr. Mathot. An hour later the new Third Deputy Commissioner was already deep in his official duties at Police Headquarters.

Commissioner Bingham said that the new Third Deputy was his own selection and that he had known Mr. Mathot for about two months.

"He is a Democrat," the Commissioner continued, "but not of pronounced affiliations. He is not an army man. I discovered him myself among the names that appeared on a list of applicants for the position of Third Deputy."

"Who recommended him to you?"

"At my request Mr. Mathot brought me very strong recommendations from Judges in his county—among them Justices Jenks and Gaynor of the Supreme Court. He was also recommended by a number of business men. He is all right, boys."

The new Deputy Commissioner upon his arrival at Police Headquarters spent about half an hour in conference with Commissioner Bingham and then went to his office on the third floor, where "Dan" Slattery, the Commissioner's private secretary, introduced him to the attachés. He had not been there five minutes before he plunged into the work that has piled up since the office became vacant some weeks ago.

"Fire away and ask me any questions you want," he said when the newspaper reporters were introduced to him and wished him good luck.

"Are you a friend of 'Joe' Cassidy?" asked one reporter. This because Mr. Mathot is a resident of the Borough of Queens, where Cassidy is Tammany leader.

"No, nor of 'Joe' Bermel," [the Republican-Municipal Ownership boss of the borough] replied Mr. Mathot. "I am altogether independent."

"Do you enter upon your duties with any preconceived ideas of what to do?"

"The man who is running the department is Gen. Bingham. I am here to obey orders. I'll do the best I can, and if I don't make good I'll throw up the job."

"How did you come to apply for the place?"

"Well, I have been practicing law in this city and managed to pay office expenses and keep a family on what I made, which is pretty good. But this is a thundering big job, and I wanted to try whether I could do a man's work. That's why."

Mr. Mathot was born in this city in 1870. His father is a practicing lawyer. He married Miss Alice Croly, whose father was David Croly, a financial writer. Mr. Mathot himself is of French extraction. He speaks French, Italian, and Spanish fluently. He was graduated with honors from the New York University in 1892. For four terms he has been Deputy Grand Master of the Masonic orders of the Tenth District in this State, which takes in all the Latin lodges.

While the appointment of Mr. Mathot was being announced, Civil Justice Kadien of the Third District Municipal Court of Queens Borough was considering whether or not to give a judgment for the ejection of the Mathots from their home. The suit had been brought by Mrs. Joseph Matthews, wife of an Assistant Corporation Counsel, and owner of the house. It was because the March rent had not been paid. When Mr. Mathot was called upon to pay the rent, he said:

"Fix the furnace and I'll pay."

"Inside repairs are to be made by the tenant," said Mr. Matthews.

"I didn't break your poor, crippled furnace," said Mathot. "You repair the furnace and I pay the rent. That's fair."

"I'll take the case to court and sue out an ejectment," said Matthews.

"By all means, go ahead," said Mr. Mathot. "Don't you want a good lawyer to represent you? I am at your service."

The case has been postponed from time to time at the request of Mr. Mathot, who in the meantime has found a new home across the street to move to if the case should be decided against him.

LABOR TO ENTER POLITICS.

Gompers Says Federation Will Act If Congress Doesn't Respond.

WASHINGTON, March 22.—The Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor spent some time to-day discussing the replies of President Roosevelt and Speaker Cannon to the bill of grievances presented yesterday to them and to Senator Frye, President pro tem. of the Senate, regarding legislation affecting labor interests.

Mr. Gompers said to-night that the closing paragraph in the memorial meant exactly what it said. That is, if Congress fails to remedy the grievances, the organization will appeal direct to the people.

In other words, Mr. Gompers said, the Federation of Labor will enter the field of politics and urge organized labor to elect men of their own choosing, and thus have a personal voice in the government.

There will be further discussions of the situation by the members of the council, among whom the remarks of the President and Mr. Cannon have made a deep impression. Mr. Gompers insists that the council is in the right regarding the statements set forth in the bill of grievances, that it has abundant proof of the representations made, and that the condition of affairs in the labor world everywhere is the best proof of its contentions.

The council to-night made this announcement:

"A representative of large land and moneyed interests appeared before the council with a view to having the federation co-operate with it in the management of an enterprise, it being both mechanical, distributive, and constructural, the entire matter to be conducted under union labor conditions.

"The council decided that it did not undertake to deal in any commercial or industrial enterprise and could not act in any matter affecting the interests of labor other than that as wage earners. President Gompers was authorized to so notify the representative of the concern."

SALOON KEEPER BUYS CHURCH

Pittsburg Liquor Dealer Forces Protesting Congregation to Move.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURG, March 22.—John Cline of 7,311 Butler Street applied for a license to sell liquor at that point last year, but there was such a remonstrance that it was refused. The principal reason for the refusal was that a church was located in the same square.

To-day Cline was back in court again with another application, and there were no church people present to protest. Judge McClung thought this strange, and questioned Cline. He found that Cline had got around the problem by buying the church property and compelling the congregation to move. The court has his application under advisement.

Griggs Dares Him to Show List of Campaign Contributors.

TAGGART READY WITH HIS

Agitation for Reform So Strong Congress May Pass Publicity Bill at This Session.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 22.—The news from Albany that the Senate Judiciary Committee had decided to report the Publicity bill, enforcing the publication of the names of contributors to campaign funds, created considerable interest here and had a boom effect on the prospects of the similar bill now before the House committee which has the bill in charge. Action from that committee is now expected within a short time. It is not at all likely that the McCall bill will be reported as it stands, but it is practically certain that a measure embodying the best features of several bills will come out of the committee.

The proposition to make campaign contributions public did not attract any great attention at first, but it has been making such headway, particularly in view of the agitation in the various States, that it now seems strongly probable that a law will be the outcome at this session of Congress. The Gaines committee has taken up the matter seriously. At first there was some fear that Congress might be treading on the toes of the States, but this fear has been removed, and such action as that of the Judiciary Committee at Albany has had a great deal to do with reassuring the solons here.

The Democrats offer to produce Chairman Taggart of their National Committee if the Republicans will bring Chairman Cortelyou before the committee and throw open the books of 1904. There is no likelihood of this being done, but Chairman Griggs of the Democratic Congressional Committee has offered to have his books for the coming campaign at the disposition of the investigators.

Griggs has opened his campaign unprecedentedly early. It is not customary for a Congress campaign to be opened by either side until toward the close of Spring, but Griggs has had his headquarters open for some time and his staff at work. His activity has spurred the Republicans to preparing for a similarly early campaign. They are to start in with an entirely new slate, Chairman Babcock, Vice Chairman Hull, and Secretary Overstreet having all declined to serve again.

Mr. Sherman of New York is considered the likeliest candidate for Babcock's successor. Until he or some one else is elected, of course, there is no way of telling what effect Griggs's offer about publicity will have upon his adversaries.

Babcock has been the most successful fat-fryer who ever held the Chairmanship of the Congressional Committee. His favorite method has been to come out in an interview conceding the House to the Democrats. Newspapers all over the country then become excited about it, and those financial interests which are opposed to Democratic ascendency begin to get worried. In a couple of weeks Babcock appears in Wall Street with a bag and panniers and comes back to Washington with them, all full.

This year Babcock absolutely refuses to undertake this arduous labor. If his successor pursues the Babcock methods it is entirely safe to say that Griggs's offer of publicity will not draw forth any similar offer from the Republicans. There are those, however, who believe that Babcock's retirement is caused by his conviction that this will not be a good year for fat-frying, and that the contributions by corporations, if not prohibited by law, will be very small.

TO BEAT THE DREADNOUGHT.

Bonaparte Favors a 19,400-Ton Battleship or Two Smaller Ones.

WASHINGTON, March 22.—Secretary Bonaparte apeared before the House Committee on Naval Affairs to-day in support of an increase of the navy. He advocated an appropriation this year for two 16,000-ton battleships, and in case Congress does not see fit to provide for two such ships, he urged the construction of one 19,400-ton battleship. In this recommendation he surpassed Admiral Dewey, who advocated 18,000-ton battleships after the type of the English battleship Dreadnought.

In the main, Secretary Bonaparte's recommendations were in harmony with those included in his annual report. Two scout cruisers were recommended in the report, but he said to the committee that these were not indispensable. He advocated the building of four destroyers at a cost of $3,000,000; two submarines costing $500,000, one gunboat costing $600,000, and two river gunboats at a cost of $200,000.

The Secretary's estimates for construction aggregate $23,300,000. Of this sum, the chief item is $15,000,000 for the two battleships recommended. The cost of the two proposed scout ships, which Secretary Bonaparte said were not indispensable, is estimated at $4,000,000.

GOSLIN AND DUNN HELD.

But Alfred's Brother Is Discharged—Jerome Investigating.

Alfred R. Goslin was held yesterday by Magistrate Wahle in Tombs Court in $1,000 bail for examination to-day on a charge of doing business under a fictitious name. His brother Edmund was discharged.

Charles H. Dunn was held on a charge of perjury made by Goslin after a quarrel some weeks ago.

The District Attorney's office is investigating the operations by which Goslin, it is said, swindled three banks out of many thousand dollars. In his pocket, at the time of his arrest, was found a note with the name of "Irene Magher" on it, which it is said will play a prominent part in the case.

BAKER DEFENDS EXAMINERS.

Charges About Recent Tests for Firemen Unjustified, He Says.

President Baker of the Municipal Civil Service Commission said yesterday that he had received many letters asserting that undue influence prevailed in the recent examinations for promotion to the grade of foreman in the Fire Department. Some writers declare that they heard others brag that they would get a certain figure when their papers had passed through the examiners' hands, and that the results were nearly as prophesied.

President Baker says the insinuations in some cases, at any rate, were unjustified. The figure one man received on his paper would not have passed him for promotion, but five points were given him for bravery, and these points put him above the required figure. In another case mentioned by the letter writer, Mr. Baker says, the papers were among the best turned in in every respect, and honestly so. If any one will send him good evidence of anything wrong in the examination, he says, he will act.

WOMAN INVESTOR WINS SUIT.

Mrs. Bliss Gets $18,000 Judgment Against Fireproofine Treasurer.

As the result of a stock transaction entered into by William H. Bliss, ex-United States District Attorney at St. Louis, Mrs. Anna B. Bliss, his wife, for whom the stock was bought, sued Thomas G. Condon, Treasurer of the Fireproofine Company, and yesterday got a verdict for $18,000 before Justice O'Gorman and a jury in the Supreme Court.

According to the testimony in behalf of the plaintiff, Bliss bought 300 shares of preferred stock of the Fireproofine Company at $60 a share, believing that it was treasury stock, in June, 1900. Later, he bought 200 shares of the same stock, making in all $30,000 he invested. He received in addition bonuses of 150 and 100 shares of common stock.

The plaintiff alleged that instead of buying treasury stock at cost, Bliss had bought stock that Condon had purchased from Abraham White, the inventor of the fireproofine process, at $10 a share, with a bonus of 100 shares each of common and preferred. It was estimated that Condon, besides keeping half of the stock bonus, made a profit of 500 per cent.

Condon contended that Bliss was well aware that he was not purchasing treasury stock, but was buying direct from the defendant.

Mrs. Bliss was represented by ex-Assistant District Attorney Rand and Dos Passos Brothers, while De Lancey Nicoll appeared for the defendant.

The parties to the suit are well known in New York, Boston, and Tuxedo social circles.

Miss Cora F. Barnes is plaintiff in a similar suit for $12,000, which will shortly be called for trial.

A NEW CARNEGIE BRANCH.

It Will House St. Agnes's and Library for the Blind.

A Carnegie building, serving the double purpose of a home for the St. Agnes Branch Library and for the Library for the Blind, is to be opened by the New York Public Library at 444 Amsterdam Avenue next Monday.

The St. Agnes Branch, which has been at 2,279 Broadway, on the corner of Eighty-second Street, for the past six years, was opened in June, 1894, in the parish house of St. Agnes's Chapel, under the auspices of that organization, whence its name. It subsequently became an independent library and removed successively to 520 Amsterdam Avenue, to the corner of Eighty-fifth Street and Amsterdam Avenue, and to the location from which it is just about to remove. It was the first of the small free circulating libraries to follow the example of the New York Circulating Library in consolidating with the New York Public Library, and has been doing a notable work on the upper west side, having now on its shelves about 17,000 volumes and circulating 115,000 annually.

The front part of the main floor of the new building will be devoted to the Library for the Blind, which has now one of the largest collections of books for the blind in the United States.

The building occupied by these two branches is the eighteenth erected from the Carnegie fund by the New York Public Library. There are to be no formal opening exercises, the building being simply thrown open for public use. The building is from designs by Messrs. Babb, Cook & Willard. It has three stories and basement. On the main floor, besides the Library for the Blind, there is the main adult circulating room. On the second floor are the children's circulating and reading rooms, and on the third floor a large periodical and newspaper reading room. Besides these, there are workrooms and quarters for the use of the library staff. The building, with its equipment, cost about $80,000, exclusive of the site, which was furnished by the city.

About ten more of the Carnegie buildings are in various stages of construction.

FAMINE-STRICKEN JAPAN.

Special Meeting of Red Cross Committee to Plan Relief Work.

Advices received by the New York State Branch of the Red Cross paint in constantly darker colors the conditions existing in famine-stricken Japan. According to Mr. Uchida, the Japanese Consul General in New York, the number of starving Japanese is now estimated at between 800,000 and 1,000,000.

As a result of the latest news, a special meeting of the Japanese Famine Committee has been called for Monday. Allowing 10 cents per person per day, the total sum that will be required to save the Japenese country people will be $16,000,000.

Two Japanese food experts have been asked to prepare a food list showing what American staples can be used. E. H. Harriman has volunteered to transport free of charge 2,000 tons of freight on his railroad and steamship lines, via San Francisco and Portland. The San Francisco millers have donated 500 tons of flour, and Louis Klopsch of The Christian Herald has given $500 for stevedore and other charges.

Contributions to the famine fund should be sent to Jacob H. Schiff, Room 500, 500 Fifth Avenue.

MARKETS DISTURB SCHOOLS.

Those Temporarily Housed Near the Williamsburg Bridge Complain.

Because the noise, odor, and confusion of the markets under the Manhattan approach to the Williamsburg Bridge impair the health of teachers and pupils, the Board of Education has been asked to find a permanent home for the children of Public Schools Nos. 97 and 98, now in temporary buildings near the markets.

Associate Superintendent George S. Davis has notified the Board of Superintendents that the neighborhood conditions surrounding some of the buildings are almost intolerable.

"The odors from the markets are objectionable," he said yesterday to a TIMES reporter. "These, together with the rumblings of the cars overhead on the bridge, disturb the work of the school. They affect the nerves of the teachers, and a permanent building remote from these annoyances is urgently needed."

MARCH 1906

ADDICKS'S $40,000 HELD IN SUIT ALLEGING FRAUD

Creditors Could Not Reach His Fifth Avenue Property.

CORPORATIONS IN THE WAY

They Were Really Addicks, Incorporated, Clark, Ward & Co. Partners Charge—Sue for $193,497.

In an effort to exact payment of $193,497 from J. Edward Addicks, the Delaware gas man, which they declare to be the balance due them on a judgment obtained last Spring, three creditors have filed complaints and affidavits in the Supreme Court to attach $40,000 on deposit with the Empire State Surety Company, which sum, they say, is the property of Addicks. The plaintiffs have tied up the money by an injunction, which has been made permanent, so that the surety company cannot turn it over to any one until the case is decided in the courts.

The plaintiffs are James F. A. Clark, Reginald H. Ward, known as "Count" Ward," and Frank A. Shirmer, three of the partners of Clark, Ward & Co., now in liquidation. The affidavits contain an account of a unique series of alleged manipulations of real estate which the plaintiffs assert were for the purpose of delaying and defrauding them of their just dues. The alleged scheme necessitated the founding of two separate corporations, both of which, the plaintiffs aver, are simply Addicks under other names.

The two corporations are known as the Glengariffe Realty Company and the Beacon Hill Real Estate Company. The Glengariffe Company and the Empire State Surety Company are made co-defendants with Addicks in the plaintiffs' new move. The Beacon Hill Company is not a defendant, but is mentioned incidentally in the papers filed in explanation of Addicks's alleged methods of dodging payment.

The plaintiffs got a judgment last May for $219,944 against Addicks as the result of a six-year-old brokerage transaction. They declare that they were able to collect but $19,447 of the amount, for the reason that the Sheriff returned an unsatisfied execution for the balance. They further allege that Addicks was only served with the summons and complaint after a year of effort, and that five more years elapsed before the suit was finally tried.

At this point Addicks's alleged real estate transactions in this city are described. In April, 1902, according to the plaintiffs, the defendant bought a house at 251 Fifth Avenue from the estate of William Black, the purchase price of which was $350,000. Of this, $240,000 was on mortgage. Title was taken in the name of the Beacon Hill Real Estate Company.

This company was organized under the laws of Delaware, with a capital of $50,000, of which, according to the plaintiffs, but $1,000 was issued. The complaints further allege that Addicks is the real and sole owner of the company. It is alleged that the balance of $110,000 for the Fifth Avenue property was paid in cash by Addicks himself, but the real estate company acquired title through one Mary Franke Betts of Norwalk, Conn. This entire transaction, it is alleged, was carried through to hinder and defraud the plaintiffs.

It is set forth that there are but ten shares of the Beacon Hill Company, and that four of these are in Addicks's name, while the remaining six are evenly divided between Frank Allee, a political associate of Addicks, and Charles Frederick Keller, the gas man's private secretary. Addicks is President and Treasurer of the company and Keller is its Secretary.

It is further alleged that on July 12, 1904, Addicks organized another corporation, under the laws of the State of New York, to hinder, delay, and defraud the plaintiffs. This was the Glengariffe Realty Company, whose capital was $10,000. It was organized, the plaintiffs declare, to buy the Fifth Avenue property from the Beacon Hill Company for $10,000 and a mortgage. The plaintiffs contend that the price named is a fraudulent consideration, for the reason that the property is worth fully $250,000 over and above incumbrances.

The plaintiffs go on to declare that the Glengariffe Company later mortgaged the property for $450,000, and that $100,000 was in the form of a building mortgage which Louis A. Riesgo took up, and to secure which the Empire State Surety Company (in which Addicks was not interested except as a depositor) gave a bond for $100,000 after the Glengariffe Company had deposited $40,000 in cash. This is the money the plaintiffs are after.

Early this year the Riesgo mortgage was satisfied, but the Glengariffe Company was unable to get the $40,000 from the surety company, for the reason that the plaintiffs had forestalled the attempt by getting the injunction.

The officers of the Glengariffe Company are alleged by the plaintiffs to be Francis S. Bradley, a Justice of the Peace in Wilmington, Del., President; Matilda Roome, "a married woman, who lives on Mr. Addicks's Maryland farm," Secretary, and J. Edward Addicks, Treasurer.

None of the officers of the corporation lives in this State, hence, the plaintiffs declare, if the $40,000 once gets out of the jurisdiction of the New York courts, that is the last they would see of it.

SUICIDE A PEER?

Man Who Killed Himself in Illinois Said to Have Been a Nobleman.

Special to The New York Times.

WINCHESTER, Ill., March 22.—George Sykes Barton, an Englishman who came to this country in the 90s, and who had since led the life of a semi-recluse, was to-day found dead in a field with a bullet hole in his head and a rifle clasped in his hand. Although there was some mystery as to how he had managed to fire the shot himself, the Coroner's jury returned a verdict of suicide.

Letters left by the dead man bear out the theory of suicide. One of them gives instructions to his attorney here as to the disposition of his property, valued at $50,000 to $100,000, and the other is to a farmhand telling him how to give immediate care to the farm and stock.

Stories long current that Barton was an English nobleman and came here because of an unfortunate love affair were reiterated to-night. It is believed that sorrow, long borne in silence, finally caused him to take his own life. Several years ago it was regarded as proved that he was a peer and heir to a large estate in England.

When he arrived here he announced that he wanted to conduct some experiments in model farming, and for this purpose he purchased 160 acres of choice land, which he cultivated on scientific principles. He was extremely reticent, and would not talk about his past life or tell why he left England, but he is said to have admitted that he was of noble birth.

FOR CONSTIPATION

TO CLOSE SHAM HOTELS.

The Rev. John P. Peters Urges Support for Pending Bill.

The Rev. John P. Peters, pastor of St. Michael's Episcopal Church, issued a statement yesterday to the members of the Committee of Fourteen with regard to the pending bill in the Legislature aimed to abolish fraudulent "hotels" now holding Raines law licenses.

Mr. Peters declares that few rooms added to saloons in order to bring the proprietors into the Raines Law class usually harbor disreputable characters, and that it has been found that in these places there are "conditions of infamy which are simply appalling."

The investigation, he says, showed that from two-thirds to three-fourths of the places do not comply with the hotel provisions of the present law. There are 2,700 of these hotels in New York. An investigation of 1,200 of them showed that 700 were shams which could be put out of business by enforcing the present law.

"The law as it stands," the Rev. Mr. Peters says, "is not enforced and is apparently unenforceable." A slight change in the law, requiring an inspection of all hotels before permits are given for their operation, he declares, would abolish the majority of these places.

A general inspection of hotels thirty days in advance of permits is proposed as an amendment to the existing law. There has been delay of the advancement of this bill, and Mr. Peters urges that direct pressure be brought on the Committee on Taxation and Retrenchment in the Senate and the Committee on Excise in the Assembly to put it on its passage. He declares that the amended measure will be a fair bill for the legitimate liquor business.

FIGHT OVER MADDEN FEES.

Lawyers Fall Out Over the $7,000 Awarded to Them.

Special to The New York Times.

CINCINNATI, March 22.—Suit was brought to-day by J. C. Healey, an attorney, against William L. Dickson, another attorney. Healey alleges that no part of the $7,000 attorneys' fees allowed by Judge Swing in the alimony suit of Mrs. Anna Louise Madden against her husband, John E. Madden, the turfman, was ever paid to him, although he conducted the case with Mr. Dickson for Mrs. Madden.

Mr. Healey asks that a receiver be named to take charge of the $7,000 until the courts can adjudicate the difference between him and Mr. Dickson. Mrs. Madden is made a party defendant on the allegation that she claims some interest in the amount. Mr. Healey says he has been unable to obtain from Mr. Dickson any settlement; that he has proposed that the amount be placed to their joint account until an agreement can be reached, but that to this Mr. Dickson has not consented.

Mr. Dickson declined to-day to discuss the matter beyond the statement that Mr. Healey "wanted all of it."

John E. Madden appeared before Justice Burr, in Part II. of the Supreme Court, Brooklyn, yesterday, and purged himself of the contempt of which he was found guilty last August in refusing to answer questions in connection with his wife's suit for alimony.

Mr. Madden paid a fine of $250 for contempt, but the sentence of thirty days' imprisonment was remitted by Justice Burr. Mr. Madden said he hesitated to make a deposition in his wife's suit because he believed a reconciliation was possible, and he feared the deposition might widen the breach between them.

JERSEY DEMOCRATS REVOLT.

Repudiate the Newark Conference as a New Party Movement.

Many New Jersey Democrats have already repudiated the organization formed at the conference in Newark last Tuesday. Charles C. Black, who was the Democratic candidate for Governor at the last election, withdrew when the municipal and Federal ownership planks were adopted, and his action has since been widely indorsed.

Members of the Democratic League of Essex County are not at all pleased over the result of the conference, and will urge the adoption of a resolution repudiating the new organization.

MUCH-WANTED NURSE GONE.

Recovery of $2,000,000 Jutte Estate May Rest on Her Evidence.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., March 22.—The recovery of the two-million-dollar estate of W. C. Jutte, now in litigation in the courts of Pennsylvania, may hinge on the discovery of the whereabouts of a nurse who attended the man while he was under treatment in 1901 in the City Hospital here, after his first attempt at suicide. Her present place of residence is unknown.

Attorney Pritchard of Pittsburg came here with the intention of obtaining her testimony, to show that Jutte was of unsound mind when he signed the power of attorney which, it is alleged, has been used as an instrument to get control of his estate.

The hospital records do not give the name of the nurse who attended Jutte, and the hospital is unable to give any definite information as to which nurse it was or her name and what has become of her.

When Jutte killed himself last Summer there was a man nurse in the adjoining room, who did not hear the shot.

BANK CASHIER CONVICTED.

Embezzled $84,000 from National Bank—Bank's President Also Guilty.

PHILADELPHIA, March 22.—George P. Brock, former cashier of the Doylestown, Penn., National Bank, was convicted to-day in the United States Court of embezzling $84,000 of the bank's funds. Pending a hearing for a new trial, he was released on $10,000 bail.

The Government charged that the defendant secured various "loans" from the bank by overdrafts without the consent of the Directors.

Henry Lear, President of the bank at the time of its failure, who is a brother-in-law of Brock, was convicted recently of a similar offense. Lear at the time of his arrest was the Republican candidate for Judge of Bucks County. Brock is well known in financial and social circles.

WILLIAM MARINER A SUICIDE.

Shoots Himself at Milwaukee After a Bowling Match.

Special to The New York Times.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., March 22.—After bowling with a group of friends William Mariner, 44 years old, son of Ephraim Mariner, went to his home last night and shot himself through the head. The body was not found until this afternoon, when his non-appearance caused an investigation resulting in the discovery of the suicide.

The Mariner family are among the biggest landowners in the United States, having besides great tracts of improved land in this and other cities, enormous holdings in timber and cutover lands. William Mariner was in charge of the entire real estate interests of his father.

TOO MUCH SEA FOR CAMELS.

And an Ugly Ostrich Pecked Out a Giraffe's Eye on the Lugano.

The steamship Lugano, in yesterday from Hamburg, was a floating menagerie. In her cargo were thirty cages of animals, including leopards, a lion, three giraffes, one ostrich, eight camels, several antelope, a baby hippopotamus, two wart hogs, several deer, a cassowary, a panther, and twenty-eight monkeys. They are consigned to various circuses and zoological collections. The animals, except the ostrich, behaved well all the way across. Only the camels were affected by the tossing of the ship in the storm.

The ostrich attacked one of the giraffes. When the keepers got the bird away the giraffe was minus one eye.

WILL RETAIN FOOTBALL IN NEW YORK SCHOOLS

But the Principals' Athletic Council Will Assume Its Control.

TO ORGANIZE NATIONAL BODY

Proposed to Extend Its Scope to Include All Branches of Athletics Among Schoolboys.

Football will not be abolished in the schools of New York. This decision was reached yesterday by the Principals' Athletic Council at a meeting held at the Board of Education Building, at Fifty-ninth Street and Park Avenue. The game, however, will be controlled along modified lines by the Principals of the schools involved.

The meeting assumed a wider significance than the mere question of the continuance and control of football, although that feature took up three hours' time in discussion. The projected assumption of control of that sport is to be extended as a result of yesterday's meeting to all branches of athletics in vogue among the schoolboys and probably vested in a new National body embracing all the schools in America. Plans are to be drawn on these lines and will be submitted to the Council at its next meeting.

Since the outcry against college football, a certain element in the public and private schools of New York has clamored for the discontinuance of the game. It was for the purpose of securing an expression of opinion that the meeting was called. Prof. Virgil Prettyman, Horace Mann High School, occupied the chair, and Dr. Luther Halsey Gulick of the Department of Physical Culture of the New York Public Schools acted as Secretary. Others present were John Mickleborough, Boys' High School; John Holley Clark, Flushing High School; the Rev. Dr. Cole, Trinity High School; Frank Rollins, Stuyvesant High School; Charles D. Larkins, Manual Training High School; Dr. Wilson, Hudson River Academy; William Verbeck, St. John's School, Manlius, N. Y.; J. G. McVickar, Montclair Military Academy; F. L. Lane, "Poly. Prep." School; Edgar Fauver, Horace Mann School; F. M. Tilden, Erasmus Hall High School; W. R. Marsh, Pingry School and J. H. Denbeigh, Morris High School.

The discussion developed a unanimity of opinion among both public and private schools in favor of a modified football game under more direct control. Present conditions were declared to be wholly unsatisfactory and many suggestions of reform were made. Those favoring abolishing the game were in a hopeless minority. When a vote was taken 12 ballots to 3 were cast not to abolish football.

It was suggested the evils of football were incident as well to other sports, and the plans for its control should embrace baseball, basket ball, field and track sports, and every department of athletics. The sentiment appeared to favor the organization of a National interscholastic athletic league, which should frame all eligibility rules, abolish professional coaches, consider the advisability of employing independent officials for all games, who shall be paid for their services and enforce clean sport.

The question of the inclusion of private and public schools in such a league arose, and the feeling was expressed that no distinction should be made between public and private schools in a National league, but that each city or district should have its league and be represented in a National governing body. This project if carried out would mean the loss by the Public Schools Athletic League of New York of its identity in the larger body.

For the purpose of devising a general plan to be submitted to the next meeting of the Principals' Athletic Council a committee was appointed consisting of Dr. Luther Halsey Gulick, Chairman; Virgil Prettyman, W. R. Marsh, C. D. Larkins, W. B. Gunnison, Erasmus High School; John T. Bachannan, De Witt Clinton High School, and D. H. Campbell, Columbia Grammar School.

BOWLERS MAY SECEDE.

Brooklyn Man Rolls High Score in National Tournament.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., March 22.—To-day's developments in bowling circles seem to indicate a hopeless split between the East and the West as a result of the defeat yesterday of Philadelphia for the next convention of the American Bowling Congress. An Eastern association will be formed, it is said, within the next three months and will hold its first annual meeting either in Philadelphia or New York next year.

The delegates from Philadelphia and New York say they will not attend the American Bowling Congress tournament at St. Louis next year or any subsequent tournament of the congress. Secretary Sam Karpf of the American Bowling Congress takes an optimistic view of the situation, and thinks the trouble will be settled without any split.

J. J. Rowe of Cleveland, ex-President of the American Bowling Congress, filed a protest with the Executive Committee against the action of the Louisville Tournament Association in allowing two-man teams and individuals to bowl before they rolled in the five-man events. This, it is claimed, is in violation of the by-laws. If the penalty prescribed in the by-laws is enforced, the tournament will be taken out of the hands of the local association at once.

The committee took no official action, however, owing to the absence of President Bryson, and the meeting was postponed until to-morrow.

A "special" of individual bowlers occupying the alleys in the National tournament early to-night furnished the most exciting work of the meeting. The highest figures were scored by Walter Tuthill of Brooklyn, N. Y., who, with 675, takes first place in the individual class. His work beats anything in recent years, except that of "Deacon" Jones of Milwaukee, who several years ago rolled 688 at Cleveland, but with a "loaded" ball.

HOPPE BEATEN TWICE.

Gallagher Defeats Billiard Champion by Good Margins.

Willie Hoppe, the world's champion billiardist, was beaten twice last night at 18.1 balk line by Thomas Gallagher in Hoppe's Billiard Rooms, 56 West Thirtieth Street. Hoppe was not up to his customary form in either match, while Gallagher made some brilliant plays.

The afternoon game was won by Gallagher by 347 points to 300 for Hoppe. Gallagher's average was 15 17-22 and his high runs were 57 and 49. Hoppe's average was 13 1-23 and his best runs were 59 and 42. In the evening Gallagher scored 368 to 300 for Hoppe. Gallagher's average was 15 8-24 and his best runs were 64 and 43. Hoppe's average was 12 and his high runs were 65 and 37. The total points for the eight games up to date are: Hoppe, 2,400; Gallagher, 1,488.

THOROUGHBREDS IN TRAINING.

Conditioning Gallops the Order at the Long Island Tracks.

Bright weather and good track conditions yesterday resulted in a large number of horses being shown in training gallops at Gravesend and the other quarters where the thoroughbreds are being fitted for an early campaign. All of the horses are going along now in a way that is entirely satisfactory, and for this time of the year the general health about the stables is much better than usual.

Dick Miller had a number of the horses of Phil J. Dwyer under saddle, and though nothing in the way of speed was asked from any of them they all showed to advantage. Among those shown were Albert F., Red Eye, Jennie McCabe, and Knight Errant.

James Rowe gave some of his two-year-olds that are being pointed for an early start some creditable exercise. Vell and Pope Joan were sent along together for a smart three furlongs in 0:43¼, after having been indulged in a nice open gallop. Umbrella was breezed the same route in 0:43¼, and Idle Fancy stepped the distance in 0:43¾, while Economy and Varrent went faster than any of them, negotiating the three furlongs in 0:42½. Sphinx accomplished his three furlongs in 0:43, and Rollicking Girl stepped her's in 0:44.

Tom Welsh still keeps his charges on the slow side, and those brought out were only required to do a little galloping. Ormondale, winner of the Futurity, and Duenna both went along in an impressive manner.

Of the Bennington two-year-olds shown by Fred Burlew, Blackstone and Sugar Pine each went along for a nice three furlongs in 0:41¼. Clara Duncan went the distance in 0:43¼, and Ellicott was only breezing at the end of three furlongs in 0:41¾.

In all there were almost a hundred horses shown during the day, but it was not a speed day for any of the trainers, and the long conditioning gallops were the order of the day.

N.Y. SWIMMERS' CLEAN SWEEP

Win All Four Events in Chicago Against Western Men.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Ill., March 22.—C. M. Daniels of the New York Athletic Club was the star at the swimming meet in the Central Young Men's Christian Association natatorium to-day, lowering the world's record for the 110-yard swim to 1:06 4-5. The best previous record was 1:07, held by J. H. Tyers of England and made in London in 1897. Daniels made even better time, 1:03 2-5, in the Chicago Athletic Association tank the night before, but the performance could not stand as a record, as the tank is not of regulation length. The Y. M. C. A. pool meets the requirements of the A. A. U. rules.

The other interesting feature on the programme was the water polo game between the New York Athletic Club team and the All-Western sextet. The New York players won by a score of 2 to 0, making a goal in each half. The first goal was made by Trubenbach in 1:30, and the other by Hesser in 1:20. The All-Western team was weakened by the failure of Hammond to appear. The play was fast during the entire game.

The relay race was easy for the New York four and the result was never in question. Ruberl, the New York back-stroke champion, successfully defended his title against Swatek of Central Young Men's Christian Association, setting a new American record of 1:26 2-5 for 110 yards. Summaries:

Plunge for Distance.—Won by E. H. Adams, New York A. C. Distance, 63 feet.

110 Yards on back.—Won by C. A. Ruberl, New York A. C. Time—1:26 2-5. (New American record.)

110-Yard Swim.—Won by C. M. Daniels, New York A. C. Time—1:06 4-5. (New world's record.)

Relay Race, 176 Yards.—Won by New York A. C., (Ruddy, Crane, Trubenbach, Daniels.) Time—1:42.

New Yorks Beat Nashville.

Special to The New York Times.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., March 22.—Hundreds of people witnessed the opening game of the series between the New York National League baseball team and Nashville to-day. The game was well contested, but the New York club had things pretty much their own way most of the time. The Nashville team made its only tally in the seventh inning. Eight bases were stolen by the New Yorkers. Score by innings:

Nashville	0	0	0	0	0	0	1	0	0	—1
New York	0	1	0	1	3	0	1	0	..	—6

Michel Fauth Kills Himself.

Michel Fauth of 528 East Eighty-fifth Street, a real estate dealer, committed suicide yesterday afternoon by shooting himself. Fauth, who was 53 years old, had been sick for the last four months with Bright's disease, and his illness made him despondent. He had been married three times. He married his present wife seven years ago. He was childless, and it is estimated that he leaves a fortune of $250,000.

SHAMROCK III. MAY RACE FOR KING EDWARD'S CUP

Sir Thomas Lipton Makes Inquiry as to Her Eligibility.

TO RACE IF HE GETS CREW

Appearance of Cup Challenger Off Newport Would Probably Mean Entry of Columbia.

After the meeting of the New York Yacht Club last evening, Oliver E. Cromwell, Chairman of the Regatta Committee of the club, made the interesting statement that he was unofficially informed that Sir Thomas Lipton would be a competitor with the Shamrock III. in the race off Newport in August for the cup offered by King Edward VII. From another source it was learned that Sir Thomas had addressed a letter of inquiry to a prominent yachtsman on this side of the water as to whether the Shamrock would be eligible for the race and as to the chances of his securing an American crew and skipper to handle her, stating that he would race if he could get a crew. Her eligibility is beyond question under the terms of the deed of gift of the cup; whether or not skipper and crew can be secured is another question, which Sir Thomas's own experience ought to answer.

The conditions for the race are recited in Section 4:

> Any yacht belonging to any yacht club in the United States in good standing shall be eligible to enter provided that in case of a single-masted vessel she shall be of a water-line length of not less than 50 feet, and that in case of a vessel of more than one mast she shall be of a water-line length of more than 60 feet, &c.

The Shamrock is enrolled regularly in both the New York and Atlantic Yacht Clubs.

The entry of the Shamrock in the race would give the contest an international flavor and an interest even beyond that which it promises in any case to evoke. It would necessitate the starting of either the Columbia or Constitution to defend American honor. It would not be policy to race the Reliance, and such a course would not be considered, but there would be every effort made to get either the Columbia or Constitution into the contest. Shamrock would rate well under the new rule, paying no penalty for her excessive draught, as she was launched prior to Jan. 1, 1905, and would have an excellent chance of lifting the cup.

The decision of Sir Thomas in the matter will be awaited with the keenest interest. If he is to enter the race, his determination to do so will have to be made very shortly, as it will mean considerable time to fit out and tune up the cup challenger after her long rest in Brooklyn.

An announcement of the date of the annual cruise was expected last night, but the absence of Commodore Cornelius Vanderbilt in the South prevented. It was stated that a date about Aug. 1 was proposed to him, but no decision reached on it. The action of the meeting was entirely routine, except for the racing rules, which were adopted as amended last week. There was a disposition to make further amendments, but these were held over till the Fall, when another general conference will be called for the purpose. The initiation fee was raised to $200 and twenty-eight new members elected.

HAND TENNIS AT N. Y. A. C.

Bourne Gains Semi-Final Round of Singles Tournament.

Play in the handicap hand tennis tournament in singles was continued on the court of the New York Athletic Club yesterday, W. D. Bourne winning his place in the semi-final round. Bourne, a scratch player, defeated F. Olsen, also playing from scratch, in a remarkable one-sided match of two sets, the score being 25—6 and 25—14. In this competition Olsen was unable to attain accuracy on his driving, which was very severe, as he hit the ball with considerable force. Bourne used care in placing his returns, and won over his opponent much more easily than was expected.

The first round of the meeting was completed. In one of these matches J. F. Haslin only defeated C. R. Gray after three close and fast sets. W. A. Hines also worked the defeat of W. D. Tracy in the second round in a lively three-set competition. The summary:

Handicap Singles.—First Round—C. F. Naething, (5 aces,) defeated J. C. Kelly, (12 aces,) 25—11, 25—14; J. F. Haslin, (7 aces,) defeated C. R. Gray, (9 aces,) 18—25, 25—16, 25—14; J. L. Fling, (6 aces,) defeated S. G. Averell, (6 aces,) 25—11, 25—21; C. R. Shaw, (6 aces,) defeated G. E. Hamlin, (scratch,) by default.

Second Round—C. F. Naething, (5 aces,) defeated Guy L. Brigg, (8 aces,) 25—10, 25—14; W. A. Hines, (8 aces,) defeated W. D. Tracy, (13 aces,) 11—25, 25—15, 25—18; C. R. Shaw, (6 aces,) defeated J. L. Fling, (6 aces,) 25—11, 25—21.

Third Round—W. D. Bourne (scratch) defeated F. Olsen, (scratch,) 25—6, 25—14.

IRVING SEVEN CHAMPIONS.

School Boy Team Defeated Cutler for Interscholastic Title.

Fast play and excellent team work earned for the Irving School hockey seven the title of interscholastic champions last night on the ice of the St. Nicholas Rink. They defeated the team of the Cutler School by the score of 8 goals to nothing.

From the opening face-off Cutler endeavored to sweep the Irving players before them by a wild dash down the ice toward the goal. It was fast work, but the Irving players did not lose their heads, but by more careful playing and a fine display of team work they edged the rubber disk up to the Cutler goal. Putman and Leak repeatedly shot for the netting, and each scored twice during the first half without allowing the Cutler skaters to score.

There was considerable roughing in the final period of the match. The boys set a fast pace, but Irving's players held to their tactics and won without ever being in serious danger of being scored against. The line-up:

Irving, 8.	Position.	Cutler, 0.
Ralston	Goal	Morgan
Olcott	Point	Rutherford
Morrison	Cover point	Fox
Putman	Forward	Reen
Leak	Forward	Morris
Edeson	Forward	Curry
Randell	Forward	Le Duc

Goals scored—Putman, (3,) Leak, (3,) Morrison, Edeson. Referee—Heinze Hornfeck, Wanderers' Hockey Club.

Columbia Juniors First in Hockey.

Columbia's junior class hockey team won the university championship yesterday by defeating the freshman team at the St. Nicholas Skating Rink by the score of 1 to 0.

The freshmen played a hard game, and made things lively for the juniors. With several 'Varsity players on the 1907 team, it was a surprise that the score was not larger. The summary:

1907, (1.)	Position.	1909. (0.)
Perrine	Goal	Willis
Starbuck	Point	Taylor
Willis	Cover point	Burchardt
Jackson	Forward	Bartow
Armstrong	Forward	Mackenzie
Knight	Forward	Gutman
Lederer	Forward	Kistler

Goals—Jackson. Referee—R. L. Von Bernuth, 1906, Law.

REVOLVER CHAMPIONSHIP.

Lieut. Sayre Defeats Dr. Luckett in National Tournament.

An individual revolver match was the feature last night of the championship revolver tournament which is being held in the gallery of the Manhattan Rifle and Revolver Association, 100th Street and Broadway. Lieut. Reginald H. Sayre, ex-champion, defeated Dr. W. H. Luckett, also an ex-champion, at the twenty-yard range. The final score for the targets was 434 for Lieut. Sayre to 426 for Dr. Luckett.

Thomas Anderton, the ex-champion, who has been shooting each night since the meeting began, completed his targets with the pistol, his total being 440. P. Hanford also completed his scoring with the same weapon, his total being 422.

Among the others who shot with pistol and revolver, but who did not enter their targets, were A. L. A. Himmelwright, J. E. Silliman, E. H. Gray, J. Le Boutillier, and W. H. Greene. The tournament will continue until midnight Saturday in the seven cities in which competitions are being held. At the close the targets will be sent to Springfield, Mass., to be reviewed and judged by the committee.

STADIUM'S LEGAL TANGLES.

Committee Confident Columbia's Difficulties Will Be Dissolved.

The alumni committee in charge of the movement for Columbia's athletic stadium is not discouraged by the legal difficulties in the way of the field's completion, but, on the contrary, is confident that the way will be cleared by the end of the present collegiate term. "Not only have the city officials given their hearty approval to the plan," said a prominent member of the committee yesterday, "but assurances of favor have been received from such legislators at Albany as have had the plan laid before them. There is no expectation of any opposition developing on this score. Further, it is confidently believed that the Secretary of War will grant the permission to extend beyond the present Government lines if it is found to be necessary, when contemplated changes in the original plan are made."

The situation as set forth in the report of former Corporation Counsel George L. Rives on the legal aspects sets forth to the committee:

1. That the State authorities have no power to permit filling west of the Government line unless the Secretary of War permits the extension of the line, now 255 feet west of the railroad tracks.
2. That the city authorities have no power to permit filling in beyond the State line, unless the State authorities extend that line, now 125 feet west of the tracks.
3. That the land is under the control of the Park Department as an extension of Riverside Park.
4. That the Park Department may grant its exclusive use as in the cases of the Museum of Art, of Natural History, and the Public Library, if authorized by the Legislature.

The change of plans probably necessary will be the erection of a stand on the western end to serve as a wind shield, instead of the colonnade and several auxiliary changes. The present plans carry the field out some 400 feet west of the tracks.

OLYMPIC TEAM'S TROUBLES.

Delay in Sailing May Affect Chances of American Athletes.

Many difficulties threaten the American athletes who are entered in the Olympic Games over the delay in sailing, which has been changed from March 31 to April 3. If the present plans are adhered to the members of the team will arrive at Athens two days before the date set for the opening of the games. The original plans gave the team eight days' practice at Athens before the games, but under the most favorable conditions the latest plans will not admit of any preliminary practice. The delay in sailing was due to the detention of the steamer Barbarossa by the Italian Government for the inspection of emigrants. The Barbarassa is due to arrive at Naples on April 16. The team will go overland to Brindisi, and sail from that city to Piraeus on the 18th. With favorable weather Athens will be reached on the 20th.

Manager Halpin is very much worried over the situation. The New York contingent has had the advantage of many indoor athletic meets to keep up their training, but athletes from the different sections of the country, who will join the team in New York the day prior to sailing, have been deprived of these advantages, and the question of their physical condition is a serious one. They will be required to spend at least sixteen days on the water. To offset this Manager Halpin has under advisement a plan which he thinks will enable the men to become familiar with open-air deck training before sailing.

INTERNATIONAL ATHLETICS.

J. E. Sullivan and Britons Propose a Union to Govern Sports.

LONDON, March 22.—James E. Sullivan, Secretary of the Amateur Athletic Union of America and the United States representative to the Olympic Games at Athens next month, to-day discussed with officials of the Amateur Athletic Association of Great Britain a proposal to organize an international athletic union, the primary objects of which will be to agree as to the standing of amateurs, and the acceptance of records established under the rules of the various national associations and the suspensions made by them.

Secretary Sullivan also proposed an arrangement by which international field sports may be held every two years, alternately in the United States and England.

The discussions will be continued during Secretary Sullivan's stay in London, with a view to an understanding after the meeting in Athens.

The postponement in the sailing from New York of the American athletes until April 3 has raised the question here as to whether they can reach Athens in time for the games. Arrangements have been made in case they are late to take the team from Naples to Piraeus in a warship or a private yacht.

Attractions for Seventh's Games.

With the best of the metropolitan athletes entered, the games of the Seventh Regiment to-morrow night in the armory, Sixty-seventh Street and Park Avenue, promise to attract a record-breaking attendance. The features of the meet will be a wall-scaling contest, a rescue race, a 300-yard race for the championship, and a sack race. Such performers as Cimiotti, Pilgrim, Andrews, Myrick, Sheldon, Loeser, Wernecke, and Blackledge will strive for new records. David Darlington, the world's record-holder for the 176-yard sack race, has entered for this event and will give big handicaps to a large field.

Dieges's Military Promotion.

Charles J. Dieges, well known to athletes as a timer at all of the leading games, has been elected Lieutenant of Company F of the Twenty-second Regiment. The final relay race between the teams from the Thirteenth and the Twenty-third Regiments will be run at the games of the Twenty-second Regiment on Monday night. At that time the Olympic badge which Lieut. Dieges has donated as his contribution to the fund, will be presented to all of the athletes who are going to Athens to represent America in the coming Olympic games.

May Be Trouble Over Yacht Cup.

There may be some trouble over the Manhasset Bay Challenge Cup. The Manhasset Yacht Club, the donor of the trophy, wants to change the terms under which the prize is raced for, and the American Yacht Club, the holder, oppose and change. It is said Manhasset will refuse to challenge if the present conditions are continued, although Commodore Alhponse H. Alker's Alera is eligible and could make a good contest for the trophy. If the change is made Commodore Trenor L. Park's Mimosa III. is thrown out.

The difficulty arises from the fact that the Mimosa III. outclasses everything in her class so markedly that no one is anxious for a brush with her. All the boats in her class are going into the handicap class in order to get racing with a chance to win. There is no new yacht eligible except Alera, and she can get in only on a technicality, happening to be launched prior to Jan. 1, 1905.

Dana Wins Pinehurst Golf Medal.

Special to The New York Times.

PINEHURST, N. C., March 22.—The annual club championship tournament of the Tin Whistles Club began to-day on the Pinehurst golf links with an eighteen-hole qualifying round. I. C. Bates Dana of Great Barrington won the medal with a card of 83 strokes for the lowest score. Those who qualified for the match play rounds are:

I. C. B. Dana, Great Barrington, Mass., 83; J. D. Foot, Apawamis, 86; L. E. Wardwell, Camden, Me., 86; L. D. Pierce, Woodland, 86; William C. Freeman, Montclair, 86; H. W. Priest, Tedesco, 87; G. Lee Knight, Philadelphia, 88; H. C. Fownes, Pittsburg, 89; C. L. Becker, Woodland, 90; C. B. Fownes, Pittsburg, 90; J. O. H. Denny, Pittsburg, 91; W. C. Fownes, Pittsburg, 92; George O. Russell, Arlington, Mass., 94; C. E. Cameron, East Orange, N. J., 94; H. W. Ormsbee, Brooklyn, 97; A. I. Creamer, North Conway, 97.

AUTOMOBILES.

LOZIER

LONG LIFE

To the proper selection and correct manipulation of materials is due much of that which makes for long life in a high-grade Motor Car.

To correct design and high class workmanship is due another and perhaps larger share.

And to the manufacturer is due proper recognition for his efforts to combine the best that is possible along these lines.

We believe that the best that is possible spells THE LOZIER MOTOR CAR.

PRACTICAL AUTO TESTS DISPLACE TRACK RACING

Less Spectacular but More Useful Competitions Demanded.

WHAT THE CHANGE MEANS

Auto Club Commended for Its Plan to Encourage Mechanical Invention and Experiments.

With the sole exception of some track features of the contemplated open-air show at the Empire City track in May, not a single race has been scheduled by the automobile interests for the coming season. This surprising fact is elicited from the American Automobile Association, with which rests the granting of race sanctions. Not one application for a permit has been filed as yet. The authorities of the association see in the conditions a striking evidence of a metamorphosis of the competitive spirit, which, although growing instead of diminishing, is taking the form of tests of utility and comfort rather than of the ability to develop high speed freaks of no commercial value.

Not that those whose finger is on the pulse of public interest in the auto believe that such trials as that for the Vanderbilt Cup, or as was held at Ormonde, are likely to be abandoned, but that the whole tendency of contests should be toward the development of motor construction and useful appliance rather than to speed alone. Even the racing cars are indicating clearly the same disposition.

It is the improvement in the cars themselves that has really killed track racing. The high speed developed rendering safety impossible, experts say, has been the primary cause, and the growing interest in quick starting and quick stopping contests and other tests that tend to improve the type, the secondary incentive. Such track events as will be later arranged are to follow these lines in the main, with carburetor and alcohol motor tests, trials of anti-skidding devices, of different tires, of speedometers, and other apparati in which the growing number of automobile owners will be essentially interested. The day seems to have passed when these questions interest only manufacturers, for the public has become learned in technicalities.

The Automobile Club of America, recognizing the logic of the situation, is laying its plans for the development of economy runs and tire tests and other forms of contests which will be largely in evidence this season, and anticipates that there will be a marked advance recorded in consequence in the development of American appliances instead of a reliance on the inventions of Europe, which have grown out of following the same lines in the past few years abroad.

Already American manufacturers have made tremendous strides toward the development of the automobile, and the machine turned out on this side of the water is winning more and more recognition abroad. By its policy of encouraging experimenters and stimulating invention, the Automobile Club of America is determined to raise the standard of excellence to a still higher plane until the American product takes rank as the first international power in motoring.

The Automobile Club of Great Britain is taking the same step and has arranged for extensive tests of tires, speedometers, lamps, and the like, while in France, besides an elaborate endurance trial for tricars and runabouts, Baron Henri de Rothschild has offered a prize for a speed indicator contest to be held early in May. All these straws are taken to indicate clearly the direction of the blowing wind, to which the manufacturers are keenly sensitive.

Automobile Notes of Interest.

Clarence B. Brokaw, Principal of the automobile school conducted by the West Side Young Men's Christian Association, will lecture before the members of the Automobile Club of America next Tuesday evening on "Various Methods of Ignition, Dry and Storage Batteries, and Dynamos."

The first meeting of the new Racing Board of the American Automobile Association will probably be held early next week. Sidney S. Gorham, Secretary of the A. A. A., will be in the city then and he will attend the meeting. It is barely possible that President John Farson will come to New York from Chicago for a few days also.

The Contest Committee of the National Association of Automobile Manufacturers will probably hold another meeting before the April conference of the Directors. Several suggestions for the Glidden Cup route have already been made to the American Automobile Association, and these will all be considered by Paul Deming, the new Chairman of the Touring Committee, at the first meeting of his board. His entire committee will be announced in a few days.

An additional tendency of the uptown automobile movement was shown last week when the Cadillac Company, which has been located for three years in Thirty-eighth Street near Broadway, moved to its new building at Broadway and Sixty-second Street. The four floors will give the company 36,000 square feet for automobile purposes. Delivery wagons will be kept in the basement.

Sidney S. Gorham, Secretary of the A. A. A. and Chairman of its Law Committee, has issued a general statement to all members notifying them of their legal privileges in the association. The Law Committee offers to advise all members who request it of their legal rights in respect to civil or criminal actions, and more attention will be paid to these matters than in the past.

Acquitted of Netting Ducks.

Special to The New York Times.

EAST MORICHES, N. Y., March 22.—The suit heard here to-day to recover damages for the illegal netting of ducks failed. The State Game and Fish Commission, represented by Surrogate Belford, sought to recover $200 damages from Gilbert Raynor, a native fisherman, for the alleged catching of wild fowl in his nets opposite this point. Dr. Richardson, a prominent New York sportsman, was the chief witness for the plaintiff, he testifying to having seen Raynor through a telescope removing birds from his nets. The defendant's counsel, Robert Pelletreau, contended that at a distance of half a mile it was impossible to identify the birds as ducks. A number of old baymen and South Beach life savers supported this contention by their opinions given as experts. The jury, after a brief deliberation, rendered a verdict of acquittal.

TEACHER STOPS GAMES.

Recreation Meet Abruptly Ended Owing to Referee's Decision.

Owing to a decision of Referee G. B. Markham, in which Miss Cumming, the Principal of Evening Recreation Centre No. 158, did not coincide, the dual meet which was in progress last night between that centre and Recreation Centre No. 159 came to an abrupt end. The contest was held in the gymnasium of Centre No. 158, Avenue A and Seventy-seventh Street.

The difficulty arose in the forty-yard dash for juniors, which was won by E. Dempsey of No. 158. The referee claimed that Dempsey stole a yard before the pistol was fired, and he compelled the race to be run over again, this time the victor being W. Bell of the same school. Miss Cumming protested against this action, claiming that the start had been a fair one, and when the referee insisted on carrying his point Miss Cumming promptly refused to allow any more events to be concluded. She therefore forfeited to School No. 159 the junior and senior potato races and both of the half-mile runs. Recreation Centre No. 159 therefore won the meet handily by a score of 58 points to 14. The summary:

40-Yard Dash, Junior.—Won by W. Bell, Evening Recreation Centre No. 158; M. Bretner, Evening Recreation Centre No. 159, second; E. Brown, Recreation Centre No. 159, third. Time—0:03 4-5.

40-Yard Dash, Senior.—Won by Y. Coralis, Recreation Centre No. 159; J. Mullohey, Recreation Centre No. 158, second; G. Heamsath, Recreation Centre No. 159, third. Time—0:03 2-5.

High Jump, Junior.—Won by G. Walsh, Recreation Centre No. 158, 5 feet 2 inches; C. Benz, Recreation Centre No. 159, second, 5 feet 1 inch; B. Dunley, Recreation Centre No. 159, third, 4 feet 11 inches.

High Jump, Senior.—Won by R. Dorion, Recreation Centre No. 159, 5 feet 8 inches; G. Dorion, Recreation Centre No. 159, second, 5 feet 7 inches; H. May, Recreation Centre No. 158, third, 5 feet 6 inches.

N. Y. AMERICANS' CLOSE CALL.

Beat the Birmingham Team in an Eleven-Inning Game.

Special to The New York Times.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., March 22.—In spite of the fact that the New York Americans outbatted the Barons this afternoon and made fewer errors, had there not occurred two bad throws the locals would have won. As it was, at the end of the eleventh inning the Highlanders scored the winning run when Alcock threw badly to first base. Moriarty, batting for Hughes, connected safely in the fifth and scored from third on Montgomery's bad throw to Matthews. Chase scored the winning run, he, having a drawn a pass, stolen third, and coming home with Alcock threw badly to first.

The Barons' score was made in the sixth inning. Smith hit to centre for a double and took second on Elsey's short single to right. When Kleinow attempted to catch Elsey stealing second Smith, who was playing wide of third, had an easy access to the home plate. The score:

COLUMBIA ROWING CHANGES.

Only One Eight for Annapolis—Crews May Get on the River To-day.

Announcement was made by Coach Goodwin of the Columbia crew yesterday that on May 19 he would send only one eight to the Annapolis regatta instead of two, as has been the custom. The reason for this change, Mr. Goodwin explained, was the fact that by sending two crews to Maryland, too large a number of men were unnecessarily kept in training. This year also the squads will be cut down much earlier than usual in order to get the 'Varsity eight in working shape for as long a time as possible.

Mr. Goodwin further stated that he hoped to get the men out on the water to-day if possible, keeping two 'Varsity and two freshman shells working every day until he cuts down the candidates. The men will be worked out on the Harlem until June 4, when the first crews and substitutes as picked by him will go to Poughkeepsie.

Yachts Banzai and Phryne Sold.

There will be five new owners for the New York 30-footers next season and perhaps six. Three of the crack boats have already been sold and negotiations are pending for two, while a third may change hands. The latest sale was a big surprise, Newbury D. Lawton selling Banzai to Clifford Mallory of the Indian Harbor Yacht Club. The boat will not go out of the club, however, for her new owner has joined the New York Yacht Club.

Harry L. Maxwell's Phryne has been purchased by C. D. Wetmore of the Seawanhaka-Corinthian Yacht Club and will continue to race in the class, while Tabasco, which was sold out of the club last year by Harry F. Lippitt to J. B. O'Donohue, has passed on to W. Barklie Henry.

The clubmen will not say what boats are the objects of the pending negotiations.

N. Y. U.-Penn Gymnastic Meet.

The gymnasts of the New York University and University of Pennsylvania will meet in the New York University "gymn" at University Heights this evening, and as the intercollegiate championships are only a week away, the performances of the two teams to-night will give a good idea as to their chances of winning in the big event next week. Against Penn the local institution will be represented by these students:

Parallel Bars—G. W. Bartelmez, A. Schnall, and J. Fernandez.

Side Horse—E. J. O'Brien, J. Fernandez, and S. Rosenblum.

Flying Rings—S. C. Ketcham, L. Greenfield, and D. Kingsley.

Tumbling—W. Williamson, W. E. Thompson, and J. A. Shiras.

Club Swinging—G. P. A. Brayden and L. P. Sanger.

Columbia Baseball Squads Reduced.

Owing to the fact that weather conditions will keep the Columbia 'Varsity baseball aspirants indoors for several weeks, Coach Lauder has decided to cut down both the 'Varsity and freshman squads to about half thier original size. Lauder's first intention, as he expressed it, was to take all candidates out on the field before he did any pruning, but the lateness of the outdoor season has compelled him to reduce the squads in order to give the pitching candidates more attention.

Lewine Defeated Bartels at Pool.

A. Lewine defeated J. Bartels last night in the pool tournament at the Broadway Billiard Academy by the score of 90 to 67. Both players were handicapped at 90, but Lewine made a runaway match and won with ease. Lewine's high run was 17, without a scratch. Bartels's best run was 18, with two scratches. Dr. Arnold (85) will meet E. Knowles (100) to-night.

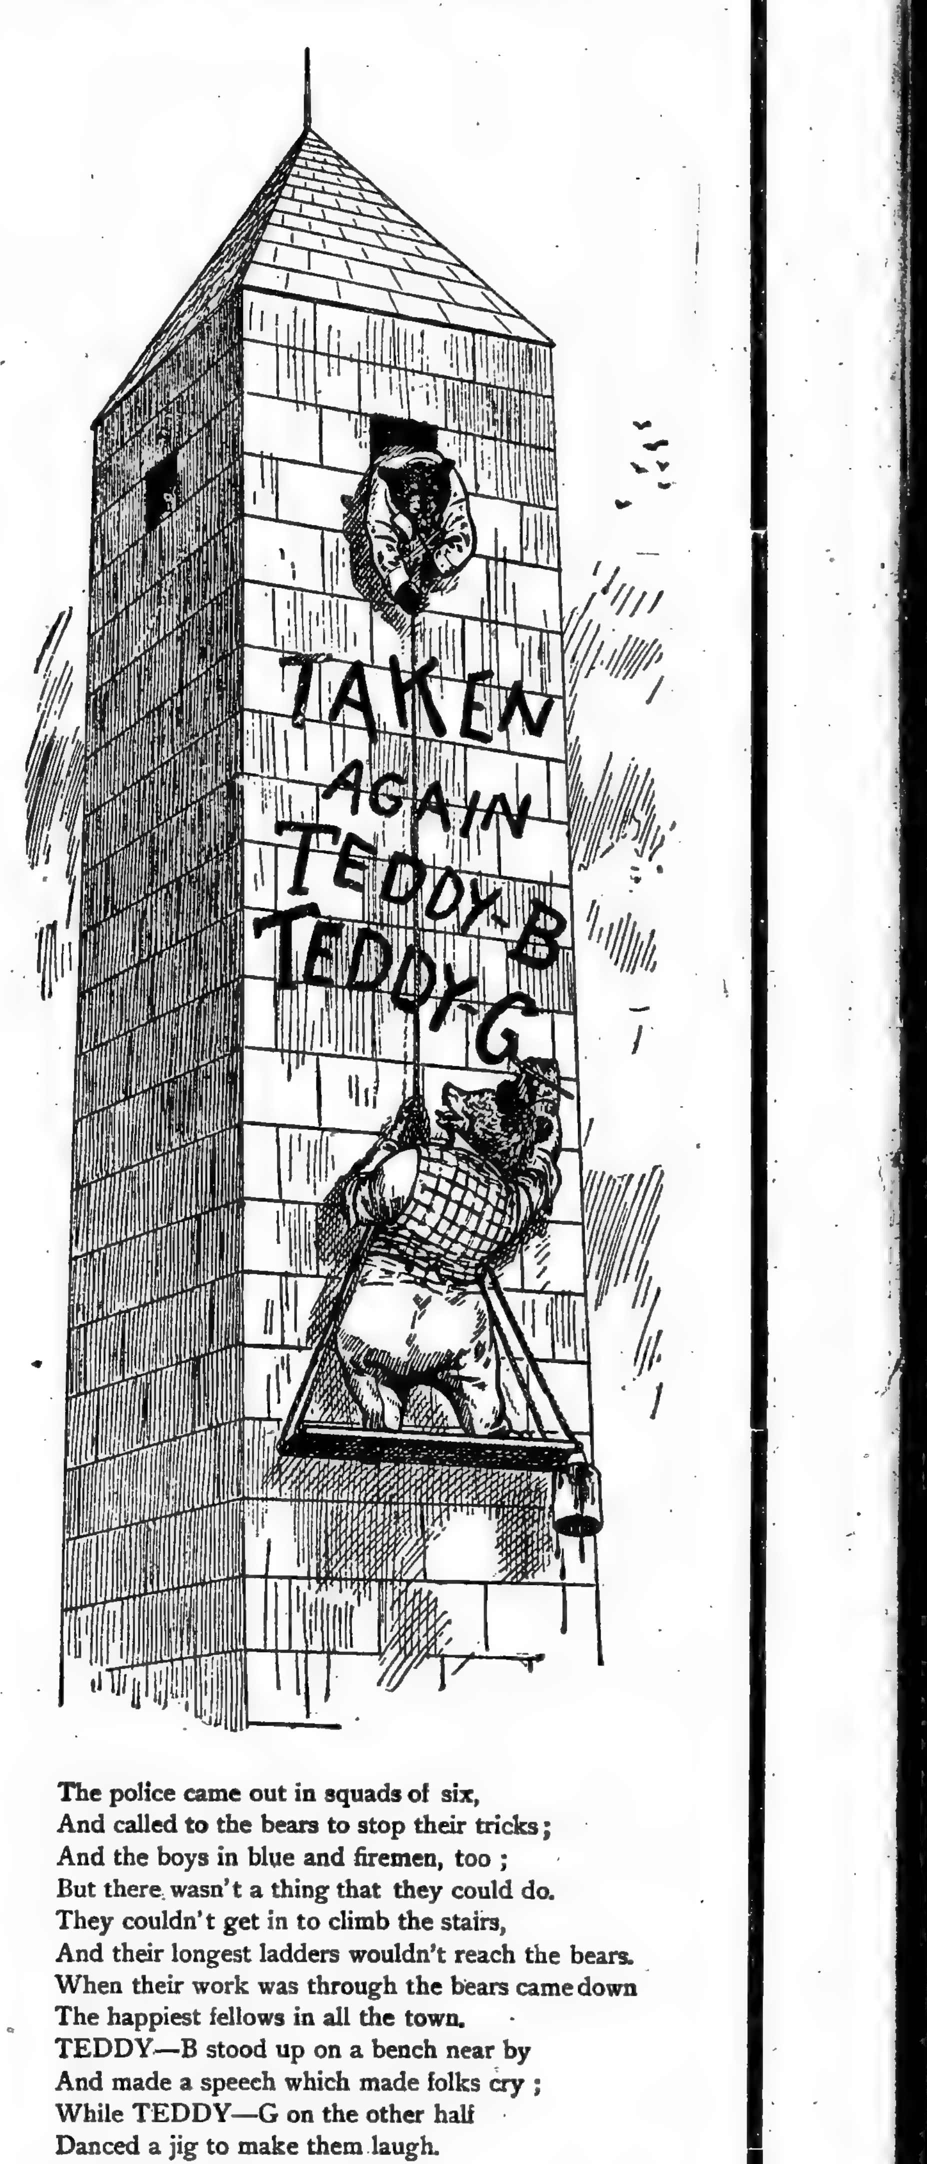
THE ROOSEVELT BEARS

AT

BUNKER HILL



The police came out in squads of six,
And called to the bears to stop their tricks;
And the boys in blue and firemen, too;
But there wasn't a thing that they could do.
They couldn't get in to climb the stairs,
And their longest ladders wouldn't reach the bears.
When their work was through the bears came down
The happiest fellows in all the town.
TEDDY—B stood up on a bench near by
And made a speech which made folks cry;
While TEDDY—G on the other half
Danced a jig to make them laugh.

Athletes at "Jim" Robinson's Funeral.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., March 22.—James Robinson, who was Princeton's athletic trainer for six years, was buried this afternoon with a very impressive ceremony. Many of the young men who were trained by "Jim" were on hand to attend the services, among them being "Bill" Edwards, Captain of the '99 football team, and Tracy H. Harris, '79, of the Athletic Advisory Committee.

The students of the university sent many beautiful floral offerings. "Mike" Murphy, University of Pennsylvania's trainer, came from Philadelphia.

After the church services the interment took place in Witherspoon Cemetery under the direction of J. D. Lawrence.

THE OPENING GUN OF 1906.

The first shot in the Congressional campaign of this Fall is one which ought to be heard around the world. We refer to the Ways and Means Committee's fearless declaration that no hated alien shall be allowed the privilege of selling here any one of some fifty-seven articles upon which the duties range up to 251 per cent. We import in this category $7,782,456 worth of goods upon which we pay duties of $8,216,692. That is to say, the duties exceed the value of the goods, and Mr. WILLIAMS was unpatriotic enough to suggest that no more duties should be collected in excess of 100 per cent ad valorem.

He did not argue the suggestion, which he seemed to confuse with an axiom. Neither did the committee indulge in any useless defense of its impregnable refusal to permit Americans to buy anything cheap which can be made dearer. It was high time that a firm stand should be taken. Here, for example, are glass goods paying sundry rates between 100 and 150 per cent., and here are the robber railways reducing rates below those which they charge upon the American product in order to enable other faithless Americans to buy cheap glass, or at least competitive glass, for of course there is no cheap glass inside the tariff. That is not what the tariff is for. If the duty should be reduced, it is impossible to say how much building might be stimulated, and it is better that building should be checked than that buildings should be put up with foreign glass windows.

Then there are wools of a sort not producible here economically and which might be woven in mixtures with American wools if they could get past the Custom House as cheaply as 100 per cent. duty. Some might argue that this would stimulate the demand for American wools, and others may point to the fact that there are fewer sheep than under free wool as an example of the folly of extravagant duties. But these are foolish arguments. Principle is everything, and it is better that the wool duty should be raised to 1,000 per cent., even if it killed every American flock of muttons, than that a single tariff schedule should be altered, even in a comma. Then there are flannels, and dress goods, and wearing apparel—shall the duty upon these be reduced to 100 per cent.? Perish the impious thought! Every Republican knows that the tariff is levied to equalize wage conditions, and to prevent competition with such pauper labor as does not pass Ellis Island. If the Ways and Means Committee should permit the duty to be reduced to the value of the goods, it would be an entering wedge, and soon some logical and foolish person would suggest that the tariff should be reduced to the cost of the constituent labor, and to argue that all customs in excess of that is extortion. Mr. WILLIAMS's idea may be useful among the weak-minded people who may listen to him upon the stump, but they are made of sterner stuff at Washington. They know what is good for us better than we know ourselves. The Ways and Means Committee is composed of learned and high-minded patriots, who have no idea who pays campaign contributions, and who vote unanimously for regulation of railway rates. Why should customs be reduced to 100 per cent. when railways are allowed to charge a cent above cost—their exact profit, by the way—for hauling a ton of freight five miles? It is the railways which are ruining and corrupting us, not the trusts and the tariff. The opening gun of the Congressional campaign just suits us.

THE PUBLIC PROSECUTOR.

District Attorney JEROME talks in allegories, metaphors, and tropes. When he said that, having himself determined that the giving of campaign contributions by insurance company officers was not larceny, he is nevertheless willing to turn over all his evidence and his power of subpoena and a staff of servers to any newspaper that wanted to undertake the prosecution, we must assume, that he did not at all mean what he said, but only meant by the utterance to emphasize the expression of belief that his law was sound.

We have no doubt that his law was sound. He stated the matter admirably. But there is altogether too much loose lawing by newspapers for advertising purposes. The District Attorney is put in office and paid to be the public prosecutor. He cannot with propriety turn over his functions and his facilities to newspapers, yellow monthlies or weeklies, reform associations, or professional agitators. If criminals are to be prosecuted he is the man to prosecute them. When he says there is no case that ought to end the matter. If the Grand Jury doubts his law it can force his hand. But it is no business for a newspaper.

THE MEMORIALS OF LABOR.

Mr. GOMPERS and the other representatives of organized labor heard some plain talk when they visited the President the other day to present their memorial. We hope they will profit by it, but we have our doubts. Organized labor appears to be growing more unreasonable, not less so, and admonition and wise discourse appear to be wasted upon it.

Even the President, owing to his preconceived notions, showed too much of the compromising temper in some passages of his remarks. He criticised his visitors for bringing to him a memorial complaining of the acts and policies of Congress. "I cannot consider," he said, "any petition that you make that reflects upon the co-ordinate branch of the Government." But he had just told Mr. GOMPERS and his friends that the Anti-Injunction bill was a desirable piece of legislation, and he sincerely hoped that it would be put through, though he thought it had no chance. The Anti-Injunction bill is an attack upon a co-ordinate branch of the Government, the Judicial Department, to wit. The President and the supporters of the Hepburn bill have all Winter been more or less directly, some of them very directly and almost ferociously, assailing the Judicial Department and expressing their want of confidence in it. They want to make the Inter-State Commerce Commission supreme in its control over thirteen billions of railroad property without any interference from the courts, without any right of appeal against wrongful, oppressive, or unlawful decrees. The supporters of the Hepburn bill are doing almost infinite mischief by engendering and spreading distrust of the judiciary.

It is a good thing that the President has gone on record in his declaration that he would apply for an injunction against a labor organization guilty of wrongful acts as quickly as he would against so many capitalists. It is only when labor is doing wrong or threatening to do wrong that injunctions are sought to restrain it. The President reminded his hearers that, although the Government had often imposed the restraint of the injunction upon capitalists, it had never invoked that power against labor. Everybody will hope that no occasion will arise which would warrant the issue of an injunction at Federal instance, but if such a case should present itself during a possible coal strike, or otherwise, the President would be reminded of his pledge. Mr. ROOSEVELT spoke well and soundly upon the subject of immigration. Of the right kind of immigrants we cannot have too many, "we should have none at all of the wrong kind":

> We must not let our natural sentiment for succoring the oppressed and unfortunate of other lands lead us into that warped moral and mental attitude of trying to succor them at the expense of pulling down our own people. Laws should be enacted to keep out all immigrants who do not show that they have the right stuff in them to enter into our life on terms of decent equality with our own citizens. This is needed first in the interests of the laboring man, but furthermore in the interests of all of us as American citizens. For, gentlemen, the bonds that unite all good American citizens are stronger by far than the differences, which I think you accentuate altogether too much, between the men who do one kind of labor and the men who do another.

For the sturdy and the capable, for producers, for those who "have the right stuff in them," there is a welcome in America. The time is past when we can permit ourselves to be made a refuge for the wrecks and failures of other civilizations.

"THE IMMUNITY BATH."

The President, his Commissioner of Corporations, Mr. GARFIELD, and his Attorney General, Mr. MOODY, have lost their case against the officers of the Beef Trust, who were indicted by the Federal Grand Jury in Chicago for criminal violation of the Anti-Trust act. And it is the Administration's fault. In the opinion of Judge HUMPHREY, deciding the case, the prosecution committed the insufferable blunder of first compelling testimony from all the packers against themselves, thus giving them immunity against criminal prosecution under the Federal act of 1893. Attorney General MOODY has strenuously argued that the testimony of the packers was voluntary; that their counsel, who is JOHN S. MILLER, was asserting the right of trust officials to serve upon the Commissioner of Corporations simply a statement of their companies' misdeeds and go scot free. Mr. MOODY expatiated on this point:

> I can fancy Mr. SWIFT and Mr. ARMOUR meeting in Washington some other great magnate who has been there and who has washed in what I may call "Miller's bath"—because they would go as they go to Carlsbad or to the French Lick Springs in order to cleanse themselves of misdoing. I can imagine them meeting and saying: "Good morning, good morning, Brother ROCKEFELLER, have you had your immunity bath this morning?"

But the opinion of Judge HUMPHREY makes it plain that it is not the "Miller bath," after all, but the "Garfield bath," to which the sinners of the Beef Trust do most resort for cleansing in Washington, and > plunged beneath that flood

> Lose all their guilty stains.

Here is Judge HUMPHREY's ruling:

> GARFIELD came to the defendants and held up before them the powers of his office. They did not go to him and volunteer anything. Now, since the defendants volunteered nothing, but gave only what was demanded by an officer who had the right to make the demand, and gave in good faith under a sense of legal compulsion, I am of the opinion that they were entitled to immunity.

This places the Administration in a position which is not enviable. The real offenders, of course, are the individual members of the companies. The corporation may be fined, but it cannot be sent to prison; and so long as its officials are not held personally accountable it may continue to violate the law. There have all along been rumors that the prosecution of the officers of the Beef Trust was not originally contemplated, and that it was not finally undertaken in good faith. The packers are reported to be jubilant over their victory, but very bitter against President ROOSEVELT, whom they charge with violating a pledge made to them "through three leading Republicans" that if they consented to give certain information to Commissioner GARFIELD this evidence would not be used against them. They were then persuaded that their testimony rendered them immune—and the event has shown it. It is believed that they "made their peace" with the President in the campaign of 1904. Did the Beef Trust make a contribution to Mr. CORTELYOU's fund as a token of appreciation by its officers of the very complete washing they had received that Summer in Mr. GARFIELD's "immunity bath"?

SUBPOENA-DODGING.

What is the use of being a "magnate" if you are at the same time a fugitive from justice? "The richest man in America" cannot eat more meals than his humbler fellow-citizens. He cannot wear more clothes, at least at once. He cannot drive in more automobiles, at least at once, than his fellow-citizens who are only fairly well-to-do. He has aspired to being a "plutocrat," it must be assumed, for the purpose of winning respect and esteem among his fellow-men for his success. What is the good, if the Attorney General of Missouri insists upon "wanting to know, you know," insists upon it to such an extent as to keep the plutocrat cooped up in his own grounds, like the Pope in the Vatican? Only the Pope stays in the Vatican as a sulker. And the plutocrat dodging the process server presents himself in the light of a skulker.

Truly, these are evil days for "magnates." Mr. TILFORD is not a magnate of the first rank, not in the Rockefeller, or even the Rogers class. But he is, shall we say a "datto," and at any rate he is conspicuous enough to be obvious to the impertinent curiosity of the Commonwealth of Missouri. The Attorney General of that Commonwealth seems to think that Mr. TILFORD could, if he would, tell some tales more agreeable to the Attorney General than to Mr. TILFORD himself and his associated dattos and his overlords; and Mr. TILFORD seems to share that belief. At any rate, he, too, had been dodging the subpoena server with diligence and success until the other day, when the server caught him on the fly between his house and his automobile. We do not believe the story of one of our esteemed contemporaries that, in revenge for being "served," the datto in question willfully closed the window on the process serving wrist, and dragged the process server at his chariot wheels for a block or two. No doubt, as SHAKESPEARE has it, > the nature of ill news

> Infects the teller;

though it is more apt to infect the paying than the receiving teller. The closing of the sash was not the springing of a trap, but only a natural movement of impatience, we are glad to believe, and when Mr. TILFORD found he was really hurting the man, we have no doubt he let him go. But that he was served with a subpoena, to his own great disgust, we fear there is no doubt.

Then there are the Beef Barons and the Hog Products Kings. The Attorney General has objected to allowing them to dodge subpoenas even by "serving confessions." If his contention be sustained, they will be reduced to the necessity of resuming the agile but not exhilarating exercise of evading the process server. And the court distinctly lays it down that, while their natural persons are rendered immune by confession, the artificial persons which they corporately constitute are still liable to pecuniary amercement. Although the natural persons would no doubt dislike imprisonment, the natural persons also object to paying fines as artifical persons. Wherefore we expect that the process of subpoena-dodging will continue to prevail among them.

You cannot call that an enviable condition in which a man, because he has "large interests," is compelled to resort to small subterfuges. It is by no means good for the artificial persons, nor for the natural persons who compose them, that the natural persons should go into hiding in order to avoid telling what they know about the artificial persons, and what the law which constitutes the artificial persons, and by favor of which they alone exist, gives its officers the right to ascertain. Subpoena-dodging on the part of officers of corporations is calculated greatly to injure those corporations in that public opinion which, in the long run, directs not only the enforcement but the making of the laws. The conduct of the "magnates" whom corporate wealth has made so is by no means adapted to commend themselves or their corporations to public favor.

BUSINESS AND BIGAMY.

It was remarked, not long ago, in the case of a man who aspired to head a great corporation, how the disclosure of a private offense which by no means went directly to his business capacity or to his business integrity was fatal to his aspirations.

In that case the offender was a bigamist only in intent. But we have now the case of that banker in Brooklyn who is a bigamist in fact, and by his own confession. His "business record" proper seems to have been not only perfectly clear but highly creditable. He had worked himself up to be the President of an important bank with branches and extensive connections, and his commercial "rating" is without doubt high. But it appears, and appears most curiously, and by his own negligence, apparently, that he was maintaining two wives within a short distance of each other.

His explanation is an aggravation of his offense. His explanation is that he thought the first wife was dying when he married the second. This confession adds nausea to the resentment which the fact of the bigamy was adapted to excite. The case differs from the other to which we have referred in that it seems that, whereas the Brooklyn malefactor had committed a legal felony, the Pennsylvanian offender had committed no legal offense at all. But that makes no difference in the result. There are certain iniquities so humanly revolting that they cut off the offender from business as well as from social recognition, and make an end of his career, whether they are legally punishable or not. That is the case with both these offenders. It is good that it should be so, and that men should be warned that social penalties for crimes against society may be as terrible as any legal penalties could be, and far more certain and effective, when the case is once made plain.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

"Best Cent's Worth in the World."

Mr. CARNEGIE's warm commendation of our remarks on the subject of spelling reform was, naturally, not the less appreciated by us because he added to it the expression of his opinion that THE TIMES, to quote him exactly, is "the best cent's worth I know in the world." If subjected to sufficient pressure—as much, say, as has been exerted by committees and courts recently upon certain people of a modesty as inveterate as our own—we might be led to admit that we have long believed THE TIMES to be the best cent's worth in the world known to anybody, but, of course, that is not for us to say under anything less than irresistible compulsion—which has not yet been applied. Mr. CARNEGIE, however, not only has an unquestionable right to his opinion as to the value of this paper, but his opinion of values, whether of cent's worth or million dollars' worth, is so well based on long experience and wide observation that we would not dream of charging him with inaccuracy, and we feel confident that other people will not do it either. As for spelling reform, it is evident that, as usual, Mr. CARNEGIE has done a lot of investigating and thinking before organizing his board of simplifiers and providing them with the funds requisite for carrying on their work effectively. Not content with trusting to his own intuitive feeling that the way to spell a word is to spell it, not to make it a sort of letter-cairn showing all the ways it has been or might have been spelled in centuries past, he called upon a great company of recognized word-sharps to reason the whole thing out for him and to convince those whom he calls "the purists" that while they have altogether too many letters to stand on, they haven't more than half as many legs as are needed for the maintenance of a firmly upright posture. But Mr. CARNEGIE, embarrassingly practical and logical man that he is, made even us totter just a bit when he said that, having nobly advocated a simplified spelling, we ought at once to make a beginning of the good work by the substitution of "tho" for "though." That is one of those irritating suggestions that can neither be followed nor proved unwise. At any rate, it doesn't seem at the moment as if we could follow it, and yet the reasons for not doing it, believing as we do, are not easy to find and very hard to formulate. As it is, however, we do spell simply quite a lot of words that "purists" spell complexly, and can comfort ourselves with the thought that if our spelling might be more sensible than it is, it also might be less. And that's something.

Humor Hot from the Gridiron.

Among the merry jests which enlivened the recent dinner of the Gridiron Club in Washington was one at which Mr. CORNELIUS N. BLISS smiled appreciatively, but, as some of the observers thought, just a bit laboriously. A little group supposed to be stray visitors convoyed by a Capitol guide were led into the banquet hall and the answers to the questions they asked permitted the saying of many more or less true things disguised as levity. In the course of this amiable proceeding one of the wanderers, supposed to be a business man, inquired if the Treasurer of the Republican National Committee was present, and when Mr. BLISS was pointed out to him gravely said: "Well, he has an easier job than the next Treasurer will have!" This struck the assembled company as distinctly humorous, and their laughter was instant. It doesn't take much thought to reveal either the truth or the humor of the statement—nor much to reveal that it would have been almost or quite as funny if it had been turned around. The duties of a Treasurer, one quickly remembers, are, at least nominally, those of taking care of money, not those of collecting it, and, while the next Treasurer of the Republican National Committee undoubtedly will have his labors in the one direction considerably increased and made more difficult by recent mishaps to those who in the past have been most amenable to "argument," there is some likelihood that the task his title indicates will be materially lightened and its responsibilities seriously decreased. Another question asked of the guide by the supposed strangers was what reason he could give for the presence of Senator WETMORE of Rhode Island in the upper house. "Oh, there are a million reasons," was the possibly cynical reply. Of the Vice President it was said that "he has nothing to do but sit around and wish he were back in public life," and when it was asked why Justice HARLAN was the only representative of the Supreme Court present, the answer came: "That is as many members of that august body as ever get together on any proposition."

How Charity Is Distributed.

Decidedly interesting information as to how money contributed for the poor is distributed is supplied by an ingenious appeal for more funds just issued by the United Hebrew Charities. It is headed, "An Example in Arithmetic," and the problem formulated reads: What portion of each $10 of my annual contribution to the United Hebrew Charities do I give to each class of its beneficiaries, the 1905 Relief Fund having been distributed as follows?

	Per Cent.
For 1,388 widows and 4,871 children	28
For 1,124 deserted women with 2,817 children	14
For 882 consumptives	17
For 3,229 other sick people	21
For 794 applicants over 60 years of age	5
For 1,940 other applicants	15
Total	100

The "answer" gives the percentages figured out in dollars and cents, as follows:

For widows and children	$2.80
For deserted women with children	1.40
For consumptives	1.70
For other sick people	2.10
For applicants over 60 years of age	.50
For other applicants	1.50
Total	$10.00

This is definite and enlightening. It makes visible the sources and the causes of the need for assistance and their relative proportions.

SMALL TALK OF WASHINGTON.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 22.—In the landslide that befell Alton B. Parker two years ago the district represented for so many years by J. R. Williams of Illinois went Republican, and Pleasant T. Chapman defeated that Democratic warhorse. Since then the people of the district, who had grown accustomed to seeing Williams's name in the papers every few days, have been waiting eagerly and vainly to see Chapman's.

To-day Mr. Dickson of Illinois, also a Republican, called Chapman over to him. He had a bunch of Illinois papers that had just come in.

"Here, Chapman," said he, "is a suggestion in one of my home papers that might interest you."

Chapman took it and read:

> The Democrats of the Twenty-fourth District should take immediate steps to fill the vacancy caused by the election of Pleasant T. Chapman to the House of Representatives.

"What's that?" said Chapman. "I don't understand. Fill the vacancy caused by the—oh, yes, yes, I see."

In his speech in the House to-day Adam Bede was talking about the Administration and its measures.

"I like the President," he said. "I like him because he is engaged in a great work and in a great way. I like him because he permitted a member of this House to break into his private family life without sounding the alarm. I like him because when he got ready to give his daughter away he gave her to a real American, in every way worthy of the gift, and not to some degenerate Prince, who would be unappreciative of our institutions. I like him because when he gave her away he gave her to a member of the House of Action and Correction at this end of the Capitol, and not of the House of Detention at the other."

During a debate in the House to-day Mr. Burton of Ohio, dilating upon the treasures in the Congressional Library, remarked that on its shelves were works of Thomas Jefferson which contained not only his bookmarks, but his thumbmarks.

"Does the gentleman take any pleasure," retorted Mr. Hepburn, "in ascertaining the fact that Thomas Jefferson was not as cleanly in his habits as he ought to have been? Does that improve the public mind?"

"Is Attorney General Moody in?"

"I'll see," said the colored attendant. He went in and took a look and then came back and reported:

"He's in, Sah, but he's takin' a sleep."

"Can't you wake him up?"

The messenger was scandalized. "Why, boss," he said, "it's agin de Constitution to wake him up when he's takin' a nap."

On the attendant's table was an open copy of The Congressional Record. He had been reading the debates on the Rate bill.

"What do you make of the Beef Trust decision?" inquired one of the anti-Administration Republicans in the Senate in the cloakroom to-day.

"I think it proves conclusively," replied the other, "that the President should not take his next Commissioner of Corporations from his tennis court."

The tennis court has replaced the "kitchen Cabinet" in popular Washington terminology. It comprises those who allow the President to beat them in the tennis grounds back of the White House, and of these Garfield is the chief.

The World's Water Supply.

From The London Telegraph.

Prof. Guenther of Freiburg University predicts that the time will come when there will not be water enough remaining on this globe to support human life. We are left to suppose that our shrinking sphere will form caverns in its interior into which the oceans will sink. For a similar reason, as some astronomers believe, there is no man in the moon, the former waters on its surface, if there ever were any, having retired into its cavernous interior. We have no evidence at present of subterranean hollows of any extent, and the earth's crust is continually adjusting itself by earthquake dislocations to the pressures within and without. Besides, nature has provided this planet of ours with a rather large water supply. Nearly three-fourths of the earth's surface—or 144,712,850 square miles—are covered by the ocean, which is reckoned to be of an average depth of at least two miles. The globe must contract enormously and leave some huge cavities before our oceans disappear. At present its crust by no means resembles a rigid arch. It is a wavy curve, the tops of its mountains more than five miles high, and the lowest of its sea floors more than five miles deep. We may safely count on several millions of years before the last man has not a drop to drink.

Justice Extra Dry.

From The Omaha Bee.

The Supreme Court of Kansas tapped a large vat of wrath last week by deciding that a persons who sells liquor is responsible for the acts of the purchaser and clinched the decision by ordering a judgment for $5,000. As Kansas is strictly prohibition there is some mystery as to why the court should concern itself about that which does not exist legally.

FOR WINTER.

When we would fain behold the Spring
Old Winter lingers in her lap,
So we respectfully suggest
Won't some one offer him a strap?

THE ENGLISH WIFE.

She Surely Neglects Her Children, but Does She Hold Her Husband?

To the Editor of The New York Times:

These Sunday scintillations of your "Englishwoman in New York" have interested me greatly from the start, and I should some time ago have taken a part in their discussion were it not for the fact that I have a husband and four children who need my attention and leave me little opportunity for giving vent to my literary aspirations.

I happen to be one of those American wives whom Mary Mortimer Maxwell so aptly describes as "sailing distractedly and determinedly back to their husbands" from England, where I went some years ago to see the sights—and I saw them!

One of the sights that appealed to me was the typical English wife neglecting her children, who slept on the top floor of a four-story house with an English nurse, who dropped her h's all over the place; neglecting almost everything she had in the way of a duty in her endeavor to make herself a "companion" to her husband in order that she might find favor in his eyes. She smoked, she drank, she played golf, bridge, hunted, tramped 20 miles a day when she felt more like being abed; she engaged in all sorts of manly sports, tired herself out, read politics and made speeches for him if he was "standing" for Parliament; gave over the care of her house to the servants—she had excellent ones, I will admit—all with the one end in view, that of doing her "duty" as a wife and holding her husband's affections.

Did she accomplish her end? Does the average Englishwoman keep a tighter hold on her husband's love than the average American woman, who, as Mary Mortimer Maxwell declares, and as I will honestly admit, does shamefully neglect her lord for her little lordlings? Your Englishwoman might give us a few points on this subject. She seems to bristle with points, and with her little Sabbath hammer frequently hits a nail directly on the head. I notice she is not above showing forth some of the weak spots of the Briton, but she certainly has been discreetly silent or evasive in this regard.

She has most delightfully described the typical English lover, who "writes a love letter every day." That is because he has more time at his disposal than the American lover. The Englishman, even the working Englishman, seems to have always a time for everything. I wish our men would learn something from him.

Let us be thankful for the arrival of "Aunt Louisa." It has occurred to me several times that so clever an Englishwoman as this young woman seems to be was in dire need of a chaperon if the proprieties were to be saved. Let an Englishwoman go a little way and she will progress more rapidly than any American woman ever dreamed of doing. She will walk at a steady and sedate gait, but put her on a bicycle and there is no fence so high that she will not wheel over it.

But my own opinion is that your Englishwoman has a husband of her own. The average English girl never wakes up till she gets married, and this new contributor to the Sunday TIMES seems to have her eyes very wide open. C. T. L.

CHATTANOOGA HUMILIATED.

The Lynching of the Negro Johnson as the Local Press Sees It.

From The Chattanooga Times.

The City of Chattanooga is shamed and humiliated, as never before, by the event of last night. A prisoner in the custody of the United States authorities, awaiting a hearing in the court of final resort to test the question of his innocence or guilt—a right solemnly guaranteed to every accused person under the law, and which has been ruthlessly outraged—is taken from the custody of the authorities and wantonly done to death. Aside from the bloodthirstiness of the deed, the people of this community must rest under the odium of deliberately defying the order of the highest court in the land and contemptuously setting at naught the laws of their own State—all brought upon them by the action of a few violent men who, apparently without hindrance or interference, accomplished their murderous purpose. For the crime of which the negro Johnson was convicted no just man has anything but loathing, and he would have hanged for it by due process of law. But it was both right and proper as a human creature that he be not executed as long as there was a scintilla of reasonable doubt as to his guilt. The Supreme Court of the United States believed he had not been afforded all the rights it thought he was entitled to under the law to prove his innocence, and ordered a stay of execution pending a further hearing. In defiance of that order a mob executes him. It is now a question between the mob and the Federal authorities as to what shall follow.

In circumstances of this kind all that the good citizen can do is to bow his head in shame and look for better things in the future. In the presence of the mob spirit rampant in the land we would have nothing to expect but anarchy and ruin; and if something is not done to stay the growth of that spirit, who shall say it will not be upon us full before we know it? It is a time for lovers of law and order and the friends of society and the home to take counsel together and see if something may not be done to check this evil that seems ready and able to run riot at any time its promoters may think it has provocation.

Extravagance of Modern Life.

Why was it, asked Bishop Gore of Birmingham, England, the other evening in a sermon, that the requirements of income were so much smaller in Germany and France than in England? It was, he answered, because the British scale of expenditure was "absurdly and needlessly" higher. Even a modern ocean liner had its luxurious "restaurant a la carte," with facilities for spending $10 or $15 per head. Even the modern hotel in Liverpool or Manchester had now no terrors for the most confirmed gourmet, and its bills caused the millionaire to look at them twice. While as to private houses, it was notorious that the chefs received salaries of $4,000, $6,000, $7,500, and in one case $10,000 a year. Nowadays a dinner costing less than $85 or $200 for a score of guests was fit only to serve at a workhouse!

Truth Will Prevail.

From The Philadelphia Public Ledger.

"Call this bad walking?" said the Oldest Inhabitant, "why in '37 the slush was knee-deep and—"

Just here he sank to his knees in the slush of '06.

"As I was saying," he resumed, when he had scrambled out, "in '37 the slush was hip-deep and—"

At this point he sank to the waist line.

"Thank you, gentlemen," said he to his rescuers, "the truth soaks into me that I'm a liar. Good day."

Two-Cent Postage for France.

After April 16 France will have a stamp of 2 sous (2 cents)—that is to say, a two-cent postage stamp for letters sent within France or to the French colonies. This decision has been taken after a short and sharp struggle between the Chamber of Deputies and the Senate. The new stamp will be printed in two colors, and will bear, like other stamps of the republic, a figure of a woman sowing seed in a field.

The Inner Man Also.

From The Charleston News and Courier.

"When Uncle Joe Cannon gets that pair of No. 8½ boots that a Charleston man has made for him he will be a South Carolinian, externally, from the crown of his head to the soles of his feet."—Chicago Tribune. Never you mind. The South Carolina dispensary is prepared to attend to the "internally" also.

SHORTER SCHOOL GRADES.

Praise for Dr. Shearer's Second Article from a Critic of His First.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Having last week in an interview and a letter criticised Dr. Shearer's first article and his response to Dr. Maxwell, I take pleasure in heartily indorsing his second article. I believe he is exactly right when he says the grades are too long and far apart, so it is impossible to reclassify pupils in the year. I know of only two or three cases in the last five years where a boy in the Boys' High School has jumped a grade, while in that time as many thousands have lost a grade.

The Philadelphia Record of the 14th inst. shows that that city is struggling with the same great problem. A proposition has been referred to the Elementary Schools Committee and that on By-laws and Rules to promote three times a year. This will be a great advance. I think in New York we can do this four times a year. In our high schools a definite record of marks is made four times a year, and at these periods advances or repetitions can be arranged with a little more clerical help. A ten week's period can be jumped or made up when one of twice that length cannot.

Christian Science vs. Methodism.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Does your correspondent of yesterday, W. B. Bull, mean to imply that the unfortunate woman to whom he refers, lost her reason because she joined the Methodist Episcopal Church at West Palm Beach, Fla., or that she would have recovered her reason had she become a member of the Christian Scientist flock? John Wesley is dead, whereas many people affirm that Mrs. Eddy is living. The dead are proverbially always wrong, while the living are right or not, as accidents impose.

To seekers after truth this conflict of two sects as to the responsibility for disturbed mentality offers horrid possibilities—for there are so many sects. C. P. MACKIE.

Status of the Negro.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I want to thank you very much for your very plain and sensible article in yesterday's paper on the status of the negro.

Some people, white as well as black, appear to have gone daft on the subject of negro education and his possible elevation in the social scale. A few words such as your article contains will tend to educate the whites as well as the blacks, and possibly call attention to the main question still unsolved as to what eventually is to be the status of the negro in this country.

Woman Teacher on Board of Education

To the Editor of The New York Times:

It may interest a number of your readers to know that a community on the Palisades not far from Grant's Tomb had the wisdom to accept by the casting of their votes a woman candidate for one of the vacant positions on their Board of Education, consisting of nine members.

The Women's Club is to be congratulated, as it is due to their efforts that an ex-school teacher has been placed in a position where she can pursue in a broader way the high interests of education. W. D.

If the Spaniards Had Done It?

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Referring to the recent killing of several hundred natives in one of the Philippine Islands, suppose that this had happened before our acquisition of the Philippines, and that this "glorious feat of arms" had been performed by Spanish soldiers, is there a single newspaper in this country that would not have condemned it, called it cruel, barbarous, and unworthy of a civilized nation?

I am not finding fault with what our soldiers have done; I am merely asking a question. A. K.

New York, March 21, 1906.

The Root of Many Evils.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The snow contractor complains that 5,000 shovels have been stolen during the street cleaning following the two recent snowstorms, and that each shovel passes current for an average of two drinks. This shows a very peculiar state of affairs—both lax laws and lax police. The purchase of stolen property could and should be made an exceedingly unsafe thing, and in almost every instance the purchaser of such property knows it to be stolen. Stop the Fagin business, and petty thieving will receive a severe backset.

Question of Business Etiquette.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

A large business house receives a letter from a customer concerning a matter of business, and refers to a death in the family as an excuse for deferring action in a certain matter. A maintains the reply should be restricted to the business matter only, and no expression of condolence should appear therein. B maintains the opposite view. C. L. L.

More Glue!

To the Editor of The New York Times:

After suffering in silence for some months over stamps that would not stick my patience is at last exhausted. I want to suggest that a petition be offered to Uncle Sam suggesting that he buy a new glue pot, so that even writing a love letter does not become a burden.

How to Save Coal.

In addressing the Glasgow University Engineering Society the other day the President, G. T. Beilby, said that there are in Great Britain steam engines and boilers with a yearly output of at least 5,000,000 horse power. The coal consumed by these is not less than five pounds per indicated horse power hour, or, on the whole, 40,000,000 tons. By the use of gas engines and steam turbines the coal consumption might be reduced to one and one-half pounds per indicated horse power hour, or, on the whole, to 12,000,000 tons. The saving in coal, therefore, would be equal to 28,000,000 tons, valued at £9,800,000. The cost of making the change need not exceed £50,000,000, or, if the power is to be delivered as electricity, £60,000,000, or respectively $250,000,000 and $300,000,000.

Theoretical economies of this kind, he added, were often disregarded; but in the present instance they would amount to over 16 per cent. on the capital expenditure, and still more would result if one takes credit for more efficient plant reducing working costs.

THE REVENGE OF JONES; Or, Her Fatal Error.

Said Mrs. Jones to Mr. Jones:
"You should not leave me in the lurch;
'Tis shameful I must go alone,
You ought to come with me to church."

Jones heaved one great regretful sigh,
Threw down his paper, dropped his pipe,
Then journeyed with his better half
To hear the preacher's wisdom ripe.

When slowly "Fourthly" started in
His busy brain began to plan
A thing he never owned before—
The outfit of an Easter Man.

He charted for himself a suit,
The very best that could be made,
A tile and cane, scarf, shoes, and gloves,
And then "Amen," the preacher prayed.

Devoutly Mrs. Jones arose,
Nor to her mind did it occur
That Jones had planned so many duds
He had no money left for her.

CIRCUS OPENS GAYLY WITH A NEW THRILLER

A "Death-Defying" Automobile Somersault Mlle. Tour's Act.

ELEPHANTS GET UNRULY

Lively Time at Matinee Due to Lack of Rehearsal—Evolutions and Revolutions A-Plenty.

> Myself, when young, did eagerly frequent
> Shows into which I crawled beneath the tent,
> To see the ten-toed llamaand the yak;
> But never such as this did they present.

When Barnum & Bailey's "Greatest Show on Earth" opened at Madison Square Garden last night there were all the pomp, glamour, and French horn notes that go to the making of a great circus and an absence of all the peanuts, pink lemonade, and rubber boots that make the circus spirits.

If Madison Square Garden had canvas walls the happy ones inside could hear the remarks of the unhappy ones outside, and the unfortunate strugglers at the peep-holes could hear at least the applause and the trumpeting of the elephants. That makes the circus.

As New Yorkers go on Sundays to Central Park for a taste of the country, so every year they go to the Garden for a smack of the three-ring circus. The freaks are there from Zaza, the Fire Eater, to the Lion-Faced Boy and the Wild Man. And the clowns are there, too, dressed differently from the old clowns, but at least with the old jokes. And the bombardoon snores in unison with the groaning horns as the elephant enters in the same old royal, lumbering way, while the whispers of "olliphant—look at the olliphant!" run through the galleries.

Barnum & Bailey's circus is a thing of evolution. To one who attends annually the evolution, though slow, is apparent. The trapeze performers swung last night with an extra somersault between grips, and in the chariot races the horses with the prettiest colors won. But Time had a finger in the pie. The automobile age is here, and the automobile was at the circus. There used to be trick riding on dashing horses; last night the Lowes did trick riding in an automobile.

And even in the automobile was evolution. Last year the audience held its breath until the lungs were strained and the faces red over l'Auto Bolide, "the death-defying dip of death." This year it was played again, but at the finish of the act, which is performed by an American girl, Miss Isabelle Butler, there was not the air of breathless amazement.

Mlle. Tour has the last and crowning feat of the great show, and as its description in the programme suggested, the crowning verbal achievement of "Tody" Hamilton.

In describing the new act, this propagator of the circus germ called it "The Limit." It was. Its real name is "La Tourbillon de la Mort," but the programme maker called it a "turning, twisting, twirling, tilting, transposition in mid air—an awful, awe-inspiring, appulsive, aerial act, and the tremendous tantalizing triumph, wherein Time, the King of Terrors, cheated of his prey, finally flees."

The facts are these: Mlle. Tour, in a light automobile, shoots down an incline which, turning up at the base, throws the automobile upward in an aerial continuation of the V. At the top of the last leg, the machine turns a complete somersault and, circling in mid-air, alights on its wheels on a second cushioned platform about 40 feet away. Mlle. Tour's new feat is as far ahead of the "Dip of Death" as the latter was ahead of "Looping the Gap" on a bicycle.

Several accidents in the afternoon and evening performances yesterday gave evidence that the show is not yet thoroughly rehearsed. Last night in the elephant act it was noticeable that the middle ring, where the young elephants should have fought a mock battle with cannon, was empty. This was due to the fact that in the afternoon performance the young pachyderms got restless, and, breaking away from their keeper, bolted into the dressing rooms. In trying to stop them the other keepers left the other animals in the rings for a moment, with the result that that part of the performance was rather broken up. The elephants, however, will be put on as soon as they have had another lesson.

At the afternoon performance, too, Josie de Mott, bareback rider, suffered a bruised knee and one damaged rib through a fall when her horse tripped. Another bareback rider was thrown and was considerably bruised when picked up.

Last night's performance was marked by no accident, although one of the Japanese performers had a narrow escape when a rope broke letting him with a ladder to the ground. In the races at the end of the programme eight horses in tandem got restless while awaiting their turn to enter the ring. They finally bolted, making two circles of the arena at top speed and nearly piling on top of a charioteer before they were guided back to the entrance.

TONY PASTOR CELEBRATES.

Old Friends Hear Old Songs at the Manager's Anniversary.

"House Full" was the sign on the box office at Pastor's Theatre shortly after 8 o'clock last night. The occasion was the appearance of Tony Pastor himself in celebration of his forty-first anniversary as a manager. Tony did a jig-step, and sang "Sarah's Young Man" and "Down in a Coal Mine," and many of his old-time admirers said they enjoyed the performance as much as when he sang these songs forty years ago.

An ovation lasted five minutes, after which fifteen floral pieces were presented to the veteran actor-manager by friends and organizations, including the White Rats, an association of theatrical performers, and Lodge No. 1 of the Elks.

"I'm glad to see here to-night many eminent people who, forty years ago, sat in my galleries," said Tony Pastor in response. "And they needn't be ashamed of it, because they have all done something to be proud of and can buy box seats now. I'm not going to mention any names, more than to say that my old friend, Senator Grady, occupies a seat in the pit."

President Hears "Queen of Sheba."

WASHINGTON, March 22.—President Roosevelt to-night attended the production of "The Queen of Sheba," (in German,) by the Metropolitan Grand Opera Company. It was the first performance of that opera on the company's tour.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

James K. Hackett has completed arrangements whereby Alfred Sutro will make the translation of the new Maeterlinck play, as yet unnamed, the American and English rights to which the young actor-manager secured a few days ago.

Owing to the demand for seats, it is quite probable that the three weeks' engagement of Richard Mansfield at the New Amsterdam Theatre will be extended an additional week.

J. Parker Coombs, late of the Savage Grand Opera Company, has been engaged by Thompson & Dundy to succeed Francis Boyle in the role of the Gypsy King in "A Society Circus" at the Hippodrome.

In commemoration of the twenty-five-hundredth performance in Greater New York of "Way Down East" next Monday evening at the West End Theatre, the management will distribute miniature loving cups to the women patrons.

Bordentown Alumni at Dinner.

Fifty New York alumni of Bordentown Military Institute had a dinner on Wednesday evening at the Arena. The Rev. T. H. Landon, for twenty-one years Principal of the institute, and Lieut. Col T. D. Landon, commandant, spoke.

TABLEAUX FOR CHARITY.

Ladies' Auxiliary Entertains at the Waldorf for Lying-In Hospital.

The Ladies' Auxiliary of the Lying-In Hospital gave one of a series of tableaux-vivants in the main ballroom of the Waldorf-Astoria yesterday. The programme included "Angel with Lute," by Miss Dorothy Kane; "Marianna," by Miss R. Fish and Miss K. Atterbury; "Infanta Maria Teresa," by Miss Flagg; "Portrait," by Miss Atterbury and Buell Hollister; "Maria Luiga De Tassis," by Mrs. W. W. Hoppin; "Miss Bingham," by Miss Page; "The Morning Walk," by Mrs. E. N. Potter and J. W. Minturn; "Portrait," by the Misses Pratt; "Dancing Girl," by Miss Morgan and Howard Cary; "Detail," by Miss Edith Kane, Grant La Farge, and P. R. Pyne, second; "Detail," by Miss Roosevelt, Miss Duval, and Miss Stanton; "La Marseillaise," by Mrs. P. Cooper Hewitt, and "The Spanish Dancer," by Miss Deacon.

The committee in charge of the affair, which was highly successful, consisted of Mrs. Louis Lee Stanton, Chairman, and Mesdames Francis McNeil Bacon, Jr., James L. Barclay, A. McC. Beard, Ledyard Blair, W. Pierson Hamilton, C. D. Freeman, James W. Markoe, William Barclay Parsons, E. N. Potter, R. D. Pruyn, Charles Steele, and Miss Rhett.

The Symphony Club of New York, conducted by David Mannes, played several numbers. Its officers are: Miss Callender, President; Mrs. Trenor L. Park, Vice President; Miss Frances H. Vies, Treasurer, and Mrs. Elisha M. Fulton, Jr., Secretary.

Among those present were Mrs. Charles B. Alexander, Mrs. Francis Dana Winslow, Mrs. John A. McCullough, Mrs. E. H. Weatherbee, Mrs. E. Clarence Hyde, Mrs. Price Collier, Mrs. Edwin Main Post, Miss Margaret Leverich, Mrs. James Markoe, Mrs. Clarence C. Rice, Mrs. Dallas Bache Pratt, Mrs. Grenville Kane, Mrs. T. J. O. Rhinelander, Mrs. F. McNeil Bacon, Sr., Mrs. H. R. Duval, Mrs. Howard Page, Miss Lily Lee Page, Mrs. Hilborne Roosevelt, Miss Georgie Shippen, Mrs. Moses Taylor Pyne, Mrs. Brayton Ives, Mrs. Henry Alexander, Mrs. Henry Lansing Wardwell, and the Misses Wardwell, Mrs. George Rutledge Gibson, Mrs. Franklin Mott Warner, Mrs. Jacob Miller, Mrs. Gouverneur Kortwright, Mrs. J. J. Wysong, Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, Mrs. Harold F. Hadden, and Mrs. Charles H. Coster.

WHAT IS DOING IN SOCIETY.

The wedding of Miss Isabel Thacher Gourlie and Noel Lispenard Carpender, whose engagement was announced last Spring, will occur on April 24 at Calvary Church, Fourth Avenue and Twenty-first Street. Miss Nathalie Gourlie is to be her sister's maid of honor, and the bridesmaids are to be Misses Eleanor Ames of Boston and the Misses Sadie Barrett, Jeannie Carpender, and Ethel Gourlie. Mr. Carpender will have his cousin, Henry Carpender of New Brunswick, as his best man, and the ushers are to be Samuel Walsh, Herbert Riker, Thomas Adams, and Winthrop Sands.

⁂

Col. Robert M. Thompson, who sailed several weeks ago for Europe, is the guest of Lord Charles Beresford on the Bulwark, off Gibraltar, and later is to be the guest of Prince Louis of Battenberg on his flagship the Drake. Sir Charles recently gave a dinner at Gibraltar for Col. Thompson, to meet the Algeciras Commission. Mrs. Thompson will soon sail to join Mr. Thompson. His daughter, Mrs. Stephen H. P. Pell, returned from the South a short time ago with Lady Maitland, who had been her guest, and her mother, Mrs. Thompson.

⁂

Miss Mary Mortimer has been the guest in Providence of Miss Ethel Chapin.

⁂

Mrs. Louise Taylor Bingham will give a dinner on April 14 for her daughter, Miss Marie Louise Bingham, and her fiancé, Paul Plunkett. The guests are to be the bridal party who are to attend Miss Bingham and Mr. Plunkett at their wedding in St. Thomas's Church on April 16.

⁂

Keith Donaldson, son of William F. Donaldson of Philadelphia, whose marriage to Miss Evelyn Hunter is set for April 25, will give his bachelor dinner at Delmonico's on April 21.

⁂

Mr. and Mrs. Braddin Hamilton of 61 East Fifty-fifth Street have left St. Augustine and are now at Aiken, S. C.

⁂

Francis Rogers is to give a song recital at the residence of Mrs. Henry C. Dimock, 25 East Sixtieth Street, on Tuesday afternoon, April 3, at 3:15. Isidore Luckstone will be at the piano.

⁂

The engagement is announced of Miss Ruth Gray Hebbard, a daughter of Mrs. Schuyler Hamilton by her first husband, to Fletcher Montgomery of Stamford, Conn. The Hamiltons and Miss Hebbard are now living in Richmond, Va.

⁂

The invitation matinée yesterday at the Hudson Theatre, at which well-known women were the hostesses packed the theatre. The attraction was Miss Ruth St. Denis, an American girl, who originated the Radha dances. East Indians in native costume seated the guests, and after the entertainment they served tea and Indian wafers in the foyer from an Indian tea table.

The programme was as follows: Overture and interlude, by Harry Worthington Loomis; overture, Oriental Episode; incense dance, (a) The Camel Driver, (b) Mirage, (c) a sword dance; the Cobra Dance; (a) Exotic Fantasy, (b) The Bayadere; Lakma Dance, a Hindoo Temple Dance.

Nearly all of the music was composed for Miss St. Denis by Mr. Loomis. There is an orchestra of sixteen pieces, with Theodore Bendix as conductor.

Radha, the deified wife of Krishna, is supposed to enter the Temple idol representing her, and stepping down from its pedestal it delivers messages in mystic dances. One of the dances typifies the five senses, another figure the stages of the renunciation of the senses, first the determination to be free; second, the throwing off the bondage; third, the accomplishment. The last figure shows the place of attainment, while the final picture shows the idol back in its niche.

The cobra dance was one of the most applauded of yesterday's dances. Yesterday's hostesses were Mrs. William Allen, Mrs. Karl Bitter, Mrs. Edwin H. Blashfield, Mrs. Francke H. Bosworth, Mrs. Arthur Davies, Mrs. Harry Harkness Flagler, Mrs. Paul Leicester Ford, Mrs. Richard Watson Gilder, Mrs. Ben Ali Haggin, Mrs. Henry W. Hardon, Mrs. Imanishi, Mrs. Adrian H. Joline, Mrs. Otto H. Kahn, Mrs. George A. Meyer, Mrs. Howard Mansfield, Mrs. Richard Mansfield, Mrs. George L. Nichols, Mrs. Eliot Norton, Mrs. Orlando Rouland, Mrs. Philip Conway Sawyer, Mrs. Howard Taylor, Mrs. Alexander Tison, Mrs. James M. Townsend, Mrs. Allen Tucker, Mrs. J. Alden Weir, and Mrs. Charles C. Worthington, all of whom were present.

The boxholders were Mrs. Howard Mansfield, Mrs. Orlando Rouland, Mrs. Richard Mansfield, and Mrs. Alexander Tison. Others in the audience were Mrs. Samuel Untermyer, Mr. and Mrs. Peixotto, Mr. and Mrs. Homer St. Gaudens, Mrs. Henry Villard, Mrs. Oswald Villard, Mrs. John E. Cowdin, Mr. Mucha, Mrs. Francis Hodgson Burnett, Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Drake, Miss Dehon, John La Farge, and Mrs. H. B. Herreshoff. The entertainment is to be repeated on March 29 in the Hudson, and tickets will be sold for it.

A DAY'S WEDDINGS.

MORGAN—COWDREY.

EAST ORANGE, N. J., March 22.—Miss Helen Cecelia Cowdrey, daughter of Mrs. Theodore A. Cowdrey, and John Graham Morgan of New York were married to-night at the residence of the bride's uncle, Edward S. Pierson, 201 Arlington Avenue, East Orange. The Rev. John Martin Thomas, pastor of the Arlington Avenue Presbyterian Church, officiated. The bride's sole attendant was her sister, Miss Mary A. Cowdrey. The best man was the bridegroom's brother, Hugh T. Morgan.

DR. DOREMUS, CHEMIST AND INVENTOR, DEAD

City College Professor Helped to Found Several Institutions.

HIS CAREER MANY-SIDED

He Improved Gunpowder and Started the Philharmonic Society—Lived to be 82 Years Old.

Dr. Robert Ogden Doremus died early yesterday morning at the Strathmore, Broadway and Fifty-second Street. He had been ill for only about ten days, but his great age, 82 years, made recovery impossible.

On his father's side Dr. Doremus came of Dutch stock; on his mother's side of a historic English family, the Ogdens. He was born in 1824 in the family home, at Broadway and Cortlandt Street. In all the developments in this city along the line of his specialties, chemistry, scientific education, and music, he took a leading part.

His father was one of the founders of New York University, so after passing one year at Columbia the son finished his arts course and took his medical degree at that institution. Then he became assistant to Dr. John W. Draper in the laboratory of the Medical School. In 1848 he equipped, with Charles Townsend Harris, a laboratory where he lectured to students of the College of Pharmacy, of which he had been elected Professor of Chemistry.

He was one of the founders of the New York Medical College, the Long Island Hospital Medical College, and Bellevue Hospital Medical College, urging in each case the necessity of provision of a chemical laboratory, where the students could have thorough chemical training. From 1853 to 1861 he was Professor of Natural History at the Free Academy, now the College of the City of New York, and afterward was appointed to the Chair of Chemistry and Physics in the same institution. He made the laboratory at Twenty-third Street and Lexington Avenue a famous centre for study, particularly in connection with electricity.

In his teaching he was greatly aided by his power of speech. He was popular as a lecturer, illustrating his addresses with experiments. On one occasion at the Academy of Music, in 1855, he took daguerreotypes of all the persons in the boxes by an arc light and exhibited an induction coil with a 6-inch spark, a marvelous achievement in those days. For years he often lectured upon the real harmony of the Mosaic account of Creation and modern scientific discoveries.

Dr. Doremus was a notable figure in municipal affairs. He was the first toxicological expert called in New York in a murder trial, and his services at the trial of James Stephen for poisoning his wife with arsenic led to improvements in the conduct of autopsies for the courts. For many years after this he was a well-known expert in murder, forgery, and other cases. He was a member of the Medical Advisory Commission of the city, assisted to found the municipal Department of Health and Bureau of Chemistry. He introduced the disinfection of ships by the use of chlorine, and thus did away with the necessity for prolonged detentions at quarantine.

Another of his important inventions was granulated, compressed gunpowder, the strength of which greatly exceeded that of ordinary gunpowder. It was used by the French in the war with Prussia, and for the excavation of the Mont Cenis tunnel.

Dr. Doremus was a cornetist, one of the founders and for three years President of the Philharmonic Society.

His wife died last year. He leaves one daughter and three sons, Dr. Charles A., Thomas C., and Arthur L. Doremus. The funeral will be held on Sunday at 2 o'clock from the South Reformed Church, Madison Avenue and Thirty-eighth Street.

MAY NOT BUY CARNEGIE PLOT.

Gen. Bryce Purchases Property at Fifth Avenue, Near Eighty-third Street.

The purchase yesterday by Gen. Lloyd S. Bryce of a plot on Fifth Avenue, near Eighty-third Street, is taken to mean that he will not try to enforce his contract with Andrew Carnegie for a plot on the north side of Ninety-first Street, opposite Mr. Carnegie's residence.

Gen. Bryce contracted to buy the Ninety-first Street plot three or four weeks ago through Broker Herbert A. Sherman, but W. D. Sloane and his son-in-law, James A. Burden, Jr., immediately instituted injunction proceedings to prevent the transfer of title to Gen. Bryce, on the ground that the deal violated an agreement as to the property between Mr. Carnegie and Mr. Sloane.

The new site acquired by Gen. Bryce is on Fifth Avenue, 62.6 feet north of Eighty-third Street, and measures 40 by 100 feet. The seller was James A. Garland, and the brokers in the deal were Douglas Robinson, Charles S. Brown & Co.

Other residents in the block are William Salomon, Mrs. H. V. S. Thorne, and Mrs. Mary J. Kingsland.

THE WEATHER.

WASHINGTON, March 22.—An area of high pressure of considerable magnitude occupies the Middle Mississippi and Ohio Valleys, having advanced to these districts from the British Northwest in the last twenty-four hours. It has caused a sharp fall in temperatures throughout the lake region and the Ohio Valley, where the readings at 8 o'clock to-night were 18 to 26 degrees below the seasonal average.

The temperature in all parts of the country has been considerably below normal for the last two weeks, especially in northern and western districts. Present indications do not point to any immediate warming up, except in the extreme Southwest States.

Winds along the New England and Middle Atlantic Coast will be fresh westerly; South Atlantic Coast and East Gulf Coast light and variable; West Gulf Coast fresh southeast; Lake Michigan light and variable, becoming easterly.

Steamers departing Friday for European ports will have light to fresh west winds and fair weather to the Grand Banks.

FORECAST FOR TO-DAY AND SATURDAY.

Eastern New York, Eastern Pennsylvania, New Jersey, and Delaware—Fair and continued cold Friday and Saturday; fresh west winds.

New England—Fair and colder Friday; Saturday fair, fresh west winds.

Western New York and Western Pennsylvania—Fair Friday and Saturday; fresh west winds.

The temperature record for the twenty-four hours ended at midnight, taken from the thermometer at the local office of the United States Weather Bureau, is as follows:

	1905.	1906.		1905.	1906.
3 A. M.	33	38	4 P. M.	44	34
6 A. M.	34	37	6 P. M.	40	32

This thermometer is 108 feet above the street level. The average temperature yesterday was 33; for the corresponding date last year it was 38; average on the corresponding date for the last twenty-five years, 38.

The temperature at 8 A. M. yesterday was 34; at 8 P. M. it was 30. Maximum temperature, 39 degrees at 4 A. M.; minimum, 27 degrees at 10 P. M. Humidity, 63 per cent. at 8 A. M.; 46 per cent. at 8 P. M.

ARE ALL GENEROUS?

Why is it that "6,000 to 7,000 citizens do the bulk of charitable giving in New York"? Because 6,000 to 7,000 receive the bulk of appeals. The already-givers are stormed with pleas, the not-yet-givers receive few or none.

Who is not generous? Why, then, should not all share the joys of giving? We want all to know that through A. I. C. P. they can promptly, effectually, sympathetically help those in distress because of accident, sickness, or death of breadwinner.

TO B FONETIK AT KOLUMBIA.

Students to Help Prof. Mathuz and Karnegee Reviz Spelling.

Reformed spelling has taken hold of students at Columbia. Ever since Prof. Matthews announced the object of the movement to one of his classes, the craze has spread.

A reformed spelling association was organized yesterday in University Hall, with M. C. Ansorge, 1906, Law, President; H. C. Murphy, 1908, S., Vice President; W. T. Ashton, 1906, Ph., Secretary, and W. Eastman, 1908, C., Treasurer. Prof. Brander Mathuz, Chairman of the Karnegee Reformed Spelling Board, was elected honorary President. The following was adopted:

Hweraz, Numerus prominent edukators thruout the United States hav pronounsd the sistem ov speling now in vog kumbersom, unweeldy, and illojikal; and

Hweraz, A movment heded by one ov our own profesors has been instituted for the purpus ov kreating a sentiment in favor ov a reformd, revizd, and simplifyd method; and

Hweraz, This movment meets with our aproval and with the aproval ov Kolumbia students in jeneral; b it

Rezolvd, That we students of Kolumbia toda assembld do herby form ourselvz into an organizashun to b non az the Fonetik Speling Assosiashun ov Kolumbia University; and b it further

Rezolvd, That we herby bind ourselvz to abide by the desishuns ov the "Simplified Speling Board" resently organized by Androo Karnegee, when made publik, and adopt the foloing prinsipils for the speling ov words ad interim, said prinsipils to b a gide in awl privat korrespondens, and in our kollej xaminashun papurs. Thez principils are:

First—That awl silent leterz b dropt.

Second—That awl difthongs b replasd by singl vowlz wherever possibl.

Third—That the fonetik sistem ov speling b adoptd.

The society expects to hold regular meetings, at which prominent educators will be invited to speak. What professors will do when they come across examination papers in phonetic spelling is a matter of conjecture.

CABBY'S HAT FLEW HIGH.

A Sort of Butterfly Chase Followed, and There Nearly Was a Tragedy.

None of the blasé devotees of aeronautics, so far as known, ever found a hint for the proper shaping of an aerodrome in a cab driver's hat, but to any one who has observed how such a hat travels when the wind removes it from the head of its wearer, it is obvious that it contains suggestions which should be highly important, scientifically.

The ordinary hat when blown away flies up in the air and then drops to the ground, its subsequent progress being on the same principle as that of a hoop. The cab driver's hat describes a wide and graceful parabola, and then travels for a considerable distance, sometimes for half a block or so, not on the ground, but in the air, in what seems to the eye a straight line.

This scientific principle was illustrated yesetrday morning by means of a hat belonging to Joe Kennedy, whose headquarters are outside the Astor Hotel. It was a perfectly new hat, showing the Autumn tints which are the pride of the properly ordered cabby. Its shape would have done credit to Piccadilly or the Rue de la Paix.

At 10 A. M. Kennedy picked up his first fare for the day, amid the envious glances of the other cabmen. Their avocation renders them connoisseurs of beauty, and it was the unanimous verdict that Kennedy's fare was a "peach." She had violet eyes, a mauve dress, and a mauve hat, and in the sweetest of voices she asked to be driven to the Twenty-third Street Ferry. "And will you go as fast as you can," she pleaded, "because I have to get to Philadelphia for a performance."

Kennedy whipped up his horse and started. At Broadway and Forty-fourth Street a violent gust of wind removed his hat and blew it high in the air. For a moment, at the point of highest ascension, it was motionless, and then it started up Forty-fourth Street toward Sixth Avenue.

Kennedy said nothing. As in the case of the costermonger on a historic occasion, the English vocabulary was insufficient to describe his feelings. He started up the street in pursuit of the hat, whipping his horse to top speed.

The passenger craned her head out of the window. "You're going the wrong way!" she shouted.

She might as well have spoken to the flagstaff on the Times Building. The hat by this time was nearing Sixth Avenue, and was still in the air. Kennedy was urging his horse to a break-neck gallop.

The fare tried to get a view of the driver. All she could see was that he was standing on his seat and whipping the horse furiously. She shouted again. There was no response except further accelerated speed.

The hat landed on the ground, in a very muddy spot, and was bowling along at a rate that, had it been an automobile, would have led to its arrest.

The fare, her appeals unheeded, evidently thought that she had engaged a cabman who was either intoxicated or insane. She opened the door of the cab and began to scream loudly.

Passers by not observing the hat, saw only a cab going at terrific speed, a hatless, wild-eyed driver urging his horse to greater exertions, and a beautiful woman inside the vehicle screaming for assistance.

"Case of abduction, sure," said one to another, and ran after the cab as fast as legs could carry them.

A policeman of pronounced embonpoint also ran, as fast as his legs could carry him, which was not very fast. A man who looked like Buffalo Bill was reaching toward his hip pocket in a suggestive manner, apparently with the idea of shooting either the horse or the cabman in order to rescue beauty in distress, when the deus ex machina appeared in the shape of a small boy. He caught the hat just as it reached Sixth Avenue, the cab stopped, the driver recovered his property, and made his belated explanation to his fare. Then he explained to the crowd, and then to the policeman.

The incident thus ended harmoniously, but it is unlikely that the fare caught her train.

COMMUTERS' FRIEND DEAD.

Ketchale Had Been at Grand Central Station Many Years.

David Ketchale, 54 years old, who for thirty-four years had been employed at the Grand Central Station, latterly in charge of the gatemen, and as such was known to thousands of the traveling public, was found dead yesterday morning in his room, at 720 Third Avenue. Asphyxiation by gas caused his death.

Of a family of eighteen brothers and sisters only two remain. A brother William, a policeman detailed to the West Forty-seventh Street Station, was found dead about fifteen years ago, a victim to gang beating. Another brother, Joe, was killed while assistant master of trains at the New York Central yards here.

Ketchale was married about five years ago, but had not been living with his wife. His brother Frank said Ketchale had plenty of money and he knew of nothing likely to cause him to end his life.

DEATH LIST OF A DAY.

D. W. Hemming.

D. W. Hemming, civil engineer, died yesterday at his residence, 502 West 143d Street, after an illness of several months. Mr. Hemming was connected with the firm of William Bradley, which constructed that section of the Subway between Fifty-ninth and 110th Streets, on Broadway, and also the Jerome Park Reservoir. He was educated at Bishops' College, in Canada, and his first position was as a rodman on the Canadian Pacific Railway.

In 1893 Mr. Hemming became a locating engineer on the New York, New England and Northern Railway, and in 1894 he was made engineer for the Metropolitan Street Railway, in the construction of the Lexington Avenue cable line. He helped to lay the gas mains in New York City and was identified with the Speedway construction. Mr. Hemming was the engineer in charge of laying twelve miles of pneumatic tubes from the New York General Post Office to sub-stations, and later helped to build the piers for the Manhattan bridge, the 145th Street bridge, and the Riverside Drive extension.

Major Charles W. Watkins.

KINGSTON, Jamaica, March 22.—Major Charles W. Watkins, retired, died suddenly of heart disease on March 19 on the Royal Mail Line steamer Tagus, from New York March 17 for this port, and was buried at sea the same day.

Major Watkins was Vice President of the Peninsular Trust Company of Grand Rapids, Mich. He served through the war, was a member of the Michigan Legislature, 1871-1873, and was Collector of Internal Revenue for two and a half years under President Arthur.

I. Newman.

I. Newman, 84 years old, founder of the firm of I. Newman & Sons of New York and New Haven, died at his home in New Haven Wednesday. He came to this country when 30 years of age, and in his early life was identified with business interests in Newburg and Rondout, N. Y. He afterward moved to Birmingham, Conn., where he started the manufacture of corsets in 1873. The plant was later moved to New Haven.

His wife, whom he married fifty-three years ago, was Miss Pauline Simon. She survives him, as do two sons, A. L. Newman of New York and J. J. Newman of New Haven, and one daughter, Mrs. Henry J. Adams of Boston.

Wilson Bailey Snedeker.

Funeral services for Wilson Bailey Snedeker, who was a lineal descendant of Jan Snediker, who came from Holland in 1641, and a son of Col. Isaac Snedeker of the 100th New York State Volunteers in the civil war, will be held this morning from his home, 438 Macon Street, Brooklyn. Mr. Snedeker died on Tuesday from pneumonia in his seventy-first year. He was connected with the Goodyear Rubber Company.

The Rev. Samuel H. Smith.

The Rev. Samuel H. Smith, a member of the New York East Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church for more than fifty years, died Wednesday night at his home, 256 Lenox Road, Brooklyn. He was born in Medford, N. J., in 1828, entered the ministry in 1850, and was made a superannuate in 1901. He leaves a wife, a son, and two daughters.

Warren E. Moshier.

Warren E. Moshier, Secretary of the Catholic Summer School at Plattsburg, editor of Moshier's Magazine, and one of the best-known Catholic laymen in the country, died at his residence, at 26 Colonial Place, New Rochelle, yesterday. He had been ill for several months. Mr. Moshier was about forty years old and was a native of Albany. He lived for several years in Youngstown, Ohio, where he founded his magazine, and where he was married. He removed the magazine headquarters to New Rochelle shortly after his marriage. Besides his wife he leaves six small children.

The Rev. A. K. Fenton.

PORT JEFFERSON, L. I., March 22.—The Rev. Arthur Kirkby Fenton died at his home here this morning of Bright's disease. For the past four years he had been rector of Christ's Episcopal Church in this place.

John J. Vanderbilt.

TARRYTOWN, N. Y., March 22.—John J. Vanderbilt, one of the oldest residents of Tarrytown, died last night. Mr. Vanderbilt was born in New York, and was a member of the Masonic order for over forty years. He had not engaged in active business for some time.

Obituary Notes.

The Rev. John S. CHEEK, pastor of the First Baptist Church of Paducah, Ky., died yesterday at Waco, Texas, where he had gone for his health. He was 46 years of age.

IDA L. BROWER, daughter of Mrs. Christiane A. Brower, died yesterday at her home, 109 Magnolia Avenue, Jersey City. For thirty-four years she had been a teacher in the public schools of Brooklyn.

HENRY R. THOMAS, ex-State Railroad Commissioner of South Carolina, was found dead in a field on his farm near Wedgefield on Wednesday evening. He had succumbed to heart disease.

Col. WILLIAM EWELL PETERS, for thirty-five years Professor of Latin at the University of Virginia, died at Charlottesville, Va., yesterday. He served as a Colonel under Gen. Jubal A. Early in the Confederate Army from 1861 to 1865.

JOHN H. COOPER, general Superintendent of several dyeing establishments in New Jersey, who was for many years connected with the Old Dominion Steamship Company, died on Wednesday at his home, 162 West 129th Street. He was 63 years old. He leaves two daughters.

JAMES McILHANY died at his home, 45 Bayview Avenue, Jersey City, on Wednesday of paralysis. He was 63 years old and was at one time in the wholesale provision business and a member of the New York Produce Exchange. A widow, three sons, and four daughters survive him.

FERDINAND SCHAEFER, for more than half a century a resident of Brooklyn, died Wednesday at the residence of his daughter, Mrs. John Thoesse, 139 Miller Avenue, East New York, and will be buried to-day. He was born in Germany 76 years ago. He is survived by a son and two daughters.

Shopping day in large cities is Monday. This is because of the great volume of department store advertising carried on Sundays. Thousands of women have changed their wash-day from Monday to Tuesday so as to have Monday for shopping day.

In smaller towns Saturday is shopping day. It is the day that farmers go to market. It is the day that marketing is done for over Sunday. It is the day when things put off during the week must finally be done.

The whole country lives by weeks, repeating the same buying operation every week.

A Weekly publication like THE SATURDAY EVENING POST, going into more than seven hundred and fifty thousand homes, read by three million five hundred thousand people, men and women, old and young, comes just as often as the return of the purchasing instinct or purchasing need. It is a logical medium growing out of the weekly life of a great nation. Manufacturers who use it once a month are not getting the benefit of the weekly idea.

HARPER'S MAGAZINE FOR APRIL

There are twenty-four separate contributions exclusive of the regular departments in the April number of Harper's Magazine. The articles cover many varied fields of interest. There is nothing "timely," nothing controversial, nothing concerning politics, graft or crime.

8 Complete Short Stories

No two of these stories are alike. Each is the best of its type. There is a story of love and war in mediæval times, a weird, supernatural story of Pennsylvania country folk, a story of college settlement life in New York, a story of simple love with a charming heroine, one of Alice Brown's most charming middle aged love stories and others, all differing and all interesting.

Special Articles

In the articles of this number there is almost a richer variety than in the short stories. Two friends of Herbert Spencer who lived with him in his later years write of a hitherto entirely unknown side of the great thinker's life—of his one little love story, of how he painted his carpet with red ink when it grew dim and a dozen other intimate tales of his home.

Then there is a remarkable scientific article by Professor Robert Kennedy Duncan, which tells how the German scientists have assured the continuance of the world's food supply by their remarkable discovery.

Professor Lounsbury of Yale has some interesting things to say of the pedantic use of the English language—he says it is all right to say "to-morrow is Sunday" instead of "to-morrow will be Sunday," as the purists insist.

Clifford Ashley, the artist, who made a trip in an old-fashioned whaler for Harpers, tells of and pictures his adventures, and Deshler Welsh has a valuable paper of literary interest containing a number of hitherto unpublished letters of Charles Dickens.

W. D. Howells writes of "Glimpses of the English Washington Country," and Agnes Laut tells a stirring narrative of the wild adventures between the early French explorers and the English of the Hudson Bay Company.

These are only a few of the things in the April number of Harper's Magazine—a book of 165 pages, illustrated beautifully in color, tint and black and white.

In addition to these features there is Margaret Deland's wonderful serial novel "The Awakening of Helena Richie," a tremendous story of the unfolding of a woman's soul through the love of a child.

THE TIMES'S REAL ESTATE SUPPLEMENT.

Real estate in this city and its environs is to-day the centre of more widespread interest among the people than ever before.

THE NEW YORK TIMES will publish on Sunday next a real estate supplement, which will be primarily a review of present conditions in the various regions of real estate activity in New York and the surrounding territory, but which will also contain many features of general interest.

Significant, as showing the vast scale upon which present-day realty operations are conducted, will be an article by President Chesebrough of the Century Realty Company, giving a synopsis of the $40,000,000 worth of new skyscrapers about to be erected in the downtown district.

The views of Felix Isman, the Philadelphia operator, upon New York real estate conditions and methods, will contain suggestions of interest to every broker and speculator in the city.

Borough President Haffen's review of conditions in the Bronx will furnish many facts and figures not hitherto published.

The real estate situation in outlying sections of the city will be fully dealt with by recognized authorities, while much new and detailed information will also be given concerning the progress made on transportation improvements.

COIT.—At a meeting of the Alumni of St. Paul's School, Concord, N. H., held at the school on March 21st, the following minutes were read and adopted:

On Saturday, the 17th of March, 1906, Joseph Howland Coit, Rector of St. Paul's School, died at Camden, S. C., at the age of 75 years. On this Wednesday, the 21st of March, his burial day, we alumni, having come from his grave, desire to say a few words about him.

In the years that we have lived we have not known a wiser friend. As the head of a great Christian school, we count his influence upon our characters one of the benefits of our youth beyond expression precious, and in our memories his affection lives unforgettable. And as for us once his head was a steady and a kind guide, so more largely for the school was it likewise. His utter and invariable effacement of self in his tireless work nevertheless leaves in it everywhere the mark of his devotion, his sagacity, and his sweetness. As we remember and value his influence, so will the school remember it and value it; and for all of us, for our minds and for our hearts, it was a wholesome and inestimable blessing.

THE FINANCIAL MARKETS

Stocks Recover; Call Money Rates, 3½@4¾ Per Cent.

Reading's Sharp Advance—Heavy Currency Transfers.

A slow and irregular recovery from the declines of Wednesday was the feature of yesterday's stock market and this movement, like the diverse movements of other days in the present week, occurred without any actual news which came to light during the day, although conflicting rumors regarding the prospects of a composition of the bituminous and anthracite differences were freely and continuously circulated. The trading was once more on a small scale and was attributable again, in large measure, to the operations of professional traders. Some encouragement for belief in those reports which predicted a settlement of the anthracite difficulties was found in the persistent advance of Reading, the stock rising in all 3⅝ points on a rather heavy volume of trading. Delaware & Hudson also gained 4 points, but it is not improbable that the strength of Reading, at least, was as much due to the return to the floor of the Stock Exchange of an operator who has heretofore been conspicuous in movements in that issue, as to any deep-seated belief in the reports bearing upon the anthracite situation. There was no real word from either miners or operators in the anthracite field, while such advices as came from the bituminous conference at Indianapolis were wholly insignificant. The bogy conjured up on Wednesday from the announcement of an issue of stock by the New York Central assumed a secondary place in speculative considerations yesterday so far as it bore upon the market generally, although New York Central itself was a laggard in the day's upward turn and closed at a small loss. The Steel issues were accorded more substantial support than has been their portion of late, a matter helpful to sentiment, while Union Pacific continued to exhibit the firmness which has characterized it throughout the recent unsettled markets. A vigorous rally was under way at the close and final prices were practically the highest of the day.

Of interest in the money market were the heavy transfers by the Sub-Treasury to out-of-town points, $600,000 going to San Francisco and $200,000 to Cincinnati. The San Francisco transfer is understood to have no connection with any plans which Japanese agents here may have for the forwarding of funds to that country; it represents a shifting of Government funds to meet the needs of disbursing officers. Presumably this transfer, however, represents a loss to local banking institutions, and coupled with the shipment to Cincinnati it will serve to substitute a loss for the $331,000 gain made by the banks in their transactions with the Sub-Treasury up to yesterday. The bulk of the day's call loans was made at a small concession from the rates of the previous day. Demand sterling was also appreciably easier. The Bank of England reported a slightly reduced percentage of reserve to liabilities, owing to loan expasion, while the Bank of France bettered its already excellent condition. The London and Paris markets recovered some of the ground lost on Wednesday, while the Berlin market was dull. Wheat and cotton again advanced.

HILL AND HARRIMAN BOTH TO EXTEND LINES

Two Systems Will Lay 1,330 Miles of New Track.

NORTHWEST THE ACTIVE ZONE

Roads' Mileage Now Under Construction Is Nearly Double That of a Year Ago.

New lines amounting to 784 miles are to be constructed by the Hill railroads in the Northwest this year, and additions to the Harriman system will amount to 546 miles. A large part of these new lines will not come into direct competition with each other, but they indicate the extensive scale on which both the Hill and Harriman interests are branching out in the Northwest. They show clearly, moreover, that Mr. Harriman's statement in regard to rival railroad building was based on prospects that are already being fulfilled.

There are now under construction in the United States 13,014 miles of new railroad lines, according to the figures compiled by The Railway Age, and in addition proposed railroad lines provide for the building of 8,433 miles more, making a total of 21,447 miles of new railroads actually under construction or proposed to be built in the immediate future. A year ago, only 7,500 miles of road were under construction, of which 4,079 miles were completed in 1905.

Statistics show that Mr. Harriman's competitive railroad building prediction was based largely on expected developments in his own Northwestern territory. This year the centre of greatest activity in railroad building is in the Northwest, whereas, for several years it was the Southwest that showed the greatest enterprise in the matter of new lines of transportation.

This result is due, in large measure, to the new line which the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul is building from Evarts, S. D., to the Pacific Coast, a distance of 1,500 miles. This project, however, is almost equaled in mileage by the combined new Hill and Harriman lines, which total 1,330 miles.

The proportion which the new lines will bear to the present lines controlled by the Hill and Harriman companies is indicated by the fact that the 546 miles of new road being built by the Harriman roads compare with 1,994 miles, which is the length of the Union Pacific main line. The proportion between the new Hill lines and the main lines of the Hill systems is somewhat smaller than in the case of the Harriman roads, for the reason that the 784 miles of new Hill lines must be apportioned between the main lines of the Northern Pacific and the Great Northern.

Other important railroad projects which are now under way in addition to the St. Paul's extension and the new Hill and Harriman lines are the new Gould line, the Western Pacific from Salt Lake to San Francisco, a distance of 937 miles, and the Denver, Northwestern & Pacific from Sulphur Spring, Col., to Salt Lake, a distance of 470 miles. About two-thirds of the entire mileage now under construction is being built by thirty-eight companies, an average of twenty-three miles for each company, and the remaining one-third is represented by a large number of smaller projects.

Great activity in the construction of new railway lines has been foreshadowed by the vast amount of new railroad securities floated in recent months. The new securities sold since the beginning of the year amount to more than $450,000,000, but this total includes a large number of industrial isues intended for other purposes than the construction of new lines.

The telephone instruments owned by the company which were in use at the end of the year numbered 5,698,258, an increase of 1,217,694 in the year.

President Frederick P. Fish in his statement to the stockholders reviews at length the development of the telephone business, and says that the policy of the company is to supply telephone service at the lowest rates consistent with a fair return on the capital invested, and with due regard to the establishment of reserves for depreciation and the natural contingencies of the business.

"KATY" DIVIDEND EXPECTED.

Preferred Stock May Be Put on 4 Per Cent. Basis on April 5.

The Directors of the Missouri, Kansas & Texas, it was reported yesterday, have decided to begin the payment of dividends on the company's preferred stock, an initial semi-annual dividend of 2 per cent. to be declared at a meeting of Directors on April 5, the day for the annual meeting of stockholders. Henry C. Rouse, Chairman of Directors, said he should make no statement until the Directors had acted.

In his statement to the stockholders in the last annual report, Chairman Rouse said that, were it possible to float an issue of equipment notes, the question of distributing a part of the company's surplus revenue might be opportune. This contingency seems to have been met by the issuance recently of the $10,000,000 4½ per cent. bonds sold to Speyer & Co. The company has outstanding $13,000,000 preferred stock entitled to non-cumulative 4 per cent. dividends. The payment of 4 per cent. would require $520,000 a year. The last annual report showed surplus earnings amounting to $1,267,191.

FINANCIAL NOTES.

Wasserman Brothers announce that they have opened a branch office in London.

A. C. Bird, in charge of the traffic of the Gould lines, of which he is Vice President, has returned from a year's sick leave completely restored in health. He will resume his duties in Chicago about April 1.

C. E. Henderson, Second Vice President of the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad, will give up the First Vice Presidency of the Philadelphia & Reading Coal and Iron Company on April 1, to give his whole attention to the traffic department of the railroad. T. M. Richards will succeed him in the Coal and Iron Company, in charge of sales, and W. J. Richards will become Second Vice President and general manager of operating.

GEORGIA CENTRAL REFUNDING

Local Representatives Deny Knowledge of Rumored $20,000,000 Plan.

Representatives of interests identified with the Central of Georgia Railroad said yesterday that they had no information in regard to the reports which originated in the South that the road intends to refund its income bonds by means of an issue of 4 per cent. bonds. Report had it that the total amount of the issue will be $20,000,000, and that it will be used not only for the purpose of retiring the incomes, but also for paying off about $2,000,000 of equipment obligations and about $4,000,000 representing various capital outlays.

In addition it was said that provision was to be made for the cost of a new steamship which is being built for the Central of Georgia by the Roach Shipbuilding Company. The total of these several items is close to $20,000,000. According to the report most of the details of the issue have already been decided upon, although an announcement may not be made for some time.

The Central of Georgia income bonds are now receiving the full 5 per cent. interest to which they are entitled, and the company would save 1 per cent. a year on the amount of the bonds by refunding them into 4 per cent. bonds. On the other hand such a refunding operation would involve an increase in the company's fixed charges. In some quarters this fact has been regarded as throwing doubt on the willingness of the management to replace the income bonds, payments on which are not obligatory, by an issue of bonds the interest on which would have to be paid regularly under penalty of foreclosure.

IRON AND STEEL NOTES.

Pig Iron Producers Said to be Holding Prices Tight.

After their meeting in New York, representatives of the Eastern Pig Iron Association declared that producers are holding prices tight and that it was their belief that an advance might be looked for in the near future.

The American Bridge Company is short of steel and unable to operate its fabricating shops at full capacity. The Carnegie Company has changed from tin bar and billets, at its Youngstown mills, to steel rails. Rails are the active feature of the steel industry just now, and it is estimated that orders for nearly 200,000 tons are pending. It is the belief in the trade that the railroads will soon begin ordering for 1907.

While all the Eastern plate mills are in operation the demand is not so brisk as it has been. Orders calling for delivery from three to six weeks in the future are being accepted. A large Eastern plate mill which two or three months ago raised its prices from $1 to $2 above the official quotations, is now satisfied with current prices.

COPPER MARKET REPORTS.

The rise of copper metal prices continued in the London market yesterday, with a 15s. advance for both spot and futures over the quotations of Wednesday. Spot closed at £82 and futures at £79 10s. The closing prices of copper and other metals on the New York Metal Exchange yesterday compare as follows with those of the preceding day:

LONDON STOCK MARKET.

LONDON, March 22.—Money was increasingly scarce in the market to-day, and borrowers were largely dependent on the Bank of England. This condition is likely to prevail until after the quarter-end. Discounts were firm.

Operators on the Stock Exchange were idle, it being the eve of the settlement. Prices generally were easy. Consols were a fraction easier on dear money. Home rails were irregular. Undergrounds relapsed.

Americans opened dull, but afterward were quietly steady at rather above parity. They rallied later and closed firm.

Foreigners were fairly supported. Japanese reacted.

Kaffirs were firm.

Japanese imperial 6s of 1904 were quoted at 104.

Bar silver quiet at 30 1-16d per ounce.

Gold premiums are quoted as follows: Madrid, 14.80; Lisbon, 4.50.

Money, 3½@4 per cent. Discount rates: Short bills, 3⅝@3¾ per cent.; three months' bills, 3 9-16 per cent.

Bullion amounting to £179,000 was taken into the Bank of England to-day, and £65,000 was withdrawn for shipment to South America.

BANK OF ENGLAND.

LONDON, March 22.—The weekly statement of the Bank of England shows the following changes:

Total reserve increased	£353,000
Circulation increased	105,000
Bullion increased	518,340
Other securities increased	1,534,000
Other deposits increased	1,688,000
Public deposits increased	246,090
Notes reserve increased	357,000

Government securities unchanged.

The proportion of the bank's reserve to liability this week is 46.63 per cent., as compared with 47.55 per cent. last week.

The rate of discount of the Bank of England remained unchanged at 4 per cent.

The Bank of Bengal has lowered its discount rate from 8 to 7 per cent.

The Bank of Bombay has lowered its rate of discount from 8 to 7 per cent.

The profits of the Bank of England for the six months ended Feb. 28 were $3,303,890, and a dividend of 4½ per cent. was declared at to-day's meeting.

BANK OF FRANCE.

PARIS, March 22.—The weekly statement of the Bank of France shows the following changes:

	Francs.

THE OUTSIDE SECURITIES

Light Trading Well Distributed on the Curb.

Manhattan Transit Sells Heavily, Keeping Up to Wednesday's Prices—Coppers Dull.

There was a more general distribution of the trading in yesterday's market on the curb, but the total sales were small. Manhattan Transit maintained the prices made in Wednesday's market, notwithstanding the heavy selling, 15,000 shares. The Coppers were fairly steady, with light trading pretty generally distributed through the list. United sold from 64½ to 66¼, but closed, after trading in only 4,500 shares, at 65⅞. Other mining shares that have been conspicuously active in recent markets were correspondingly dull.

CHICAGO QUOTATIONS.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, March 22.—Business on the local Exchange ran to Swift's, Subway, and the local tractions. West Chicago fell from 30 to 28 and North Chicago from 32⅞ to 32½, while Union Traction in New York sold around 6½ and the preferred at 19½. Swift's profited a little from the Humphrey decision. Subway was traded in liberally at about steady figures. Favorable Eastern publicity is in prospect, and the buying to-day must have been caused by these prospects.

Money, 5½@6 per cent.; New York exchange, 20@15c discount.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

The bear attack begun Wednesday afternoon upon the announcement of the New York Central's proposal to increase its capital $100,000,000 was obviously a failure. In the light of yesterday's recovery in prices it could not be regarded in any other light. No large line of short stocks put out Thursday afternoon could have been covered at a profit.

* * *

The market made a very feverish opening yesterday, with heavy trading and erratic movements in a few stocks, notably Reading, New York Central, Northwestern and Amalgamated Copper. Reading was the most erratic of the normally active stocks, fluctuating ½ per cent. and even more between sales. Northwestern, which had advanced very sharply in the last hour of Wednesday trading while New York Central declined, broke 3 points on the initial transactions to 225½, but afterward went higher than on Wednesday, touching 230. New York Central broke again to the low point of Wednesday's decline, viz., 141¾, and then recovered. After the first fifteen minutes the market began to develop consistency and at the end of the first hour it was up 1 to 2 per cent. all around. This improvement continued irregularly throughout the day. The bear element tried several times to turn dullness into weakness, but failed, and in the last hour the whole list grew very strong under the leadership of Reading.

* * *

The New York Central's proposed increase of stock was a bear argument on Wednesday in a weak market and a bull argument yesterday because, as a bear card, it had been overplayed.

* * *

Reading stock is the accepted speculative barometer of the labor dispute between the miners and operators. This is so only because 'tis so. There is no reason why Reading should perform that service any more than any other coaler stock, except that people have come to regard it as the natural outlet for any initiative which traders may take on "strike news." When Reading is weak it is solemnly asserted that a strike seems to be inevitable, and when Reading is strong conscientious commentators refer hopefully to that fact as disclosing on the part of the leading interests of Wall Street a feeling that a strike may be averted. An "influence" in the highly speculative sense is anything on which a considerable number of traders will act one way. It may be something ridiculous or entirely illogical, but if men act upon it concertedly it is nevertheless an influence to be reckoned with. If a majority of traders habitually sold stocks on a rainy day, a prediction of rain would be an important stock market influence.

* * *

Some superficial persons seemed to suppose that yesterday's bullish demonstration in Reading was made to celebrate Wasserman's return from Europe. It was Wasserman who discovered Reading. He asserts that to be true, and nobody has publicly disputed it. After the stock had got up to about 125 last year, he gave out his famous "Me and Morgan" interview, telling how he had shared the discovery with Mr. Morgan, and that utterance will forever be a classic in the memory of Wall Street.

* * *

Reading's advance of 3¾ per cent. yesterday was doubtless engineered largely at the expense of a short interest in the stock. For several weeks it has been rather too popular as a short sale. On its dividend yield it is the highest-priced active coaler railroad stock in the market, and for that reason it has seemed the logical thing to sell on the prospect of a coal strike. The ease with which it recovered yesterday was perhaps surprising to the bear element.

* * *

The great technical strength of the market lies in the fact that Wall Street is trading in a fixed amount of floating stocks. Some keen observers go even further, and asert that the Street is not trading in stocks at all—only in contracts. This is largely, though not literally, true. It is evident from the frequency with which the market becomes oversold that it is not so full of stocks on this level of prices, and, also, that liquidation for the time being has ceased. On each of the bear crowd's last six or eight drives fewer and fewer stocks (real stocks) have come out, and the difficulties of repurchasing stocks for short account have increased proportionately. The bear crowd was unable on Wednesday to keep up a continuous selling movement for as long as two hours, and it was compelled yesterday to cover stocks, if at all, at a decided disadvantage. Yesterday's recovery in prices created a more optimistic feeling among traders, who argue from the actions of the market this week that the so-called larger interests, awaiting a more propitious time for inaugurating a bull movement, have the situation perfectly in hand.

* * *

Touching the advance of Northwestern common, of which there has not as yet been any satisfactory explanation, it is argued that it must have been brought about through bona fide buying, since purely speculative interest would not be likely at this time to seek one of the highest-priced stocks in the railroad list.

* * *

When the ticker comes to a full stop, as it did yesterday at frequent intervals, its silence has a most depressing effect upon sentiment in a broker's office, especially upon the feeling of the broker, who pokes his hands deep in his pockets, wanders over to the window, stares mechanically at the world, and wonders if there will ever be any more business. A dull market is about the most unattractive spectacle imaginable. So long as the ticker keeps going there is some excuse for watching the tape, and people do watch it from force of habit, but when it stops dead, the broker, the manager, and the chronic client turn away in disgust. When it starts again they return expectantly to see what eighth has been added to or subtracted from the sum of values, and it is "1:45 P. M.," followed by a spasm of dashes and another stop.

* * *

Every little while the appearance of a new land company circular in a broker's mail reminds him that, while the public has been inconspicuous in the stock market during the last two years, its speculations in real estate have been enormous. The extent to which speculation has been carried in New York City real estate is generally known. What many people probably do not know so well is that a similar speculation has been in progress from one end of the country to another. A story was brought back from Illinois not long ago to the effect that farmers in that State were mortgaging their property to buy speculative land in the southwest. In other localities the preference is for Northwestern land. The speculation extends even into Canada. Land which the Canadian Pacific valued only two or three years ago at $5 an acre is now selling at $30. A man who recently returned from the West said that he had been reminded of the craze for land speculation which possessed Kansas and other States in 1885. Prosperous farmers in Kansas then mortgaged their bread-winning land, and with the proceeds speculated in paper representing land in California. Values sometimes doubled and trebled over night. The trading was not in land, but in deeds to land which the speculators had never seen, just as in a highly professional stock market it is sometimes said that the trading is not in stocks, but in contracts. One of the ugly features of the outside situation, in the judgment of experienced Wall Street people, is the extent to which land speculation has been carried all over the country.

* * *

A note of distinct conservatism has been sounded in the steel trade, and the United States Steel shares are a drug upon the stock market, as everybody has seen in the last four or five weeks. It is now admitted by some of the most competent authorities in the trade that consumers are not placing orders ahead as freely as could be wished for. It seems too early as yet to do more than speculate as to whether this is merely such a lull in the trade as came at about this time last year, or a more serious letting up of the demand. Some authorities have already declared that the hostility of lawmaking bodies to corporations and the popular clamor for restrictive legislation are a restraint upon new ventures, and that business is beginning to reflect the uncertainties thereby aroused. It seems unreasonable, however, for any one who feels optimistic on the immediate future of the stock market to take a bearish position on Steel common under 40, for if the Steel stocks will not bull, neither will the other market to any great advantage.

Loan Oversubscribed, Says Uchida.

Japan's 200,000,000 yen ($100,000,000) internal loan, part of her recently announced financial programme, has been largely oversubscribed, according to cable advices received by Consul General Uchida yesterday. The loan was put out at this time, the Japanese advices say, "to regulate the dullness in the money market." The total subscription amounted to 378,000,000 yen, more than 8,000,000 of which was subscribed to above the issue price.

BOSTON STOCK MARKET.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, March 22.—There is very little of special interest in the local money market. Banks are so well loaned up that they are not reaching out for loans. On the other hand, there is no urgent demand for new money. The usual table of rates, &c., follows:

Call loans, 5½@6 per cent.; time loans, collateral, 5¼@5½ per cent.; time loans, mercantile paper, 5½ per cent. Clearing House loans, 5 per cent. New York funds, 10c. discount. Clearings, $25,258,376. Balances, $1,899,384. Sub-Treasury debit, $76,775.

There was a fairly good tone in the copper shares at the opening to-day, and a somewhat better level was seen, but after the first hour business became very light. On the rally selling orders were met, which put a check to the advance. Amalgamated was a feature of strength among the mining shares, closing at the highest point for the day. There was some profit taking to be seen in American Pneumatic issues to-day, both the common and the preferred losing a fraction. Shoe common gained over a point and closed near the top. Balance of the list shows but nominal changes.

Auto Company in Bankruptcy.

A petition in bankruptcy was filed yesterday against the National Automobile Company of 205-209 East Eighty-sixth Street by these creditors: The Columbia Lubricant Company, $164; S. E. Eaton & Co., $238, and the New Publication Company, $168.

SUB-TREASURY SHIPMENT.

Movement Not Connected with Probable Gold Exports to Japan.

The Sub-Treasury transferred yesterday $600,000 to San Francisco and $200,000 to Cincinnati. The transfer to the Pacific Coast represented the shipping of United States disbursing officers' balances, and had no relation to the reported plans for the shipment of gold to Japan.

Such shipments, it was said in banking circles yesterday, are by no means improbable even though the recent imports of gold from Europe may have no direct connection with any financial operations of the Japanese Government.

No further amounts of gold were secured abroad yesterday by the National City Bank. It is still said, however, that other gold imports may be arranged in the near future. The foreign exchange market was firmer yesterday. At the close demand sterling was quoted at 4.8555, a net advance of 10 points for the day.

PHILADELPHIA PRICES.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, March 22.—It was a Reading market to-day, the stock being strong and active under New York buying, which was regarded more as "absorption" than "short covering," although there was evidence late in the day that the bear element had overstayed its time. Lehigh Valley advanced in sympathy. While the traction situation showed improvement, so far as legislation is concerned, it did not benefit Philadelphia Rapid Transit stock, which sold off a substantial fraction before effective support developed. The stock was well taken around 28.

United Gas Improvement and Philadelphia Electric were firm. Marsden also recovered, while Bell Telephone was ½ lower. Cambria Steel was dull and fractionally higher. Total sales, 38,706 shares. The list:

TRADING IN BALTIMORE.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, March 22.—Trading was only moderately active to-day. Houston Oil common stock was the feature. Opening at 11, it sold to 11⅜, an advance of ⅛ from yesterday's closing figure. The stock sold as high as 11¾ yesterday morning, and the decline was generally attributed to the fact that a block of over 3,000 shares was sold in New York yesterday at auction at $10 a share.

The sum of $500 was paid for an option on 500 shares of United Railways trust certificates, to be called within sixty days at 19, an advance of ½ on the present price.

Maryland and Pennsylvania stock jumped 1½ points. Western Maryland 4s ran off ¼ before the close. Atlantic Coast Line Consolidated 4s were stronger.

The market closed firm but dull. Sales: Bonds, $29,800; shares stock, 4,316.

$3,700 in Stocks Lost.

De Coppet & Doremus, brokers, at 30 Broad Street, are trying to find a certificate for twenty-five shares American Smelting and Refining common stock, valued at about $3,700, which disappeared from their office yesterday. The firm is inclined to believe that the certificate, made out to W. B. Franklin & Co., got into the wrong messenger's hands. Transfer has been stopped.

G. F. VALENTINE FAILS.

Promoter and Stockbroker Owes $15,087—Many Debts to Clubs.

George F. Valentine of 2 Wall Street, who lives at Scarsdale, N. Y., a promoter and manager of stock brokerage offices, filed a petition in bankruptcy yesterday, with liabilities of $15,087 and nominal assets of $5,317. The principal asset is a claim for salary against James W. Cunningham and Ellingwood & Cunningham, stock brokers. He also has $4,700 stock of the Ryder Wire and Fibre Company and $4,000 stock of the Third Rail Safety Signal Company, the actual value of which is unknown.

Valentine was President and Treasurer of both these companies. The petitioner was a member of many clubs and owes the following dues and charges: New York Athletic Club, $45; New York Club, $79; Lawyers' Club, $119; Underwriters' Club, $57; Transportation Club, $64; Scarsdale Golf Club, $134; the Chamber of Commerce, $70. He has seventy-four creditors in this city, in amounts ranging from $1 to $2,200. Two executions recently had been placed in the hands of Deputy Sheriff Flynn in favor of Tiffany & Co. for $102 and Charles W. Leavitt, Jr., $477. The Sheriff found nothing to levy on.

THE COMMERCIAL WORLD

WHEAT—The undertone of wheat was considerably stronger yesterday and prices had a sharp advance, closing ½@⅝c net higher. There was a good deal of short wheat covered and some increase of outside interest on the continued firmness of the cash situation, together with bullish news from abroad. The Budapest market closed 10 points lower and Berlin partly ¼ mark lower, with Paris closed. No export business was reported. No. 2 red at the close was quoted 85¼c, elevator, and 87c, free on board, afloat; No. 1 Northern, Duluth, 88¼c, free on board, afloat.

CORN—Positive strength was a feature in the corn market, prices showing a higher tendency from start to finish, with the close in New York ½c above the previous night. Its firmness lay in steady cables and a very light movement. At interior points arrivals for the day were only 242,000 bushels, compared with 719,000 bushels on the corresponding day last year. Moreover, the clearances aggregated 558,000 bushels. In the afternoon Broomhall's estimate that Argentine shipments would be only 80,000 bushels gave the market further strength in face of considerable realizing. A leading elevator concern in Chicago bought May and sold July. Commission houses were fair buyers. Cash corn was strong and higher, with sales of 6 loads reported on export account, final prices in New York being quoted as follows: No. 2 corn, 53c, elevator, and 50½c, free on board, afloat; No. 2 white, 51½c, and No. 2 yellow, 51c, free on board, afloat.

COTTON.—The cotton market continued active, with prices showing great irregularity, and a strong early advance was followed by a sharp reaction in the late trading. The close was barely steady at an advance of 2 points to a decline of 5 points. Sales for the day were estimated at 550,000 bales.

The opening was firm at an advance of 1@3 points on active bull support. Bears seemed a little more confident, and sold at the advance to 11c for July, at which figure the bulls were disappointed in not finding stop-loss orders, but the bull clique continued to support the market vigorously, particularly May, and the market showed an upward tendency until in the early afternoon May sold at 11.09 and July at 11.05, or 13@20 points net higher, and nearly three-quarters of a cent above the low level of Tuesday. At this level a more strongly reactionary tendency developed. The tone was quite unsettled toward the close, with the net gains on the near positions.

Contract prices ranged as follows:

BUSINESS TROUBLES.

E. E. APFELBAUM & CO.—A petition in bankruptcy has been filed against Edward E. Apfelbaum and Alexander S. Better, composing the firm of E. E. Apfelbaum & Co., skirt manufacturers at 48 West Fifteenth Street, by two creditors, H. B. Claflin Company, $392, and Tannenbaum & Bachman, $531. It was alleged that they are insolvent, have made preferential payments of $3,000, transferred merchandise and accounts of $3,000, and removed part of their property. Judge Holt of the United States District Court appointed John Gruenberg receiver of the assets, fixing his bond at $5,000. The liabilities are $10,000 and assets $2,800, consisting of accounts, $2,000, and stock, $800.

MORRIS L. JAEGER.—Morris L. Jaeger of 570 Eighth Avenue, a liquor dealer at 164 Delancey Street up to Feb. 1, has filed a petition in bankruptcy with liabilities of $10,056 and nominal assets, consisting of bar fixtures covered by a chattel mortgage of $6,000 to George Ehret, the brewer, the value of the fixtures being unknown. George Ehret is the largest creditor, for $6,000 secured and $3,054 unsecured. Jaeger took the saloon in October last. It is at the entrance of the Williamsburg Bridge.

CONSTANTINE TSOUCHLOS.—Constantine Tsouchlos, who keeps a Greek restaurant and lodging house at 105 West Twenty-ninth Street, has filed a petition in bankruptcy with liabilities of $897 and nominal assets of $1,505.

WILLIAM H. BRANDT.—William H. Brandt, roofer, of 546 East 143d Street, has filed a petition in bankruptcy with liabilities of $11,494 and nominal assets of $2,110.

BERTHA SPITZER.—A petition in bankruptcy has been filed against Bertha Spitzer, baker at 225 Second Street, by these creditors: Johnson Brothers, $183; Harris Scherl, $179; Moritz Fischer, $121, and Harry Krulewitch, $113. It was alleged that she is insolvent, has made preferential payments, and on March 10 sold the business, which was started about five years ago.

MORRIS HEINE.—Schedules in bankruptcy of Morris Heine of Heine & Horowitz, formerly managers of the Windsor Theatre at 47 Bowery, show liabilities of $27,354 and no assets. Most of the liabilities are for breach of contract and for salaries.

RETAIL CIGAR AND TOBACCO DEALERS' ASSOCIATION OF NEW YORK.—Schedules in bankruptcy of the Retail Cigar and Tobacco Dealers' Association of New York of 705 Third Avenue show liabilities of $54,371, of which $12,000 is outstanding; coupons for premiums and nominal assets of $21,868, consisting of stock, $5,000; cash, $203; notes and checks, $691; five horses and wagons, sold by the receiver for $837; office furniture, $250; accounts, $11,681, and articles of various kinds for premiums, $3,200. There are 120 creditors.

PHOENIX DRUG COMPANY.—Deputy Sheriff Murray has taken possession of the place of business of the Phoenix Drug Company at 275 Water Street on two executions for $1,085 in favor of Arden D. Doty, and has set down the sale for Tuesday next. The company was incorporated on Jan. 22, 1904, with a capital stock of $100,000 to manufacture drug specialties for the wholesale trade.

SURROGATE NOTICES.

SARASOHN, KASRYEL H.—The People of the State of New York, by the grace of God free and independent, to Bertha Sarasohn, individually and as coadministratrix of the goods, chattels, and credits of KASRYEL H. SARASOHN, deceased; Ezekiel Sarasohn, David Kamaiky, Israel Kamaiky, Rebecca Kamaiky, The State Bank, The Van Norden Trust Company, Louis Kram, Sarah Levenkind, M. and L. Jarmulowsky, Meyer Koss, The People of the State of New York, heirs, next of kin, and creditors of Kasryel H. Sarasohn, late of the City and County of New York, deceased, send greeting:

You and each of you are hereby cited and required personally to be and appear before our Surrogate of the County of New York, at the Surrogates' Court of said county, held at the County Court House in the County of New York on the 3d day of April, 1906, at half-past ten o'clock in the forenoon of that day, then and there to show cause why a decree should not be made directing a distribution of the surplus money among the persons entitled thereto, in accordance with the provisions of Section 2,799 of the Code of Civil Procedure; and such of you as are hereby cited as are under the age of twenty-one years are required to appear by your guardian, if you have one, or if you have none, to appear and apply for one to be appointed, or in the event of your neglect or failure to do so, a guardian will be appointed by the Surrogate to represent and act for you in the proceeding.

In testimony whereof we have caused the Seal of the Surrogates' Court of the said County of New York to be hereunto affixed. Witness, Hon Frank T. Fitzgerald, a Surrogate of our said county, at the County of New York, the 1st day of March, in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and six.

MARCH 1906

IN THE REAL ESTATE FIELD

Estate Sells John Street Building—Buyers for Nine Dwellings in East Fifty-sixth Street Block—Other Dealings.

William A. White & Sons have sold for the estate of Thomas Suffern 81 John Street, a four-story loft building, on lot 27.1 by 105. This is the first time this property has been transferred in over ninety years.

Buying on East 56th Street.

Douglas Robinson, Charles S. Brown & Co. have bought for clients the nine dwellings 140 to 144, 147 and 149, 150 to 154, and 158 East Fifty-sixth Street, between Lexington and Third Avenues. The sellers were W. B. Anderson, Wolf Borroscheck, Esther Kemp, Annie Maguire, J. D. Wilkins, and Mary Scholhof. It is the intention of the buyers to remodel these houses and keep the block a residential one.

Douglas Robinson, Charles S. Brown & Co. have also sold for the Murray-Lenox Land Company 112 East Seventy-first Street, a four-story brick and stone flat, on lot 25 by 100.5.

Leases Near Times Square.

The McVickar-Gaillard Realty Company has leased for George Henry Warren to a client the five-story building at the northwest corner of Broadway and Fifty-third Street, fronting 76 feet on Broadway. The lease is for a long term of years, at an aggregate rental of over $100,000.

The leasing of the Murtha property in the flatiron block at the northerly end of Times Square to Walter J. Salomon is referred to in another column.

S. B. Goodale & Son have leased for Oswald Oelschlaeger, for a term of years, the nine-story business building 42 East Twenty-third Street, to John F. Baber.

The Charles F. Noyes Company has leased the eight-story office and loft building 15 Spruce Street for the William Zinsser Realty Company to the Socialistic Co-operative Publishing Company, publishers of the New York Volks-Zeitung and other periodicals. The lease is for ten years, at an aggregate rental of about $80,000.

Deal on West 135th Street.

J. C. Hough has sold for the Fleischmann Realty Company to Edward J. Healy the Calumet, a five-story flat, on the north side of 135th Street, between Broadway and Amsterdam Avenue, 40 by 100.

Daniel W. Blumenthal, as attorney for Charles Seligman and Charles Hirsch, has bought the apartment house 117 West Eighty-ninth Street, 25 by 111.

Wesselman & Kraus, attorneys for Charlotte A. Williams, deny the report published yesterday afternoon that the northwest corner of Broadway and 144th Street, 150 by 100, had been sold.

Carroll & Co. have sold for F. L. Voorhees to Thomas J. Tuomey 220 West 133d Street, a five-story flat.

Purchase in Dyckman Tract.

Why Should Real Estate
dealers invariably have the Titles to their purchases insured?
BECAUSE they wish to buy only property which can be quickly converted into cash, and having Titles which will readily pass the most careful scrutiny of an examining lawyer. A Real Estate operator should not have his money locked up in unsalable property, nor to be inconvenienced by delays incident to clearing BAD TITLES.
UPON signing contract CONSULT YOUR ATTORNEY. He will advise you to insure your Title in this Company, which has a

WHITE PLAINS OFFICE:

WHITE PLAINS—10 ACRES; would cut up into 119 lots, absolutely the only acreage left within few minutes' walk of station; circumstances will let it sell RIGHT NOW for $16,000. Ask how much can be made on this.

LARGE ACREAGE—5 MILES ABOVE WHITE PLAINS; convenient to two stations; 95 acres; grandest building site we know of so near New York. The views are superb and you'll agree with us. MORE than the ordinary farm buildings. Late owner died 10 days ago. To sell quick, $24,000. The widow might as well ask $40,000. But it's your chance.

STANDARD OIL INQUIRY TO BE RESUMED TO-DAY

Attorney General Hadley Has Recent Decisions to Aid Him.

OFFICIALS MUST ANSWER

When Hearing Opens at 67 Wall Street Examination of H. H. Rogers Will Be Continued.

Herbert D. Hadley, Attorney General of Missouri, will to-day resume in New York his inquiry into the stock ownership of the Standard Oil Company of Indiana, the Waters-Pierce Oil Company, and the Republic Oil Company, the two last-named concerns being incorporated under the laws of Missouri.

The Western prosecutor seeks the cancellation of the license which permits the operation in Missouri of the Standard Oil Company of Indiana and the forfeiture of the charters under which the Waters-Pierce Company and the Republic Oil Company are doing business, on the ground that they have violated the anti-trust laws of his State.

He returns to New York much better equipped to force the information which he desires from H. H. Rogers and other Standard Oil officials than he was when the Vice President of that corporation, at the previous hearing, declined, "on the advice of counsel," to answer the questions propounded.

What with the decision in Missouri and the recent anti-trust decision of the United States Supreme Court, Mr. Wollman thinks that Mr. Hadley and he will be in a position to get pretty nearly anything they want in the way of information from 26 Broadway. All they have to do, under the Missouri ruling, is to ask for the stock books of the trust and they will have to be produced. The Attorney General has had things all his own way in Missouri the last few days, where the taking of evidence under the new conditions has gone far, it is said, toward establishing the contentions on which he based his suit.

Mr. Hadley left Missouri Wednesday night, and is due to arrive in New York early this morning. The resumption of the hearing in this city is scheduled for 10 o'clock at 67 Wall Street before Special Commissioner Sanborn. The Standard Oil lawyers, including Mr. Eddy, Judge Johnson, and Mr. Hageman, all three Westerners, are all due this morning.

It is probable that the hearing will continue for several days. In addition to completing the examination of H. H. Rogers, Mr. Hadley has other important Standard Oil officials under subpoena, including H. M. Tilford, who was served the other day while entering his automobile; William G. Rockefeller, a son of William Rockefeller and a nephew of John D.; John D. Archbold, one of the powers in the Standard's Directorate, and Frank Q. Barstow. There are other witnesses of less importance perhaps, but whose testimony is necessary in rounding out the case Mr. Hadley is trying to make, and the Missouri prosecutor will be well satisfied, according to Mr. Wollman, if he gets through by the middle of next week.

Belmont Tunnel Foreman Killed.

Cornelius Sheehan of Union Hill, N. J., died at Bellevue Hospital yesterday as the result of injuries suffered at noon in a shaft of the Belmont tunnel at 158 East Forty-second Street. Sheehan, the foreman, was looking down the shaft when the sand elevator, coming down, struck him on the head.

DIVEKEEPER SPRIGGS GUILTY OF ABDUCTION

And the Negro Still Has Two Indictments to Face.

JURY TAKES ELEVEN MINUTES

His Accomplice, Sallie Bennett, Pleads Guilty to Abduction—Case Important, Court Says.

Robert H. Spriggs, the negro owner of several disreputable resorts in this city, was found guilty before Judge Cowing in General Sessions yesterday on the charge of abduction as a second offense. The jury took eleven minutes to agree on the verdict. The prisoner was remanded until next Tuesday for sentence.

There are two other indictments, one for assault and the other for keeping a disorderly house, pending against him. The District Attorney will move immediately for his trial on one of these charges. He hopes, it was said yesterday, to obtain convictions on all three charges, if possible, and thus to make certain that Spriggs is put away for life. If found guilty on every charge the negro will be liable to a total punishment of thirty-two years.

No sooner had Spriggs been found guilty than his agent and alleged accomplice, the negress Sallie Bennett, was brought before Judge Cowing and permitted to plead guilty to abduction as a first offense. She will also be sentenced next Tuesday. She was indicted for abduction and keeping a disorderly house as second offenses. The complaining witness against her was a woman named Edna Coleman, who was taken into custody in a raid on the house which the Bennett woman ran four doors away from the Tenderloin Police Station.

Spriggs took the stand in his own behalf yesterday. He said that he was a waiter by trade, but that he had lately been making a living by "following the races." The Cornelia Street house was a "boarding house," he asserted, where rooms were rented to women for $4 a week. He admitted having been sent to prison in 1889 and having been fined last February for keeping a disorderly house.

Before Spriggs gave his testimony Policemen Berbenich and Meyers testified that when they raided the house at 14 Cornelia Street in July last year they found all the windows except those in Spriggs's room nailed up, all the doors and shutters secured with heavy padlocks, while the street clothes of the five women in the place were under lock and key.

In summing up the case for the defense Lawyer Heinzelman said that the story told by Hattie Warren was a "fabrication" and "rot," and that she had been moved to tell it "partly by fear of prosecution and partly by the misdirected sympathy of missionaries."

"My learned friend here may be slow," the lawyer declared, turning to Mr. Jerome. "He will take his own time. He cannot be driven by anybody. But when he is good and ready he will be sure to land with both feet at once. Had he wanted to get into that house on Cornelia Street, he would have made his way there through the chimney if necessary."

"There was one peculiarity about the testimony of the Warren woman," said Assistant District Attorney Garvan in the course of his address to the jury, which was brief and free from any attempt at oratorical display. "She shed no tears while speaking of her moral degradation, but twice they came while she was telling of how she had been beaten by the defendant, when, in moments of complete physical exhaustion and extreme physical suffering, she tried to rebel against his commands."

Judge Cowing referred in his charge to the jury to "the disgusting details revealed by the testimony of the people's witnesses," and said that "the importance of the case could not be overestimated."

Spriggs remained absolutely calm while listening to the verdict of the jury. He said in reply to questions concerning his pedigree that he was 47 years old, born in Virginia, had no business, and lived at 505 Sixth Avenue. His counsel will try to have his case appealed to a higher court. Their admission in open court that their client was the keeper of a disorderly house will undoubtedly have a decided effect on the trial of one of the other two charges pending against Spriggs.

"STEELICITY" DIDN'T WORK.

Lawyer-Inventor Rearrested for Taking an Investor's Money.

Charles Brewster Steele of the law firm of Brainsby, Doris & Steele, charged with practicing law without being admitted to the bar, was rearrested yesterday on a bench warrant after having been indicted by the Grand Jury for grand larceny. Two indictments, charging Steele with obtaining $9,215 under false pretenses from Augustine B. Wheeler, a New Orleans banker, were found after Steele had spent an hour with the jury trying to explain his transactions.

Assistant District Attorney Perkins said Steele got $23,000 out of Wheeler for the purpose of promoting a $12,000,000 South Dakota corporation with dummy Directors. One of the witnesses examined by the Grand Jury was Jesse R. Grant, whose name had been used without authorization on the prospectuses sent out by Steele. The name of Isaac E. Clarke, the father of Supreme Court Justice John Proctor Clarke, also was appropriated.

Before Judge O'Sullivan in General Sessions bail was fixed at $2,000. Thomas Kristic of 357 West Fifty-fourth Street offered security, but Assistant District Attorney Miner refused to accept it, and Steele was locked up in the Tombs. Steele said he was 46 years old, an inventor, and a resident of Flushing, L. I.

The company for which Wheeler's money was obtained was to exploit a motor invented by Steele. According to Wheeler's story, he learned from Steele that the motor could be put into any house, would furnish light, heat, and motive power, and could be used to propel street cars or to charge automobiles with "Steelicity."

MAJOR PRICE GETS AID OF PROSECUTOR'S WORD

Calls Judge Advocate Shanks to Praise His Work as Officer.

INSISTS HE WAS DRUGGED

Inspector of Militia Says Malt Is a Harmless Post Drink—Knocked Out Two Weeks.

Major David Price, Artillery Corps, United States Army, commanding officer at Fort Greble, Rhode Island, court-martialed on charges of conduct unbecoming an officer, intoxication, and violating a pledge of total abstinence, yesterday called the Judge Advocate, Major David C. Shanks, his prosecutor, to the stand at the trial in the Army Building.

Major Shanks said he met Major Price at West Point in 1883. He considered Price one of the most painstaking and hard working officers in the service. Price, he added, worked day and night, without regard to hours, and taken all in all was one of the most efficient officers he had ever known.

When the court convened Major Shanks had announced that the prosecution still had one witness to examine, but as that witness was ill the Government had decided to rest its case. Ex-Assistant District Attorney Le Barbier, counsel for Major Price, called Major J. B. Sanford and Col. Louis Carziac, who testified to the high esteem in which the accused was held by his brother officers, and then surprised the court by calling Major Shanks.

Price took the stand and said he had been in the army thirty-three years. This was the first time he ever had been under charges. When he returned from the Philippines to stand examination for promotion to the rank of Major he had very little time to study, and in consequence of the nervous strain the examining board made him take a pledge of total abstinence, although he had not been in the habit of drinking. Telling of his trip to Syracuse on military inspection work on Feb. 5, he said:

"Arriving in Syracuse I asked a man the direction to the Yates Hotel. He said he would show me, and suggested that we have a drink. I told him I was not drinking, but would take a little malt. He called for the drinks, and I was given what I thought was malt. Until I was brought back from Syracuse I have no recollection of what took place."

"Do you know whether the man you walked with came in on the same train that you did?" Major Shanks asked.

"I suppose so, as he and two others who were with him were well dressed and carried traveling bags."

"When did you find out what had taken place?"

"I do not know how long I remained in the place, neither do I know whether I went from it to the hotel. The first sensation I had was being unable to sleep. I do not know what became of me after I drank the malt."

"Why did you ask for malt?"

"Because I considered it non-intoxicant. I knew it was sold at Fort Grebel, where I was in command, and I had the post Surgeon test it, in order to see that the liquor law was not being violated."

Price said he believed he was drugged. He was not robbed, but spent all his money—$58. Asked how long he was under the influence of the drug, he said:

"I thought it was a few days, but I have learned from Capt. Bawley, who was sent to Syracuse to get me, that it was about two weeks."

Arguments will be heard to-day, and the findings will be sent to Gen. Grant for review, by Gen. Grant to the Secretary of War, and by the Secretary to President Roosevelt.

BIG BUILDING WON'T GO UP.

Part of the Plot at North End of Times Square Leased.

Another big building project vanished into thin air yesterday when there was recorded at the Register's Office a lease of the Murtha property in the flatiron block at the north end of Times Square to Walter J. Salomon.

This is the block for which a concern known as Ingram Brothers & Co. caused to be filed at the Building Department recently plans for a theatre, hotel, and office structure. Mr. Salomon's lease covers the southerly part of the block, a plot fronting 45 feet on Times Square and running north about 75 feet on both Broadway and Seventh Avenue. The lease is for twenty-six years at $25,000 a year, with privilege of an additional term of twenty-one years at $36,000 a year.

Mr. Salomon says that he will erect a new business building on the site, but that his plans are not sufficiently advanced to admit of any details.

We've made a beautiful start with our boys' clothing this Spring.

Every suit brand new—all the little left from last season is gone.

Every style brought up to the minute and shown in all permissible variations. For instance, our boys' Norfolk suits are made both with yoke and with plaits; double breasted suits both with bloomers and with straight knee trousers.

As for patterns—why, if the business didn't increase our salesmen might well decrease, the patterns so nearly sell themselves.

Quite easy to buy a Suit at $15, but what are they after the newness wears off?

If I put as little in my $15 Suit as others, the result to you would be the same—but I don't. I put more in them, more work inside. The work that is out of sight if left out is ruinous.

The inside work well done makes the garment keep its shape.

My $15 Suits cost me more than they should. They're worth more, but I have a reason for not charging more.

WOULD LIMIT TENURE OF FEDERAL JUDGES

Some Advisers of President Favor Change of Constitution.

RESULT OF IMMUNITY CASE

Judge Humphrey's Decision Discussed at Cabinet Meeting and Divergent Views Expressed.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 23.—Judge Humphrey's decision in the Beef Trust case has had one unlooked-for effect. It has brought before the minds of the President and his advisers the question whether life tenure for Federal Judges is a good thing or whether the system might not advantageously be changed.

There has already been some discussion of this subject, though so far it has been brought up only in a tentative way. Some members of the Administration are strongly in favor of a change, and among them the most influential and prominent. On the other hand, the President has been strongly advised against making any recommendation looking to that end.

In order to effect any change in the tenure of office of Judges it would be necessary to amend the Constitution, which in Article III., Section 1, provides that "the Judges of both the Supreme and inferior courts shall hold their offices during good behavior."

The idea is that a tenure of office amendment could be adopted under which Federal Judges could hold office for a term of, for instance, ten years. The argument in favor of such a plan is that Judges who had not committed impeachable offenses and yet were clearly not desirable Magistrates would not be permanently kept in office. Judges who were satisfactory could be reappointed at the expiration of their terms. According to this argument, in practice reappointments always would be made, except in cases where it was plainly for the best interests of the public that a Judge should not continue in place.

Senator Tillman, the custodian of the Rate bill in the Senate, some time ago said that if the arguments of anti-rate regulation Senators were correct, and it was impossible to enact any legislation urgently desired by the public because the courts would always nullify it, the courts should be reformed. He was erroneously reported as saying that he favored "wiping out the Supreme Court." He did not say anything of the kind; he said what is quoted here; and it is now evident that in saying it he did not go beyond the wishes of an extremely eminent portion of the Administration.

The bitterness and depression in Administration circles over Judge Humphrey's decision continues unabated, and there is still no decision on the question of whether an appeal can be taken. The indications are that no way will be found to take one. It is felt that all the President's plans for getting at the criminal element among the trust leaders have been frustrated, and that his whole campaign to that end is a wreck.

Some of the members of his Cabinet feel as deeply as he does on the subject, and resent the fact that the comprehensive programme for the punishment of the guilty among the trusts should have been broken up by a decision like that of Judge Humphrey. These gentlemen, however, recoil from the idea of attempting to secure any legislation designed to prevent the recurrence of such things on the bench.

Both views found expression at the Cabinet meeting to-day and the subject was not dropped. It was merely put in abeyance for further consideration. It is felt that those elements among the trusts which have violated the penal laws must be punished, and that a way must be found to prevent similar offenses in future, yet there is no mistaking the fact that Judge Humphrey's decision seems to have brought all such hopes to naught.

This is the situation which has brought forward the suggestion above outlined. It is felt to be a grave situation; the Administration does not intend to give up its efforts to get after and punish the guilty, and yet finds the judiciary in the way. What outcome there can be, short of a reform of the judiciary or an abandonment of all hope of putting an end to trust aggressions, is not seen by those officials who favor the suggestion made to-day.

BRAZIL TO BE OUR ALLY?

Root, It Is Said, Will Ask Her to Look After the Monroe Doctrine.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 23.—Brazil, as the special custodian of the Monroe Doctrine for South America, is said to be the object of Secretary Root's trip to Rio de Janeiro next Summer. An entente cordiale between the two republics is to be arranged, it is said, and under this Brazil would be willing to formulate a Monroe Doctrine and to become, in a way, the general representative of the United States in the southern continent.

Mr. Root will visit a number of the South American capitals after leaving Rio, and, whatever his purposes are with regard to a Brazilian alliance, he intends to do everything in his power to bring about a closer understanding between the northern and southern halves of the Western Hemisphere.

In going to the Pan-American Conference he is taking an unprecedented step, but the conference is only an excuse for his visit, which is really for very much broader purposes. It has been felt that the southern republics are disposed to be suspicious of the United States, and have misinterpreted the President's declarations, and it will be the mission of the head of the State Department to remove erroneous impressions and create a better feeling all around.

FOUND A REAL BOOKWORM.

It Couldn't Stand the Change from Shakespeare to Ruskin.

M. Peignot, the French bibliophile, relates that he once found twenty-seven volumes pierced completely through by a single bookworm. This testimony has been received with varying credence by the men and women who find their chief pleasure in the library.

There are those who have had to do with books for years and years and have yet to chance upon a bookworm at work, and the finding of a bookworm is an occurrence so rare that the workers employed by the Merwin-Clayton Sales Company, 20 East Twentieth Street, forgot their several tasks yesterday and gathered about an old volume of Shakespeare when Henry Thorpe, who was busy cataloguing a consignment of books from Dr. Burnett of Washington, discovered a real live worm busily engaged in digesting a few stanzas of "Venus and Adonis."

There was no disputing the fact that the find was genuine. "It's a bookworm all right," Mr. Thorpe declared, "and it's the first one I've seen in twenty years."

The worm, which was about a third of an inch long and of studious complexion, wriggled from the pages and fell to a book by John Ruskin. There it died. Its corpse was carefully picked up and placed in an envelope for preservation.

"I have been around books from my boyhood," said Christopher Gerhardt, one of the oldest employes of the Merwin-Clayton Company, "and this is the first bookworm I ever saw. I have heard legends to the effect that as soon as they leave the pages of the book which they are investigating they die. This may be because they become so inured to a particular literary atmosphere that any change is fatal. Mr. Thorpe's find strengthens my belief in this tradition. Certainly the creature died without delay after shifting from Shakespeare to Ruskin."

LOCKED IN; FORCED TO VOTE.

Massachusetts Senate Kills Labor Bill After Strenuous Session.

BOSTON, March 23.—After a turbulent session, during which the members were locked in their chamber and during which eighteen roll calls were ordered, the Massachusetts Senate this afternoon reconsidered its previous action of passing the so-called overtime bill and then rejected the measure.

The bill prohibited the employment of women and minors in textile establishments before 6 o'clock in the morning and after 6 o'clock at night. In 1904 it was vetoed by Gov. Bates, which action cost him a re-election.

As the roll was being called to-day some of the advocates of the bill started to leave the Chamber. By order of President Dana the doorkeeper barred the exit, and the Senators were obliged to remain within. Finally a motion to reconsider the bill as previously passed was lost by 11 to 13. Amid much disorder and speechmaking a closure rule was adopted. A final vote on the motion to reconsider showed a tie, but it was broken by President Dana, who cast his ballot in behalf of reconsideration. The vote was 13 to 12.

The vote on the bill itself was 18 to 12 against it, President Dana casting the dciding vote for its defeat.

CONDUCTOR GETS 10 YEARS.

Was Running a Street Car When It Killed a Driver.

Albert Oreman, conductor of a Lexington Avenue street car, was sentenced to ten years in Sing Sing by Judge Foster, in General Sessions yesterday, for causing the death of Bernard McDonald, driver of a United States mail wagon.

"I have been reliably informed," said Judge Foster to the defendant, "that it costs the Metropolitan Street Railway Company nearly $2,000,000 a year to settle damage suits resulting from such carelessness and neglect of duty as you have been adjudged guilty of. And of far greater moment is the loss of life and limb and the suffering inflicted by such men as you. I will punish you heavily, in the hope that it will serve as a deterrent to others of your kind."

Oreman was running the car instead of Motorman Robert Seymour early in the morning of Jan. 1, when he hit McDonald's wagon. The driver was thrown to the ground and killed on the spot. The family of McDonald accepted $20,000 in settlement of their case against the company.

MANIAC SHOOTS EIGHT.

He Is Killed, Either by Himself or Citizens—Slaughter at a Funeral.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, March 23.—Walter Potee, a maniac with three pistols and a shotgun, this afternoon shot and wounded eight persons, two probably fatally, set fire to the house in which he had barricaded himself, and for an hour defied firemen, policemen, and the excited citizens of Brooklyn, Anne Arundel County, just across the Patapsco River from Baltimore City. The madman then either committed suicide or was killed by one of the many shots fired through the windows at him.

While friends were gathering at the home of John H. Potee in Brooklyn to attend the funeral of his six months' old child, Walter Potee, a brother of John, suddenly rushed into the house and began shooting right and left. His brother was the first victim.

The funeral party fled in terror and the maniac rushed to the second story and shouting defiance to all, fired at all persons who approached. He then set fire to the house.

Otis Clark and other residents got their rifles and whenever Potee showed himself, fired at him. While the house was burning Chief of Police Irvin, though shot in the hand, rushed into the parlor and saved the casket containing the dead baby. After the house was burned Potee was found dead with a bullet in his breast.

Potee had been demented for some time.

Travel Easier on the Atlantic.

For the first time this Winter two of the Saturday transatlantic liners reached New York last night ahead of time. They are the Cunarder Campania, from Liverpool, and La Savoie, from Havre. Both were sighted off Fire Island early last night. They will dock about 8:30 A. M. to-day.

SEWER EXPLOSIONS TERRIFY WEST SIDE

Ninth Avenue Bombarded with Many Manhole Covers.

NEIGHBORHOOD WAS SHAKEN

Surgeons Attended Two of the Injured —Many Windows Broken and a House Partly Wrecked.

For the third time in less than five months the district bordered by Forty-ninth and Forty-fourth Streets and Ninth and Eleventh Avenues was scared into a panic yesterday afternoon by explosions of gas in the sewers. Many windows were smashed, one dwelling was partly wrecked, and the tall tenements in the neighborhood were made to rock on their foundations.

The police declare that it was little less than miraculous that no lives were lost. The roster at the West Forty-seventh Street Station contains the names of only two persons seriously enough injured to require the attendance of an ambulance surgeon, but there were scores injured by flying glass and narrow escapes aplenty.

An investigation set on foot last night to ascertain the cause of the explosion has not terminated. The police, however, are inclined to believe that on this occasion the explosion—of a kind to which this particular neighborhood seems peculiarly susceptible—was caused by a somewhat intricate combination of circumstances.

One theory advanced was to the effect that illuminating gas which had leaked into the sewers and was prevented by a high tide from finding an outlet on the North River front and by the snow and ice on the manholes from reaching the upper air through the airholes in the latter, had been ignited by an electric spark from an underground wire. Repair wagons of the Consolidated Gas Company and the Edison Electric Company swarmed into the district last night, but the crews were silent regarding the explosion.

It was five minutes past 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon when the explosion occurred. This is an hour when practically every policeman in the city is up and about, some relieving, others being relieved, and still others who have been on reserve preparing to go home. The shock was felt with terrific force at the West Forty-seventh Street Station, and Capt. Daly, who had just sent the 4 o'clock platoon on duty, lost no time in rushing out his reserves and in hurrying himself to the district where the explosion occurred.

Just as he was leaving the station house Policeman James L. White, who had been on duty at Fifty-first Street and Ninth Avenue, sent in the first information of the explosion. In the two blocks in Ninth Avenue, between Fiftieth and Fifty-second Streets, there are not less than five sewer manholes located between the two car tracks and directly under the elevated structure.

The covers of all these manholes were sent flying with a succession of cannon-like reports, about a second between each, leaving sheets of flame and trails of smoke in their wakes. They were stopped by the elevated structure, about twenty feet above the level of the street, and came down shattered into a thousand fragments.

Practically every window in the rows of tall tenements on either side of the avenue, between Fifty-first and Fifty-second Streets, was blown in. There was a very general shattering of windows in the block below, too, but there some of the houses escaped damage.

The streets at the time the explosion occurred were teeming with life. School children who had spent an hour after school playing in the street began coming home. There was a general scattering of these and other persons, resulting in boundless confusion, which was added to when the fire engines and the ambulances from Roosevelt Hospital began to arrive.

Dr. Collis, from Roosevelt Hospital, found work to do right away. Mrs. Rose Kearns, 23 years old, of 774 Ninth Avenue was standing in the doorway of her home when the explosion occurred. She was cut severely by flying glass, and had her injuries attended to by the surgeon, but refused to go to the hospital.

The two blocks in Ninth Avenue were where the explosion spent its greatest force. Throughout Fifty-first Street, from Ninth Avenue to the North River, it left a freakish trail of shattered windows and other damage. For two blocks on either side of this street along Tenth and Eleventh Avenues manholes were hoisted forty feet in the air.

Perhaps the most serious damage was done in Fifty-first Street. In front of the tenement house 553 West Fifty-first Street, which belongs to Mrs. Dennis Lyon, the wife of a policeman, there is a sewer manhole. Its cover, strangely enough, remained in place, while the explosion that should have found its vent through it broke through the floor of the tenement house basement instead.

The basement is occupied by Mrs. Margaret Hayes, a widow. She was sitting in the front room of the basement talking to a visitor when four plates from the floor were torn up bodily, snatching the rocking chair from under the visitor and hurling the latter to the floor and the chair across the room.

The chair landed on the bed where the thirteen-month-old baby of Mrs. Hayes lay asleep. At the same time the stove was torn from its fastenings and practically every piece of furniture in the room tossed into fragments. The infant was unhurt, and the mother snatched the child up in her arms and rushed out through the street to a neighboring church, where she fell in a heap on the steps. Her basement home is a wreck.

In front of 532 on this street, a manhole cover was lifted off with a terrific explosion and a burst of flame just as a delivery wagon and a snow-laden truck passed, going in opposite directions. The cover passed between the two teams in its upward journey. The horse that pulled the delivery wagon had his mane and tail burned, and one of the horses pulling the snow had his ear scorched by the burst of flame. Thomas Roane of 463 West Fifty-second Street was thrown to the street from the delivery wagon and so seriously injured that he was attended by an ambulance surgeon.

A manhole cover in Tenth Avenue at Fiftieth Street was blown forty feet into the air just as a group of children crossed the avenue. None of the children was injured.

The police heard of a number of cases where persons had been stunned, thrown out of bed, and suffered slight injuries.

A CLUB OVER THE SOUTH.

Republicans Take Peculiar Action in Contest of Houston's Son.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 23.—The House Committee on Elections No. 3 took action to-day on the contest of Andrew Jackson Houston against Moses L. Broocks of the Second Texas District.

Houston is the son of the famous Sam Houston and a stanch Republican. He was formerly United States Marshal and is regarded as a strong man in his district. He was beaten on the face of the returns by 9,000. The point was raised that the poll tax law of the State disfranchised thousands of Republicans who had failed to pay the tax in time to be eligible to vote.

Members of the committee had told the Democrats that there was no doubt of the legality of the election of Broocks, but to-day it was decided to make a negative report, simply declaring that Houston was not elected. Broocks will therefore hold his seat by his certificate of election and without affirmative action by the House.

This is an extraordinary course of procedure, but there is said to be precedent for it. The purpose of it, as interpreted by the Democratic leaders, is that it has reference to possible action next Winter by the Republicans in case they find that the Congressional elections have gone against them next Fall.

CASHES THE CARNEGIE FARM.

Nephew-in-Law Hever Shows $25,000 Profit—To be Twombly's Neighbor.

When Andrew Carnegie announced a year ago that his niece, Nancy T. Carnegie, had been secretly married for a year to James Hever, her riding instructor, he said:

"I am much better pleased that Nancy should have married a sober, moral, good man without wealth, rather than a worthless Duke."

A few weeks ago Mr. Hever sold at a profit of $25,000 a farm at Roslyn, L. I., which Mr. Carnegie had presented to him and his wife. It was with considerable satisfaction, therefore, that Mr. Carnegie announced the sale yesterday, and said that Mr. and Mrs. Hever had taken the proceeds to buy another estate, known as Blake farm, at Madison, N. J., comprising 218 acres, with a fine house and stables.

Mr. Hever will make many improvements on the place, which he bought from Richard Vernon. The estate adjoins the $1,000,000 farm of H. McK. Twombly, and is near Dr. Ward's place. Mrs. Hever is the daughter of Thomas M. Carnegie, brother of Andrew Carnegie, and is the latter's favorite niece. Thomas M. Carnegie left several millions to Mrs. Hever's mother, who lives at Dungeness, near Fernandina, Fla. Mrs. Hever is there now with her young daughter, Florence Retta Hever.

A ROCKEFELLER COMPLAINS.

Old Man Arrested on Charge of Cruelty to a Horse.

Special to The New York Times.

GREENWICH, Conn., March 23.—John Bell of Port Chester, 73 years old, a carpenter and builder, was arrested by Sheriff Ritch to-day for cruelty to his horse, upon complaint of Percy Rockefeller, son of William Rockefeller.

The Sheriff did not look up the old man, but took him to his home to dinner, and afterward released him on his own recognizance for a hearing to-morrow.

The information given to Prosecutor White was that Bell had turned an old horse out to pasture next to the Rockefeller house last Fall and left him out all Winter, with no shelter but a shed. Tuesday morning the horse was found lying in the snow and had to be killed to end its suffering. Bell said he had treated the horse well and had given it two bales of hay this Winter.

THREE RIVER BOATS AGROUND

Hudson Season Opened, but Ice Stops Traffic.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 23.—Albany and Troy night-boat lines sent out their first boats of the season from New York last evening. When the craft reached the upper Hudson they encountered zero weather and considerable ice.

In their endeavor to keep close together and avoid the heaviest ice, the big passenger boat C. W. Morse of the People's Line, the passenger steamer Saratoga of the Citizens' Line, and a freighter of the Murray Line ran hard aground on a shoal nearly opposite Coeymans.

The passengers were taken off the Morse and Saratoga and transferred to the steamboat Ursula and brought to this city at floodtide this afternoon. The three vessels floated without having suffered any injury and continued their trips to this city and Troy.

Until the weather moderates no further attempt will be made to run the boats.

SHAW DEFENDS HULL.

Says He Got No Campaign Money from Morgan or Rockefeller.

DES MOINES, Iowa, March 23.—"All the world knows that Congressman John A. T. Hull never got a cent from Morgan or Rockefeller for use in his campaign," declared Secretary of the Treasury Leslie M. Shaw, who arrived in Des Moines to-day for an address which he will deliver to-night.

The Secretary's assertion was made in answer to a request for his opinion in regard to the accusations made by ex-Secretary of State George Dobson, who is making a campaign for the nomination in the Seventh District against Congressman Hull. Dobson has asserted that corporation money was used freely in the interest of Congressman Hull during previous campaigns.

William Rockefeller's Health Good.

TARRYTOWN, N. Y., March 23.—B. M. Haws, Superintendent of William Rockefeller's country seat Rockwood Hall, has received a letter from Mr. Rockefeller, written by him in Paris last week, in which Mr. Rockefeller says he is enjoying the best of health. Mr. Haws says his employer has been in good health all the time he has been away and there is no foundation for the report that he has an incurable disease.

Immigrant Had $7,500 in a Belt.

Emanuel Gerard, a Russian refugee, who arrived from Bremen on the North German Lloyd liner Trave yesterday, showed an old belt to the Immigration Inspectors with 15,000 rubles in gold in it. SUIT FOR $3,370,341 AGAINST R. A. M'CURDY

Mutual Life Charges Him with Unfaithfulness and Neglect.

ATTACKS YOUNG McCURDY

Says a Salary of $20,000 Was Enough for Him—Nine Causes Against the ex-President.

Suit for $3,370,341.66 was begun by the Mutual Life Insurance Company yesterday by service of a complaint against its ex-President, Richard A. McCurdy, who is now on a European trip. This sum represents what the counsel for the company and Joseph H. Choate, counsel for the Truesdale Investigating Committee, figure out that Mr. McCurdy's administration cost the Mutual, as far as political contributions, excessive salary, "confidential expense fund" payments, and the improvident contracts with Charles H. Raymond & Co. and Robert H. McCurdy are concerned.

The complaint served yesterday was the first of eight that are coming in the suits against Mr. McCurdy and his son, Robert H. McCurdy; his son-in-law, Louis A. Thébaud, and Charles H. Raymond, who first, with the younger Mr. McCurdy, and later with Thébaud, constituted the firm of Raymond & Co., general agents for the Mutual in the metropolitan district. In general the charges against Mr. McCurdy are based on allegations of unfaithfulness and neglect of his duties as President of the Mutual Life. There are nine distinct causes of action specified in the complaint.

Political Contributions.

The first five causes of action seek recovery in the aggregate of $292,500 as alleged contributions to political parties since Jan. 1, 1885. These contributions are stated to have been $15,000 in 1896, $35,000 in 1900, and $40,000 in 1904 to the National Republican Campaign Committee, $2,500 in the year 1904 to the Republican Congressional Committee, and $200,000 embracing the various contributions testified by Senator Platt to have been made to the Republican State Committee since Jan. 1, 1885. In connection with each one of these five causes of action the complaint says:

"The said payments were unlawful, improvident, and a waste of the assets of the plaintiff, and were made, authorized, or permitted by the defendant through want of faithfulness and ordinary care, vigilance, and diligence in the discharge of his aforesaid duties to the plaintiff; the said payments were made without authority or authorization by the plaintiff, were not for any of its corporate purposes, and were beyond the lawful powers of the plaintiff as a corporation, and the defendant neglected to establish proper and adequate rules and regulations to prevent the said payments and the contribution of the plaintiff's moneys to political parties."

The sixth cause of action seeks to recover from Mr. McCurdy $225,000, embracing the $50,000 alleged increase of annual salary drawn by him since June 1, 1901, without authority, it is asserted, and under circumstances detailed in the testimony before the Armstrong Committee.

The seventh cause seeks to recover $600,000 as the aggregate of the sums of $25,000 drawn quarterly from the plaintiff for the last six years of Mr. McCurdy's Presidency, on the voucher of the Committee on Expenditures, and under circumstances detailed in the testimony before the Armstrong Committee. In connection with this cause the complaint declares:

Confidential Fund.

"During the said period the maintenance and purposes of the said 'confidential fund,' and the use made of the moneys constituting the said 'fund,' were known by the defendant, or could or should have been known by him by the exercise of due care and faithfulness in the discharge of his aforesaid duties to the plaintiff; nevertheless, through want of ordinary care, vigilance, diligence, and faithfulness in the discharge of his said duties to the plaintiff, the defendant directed or permitted the said 'fund' to be maintained and the moneys constituting the same to be expended as aforesaid.

The eighth cause charges the defendant with a loss to the plaintiff of $1,250,000 through improvidence and want of faithfulness and diligence in employing the firm of Charles H. Raymond & Co. as the general agents of the plaintiff in the metropolitan district, and in continuing and even increasing the rates of commissions paid to the firm after it had become apparent that they were making exorbitant profits at the expense of the plaintiff.

In this cause the complaint alleges that Louis A. Thébaud, the son-in-law of Mr. McCurdy, was taken into the Raymond firm in 1893 as the successor to Robert H. McCurdy, who is the son of the defendant, and who had been appointed by his father as Superintendent of the Foreign Department of the Mutual; that prior to entering the partnership, Thébaud had been employed as a clerk in the office of the Mutual Life's general agent for New Jersey, and that on entering the firm Thébaud received a quarter interest, which was increased in 1896 to one-half, in 1902 to two-thirds, and in 1903 to three-quarters, making a total net profit to him of nearly $800,000 from 1893 to 1904, irrespective of his interest in the large amounts paid to the firm out of the plaintiff's moneys practically as gratuities.

Gratuities of $500,000.

These gratuities, it is declared, aggregate not less than $500,000, and are said to have been paid to the firm without any consideration to the plaintiff. It is also charged that these gratuities and the rates of commission received by the firm were increased as the interest of Mr. Thébaud in the firm increased, and that in 1905 the net profits of the firm from its alleged contracts with the plaintiff would have exceeded $200,000 had payments thereon not been stopped in November of that year.

The ninth cause takes up the $1,282,841.12 received by Robert H. McCurdy as commissions from 1886 to November, 1905, as Superintendent of the Foreign Department, and charges that, by reason of unfaithfulness and neglect by the ex-President, these commissions had been allowed at rates which the enormous increase in the foreign business had rendered exorbitant and unnecessary. The complaint further charges that while acting as Superintendent Robert H. McCurdy had for several years been a member of the firm of Charles H. Raymond & Co., receiving a large share of the profits therefrom, and that the services of Robert H. McCurdy as Superintendent of the Foreign Department could have been amply compensated by a salary not exceeding $20,000 a year.

The Mutual Life demands judgment against Mr. McCurdy for $3,370,841.66, with interest, as damages for his unfaithfulness.

De Lancey Nicoll, counsel for Richard A. and Robert H. McCurdy, who accepted service of the complaints for his clients, would say nothing about the actions last night.

ROCKEFELLER BELEAGUERED.

Process Server with a Writ Now Watches His Lakewood Home.

Special to The New York Times.

LAKEWOOD, N. J., March 23.—M. E. Palmedo, a process server who has been seeking for several weeks to serve John D. Rockefeller with a subpoena, arrived here this afternoon with an assistant. They went to the Rockefeller country home and looked around the place for an hour or so, but made no effort to reach the house.

Palmedo says he has a subpoena in an action which will require Mr. Rockefeller's presence in New York. The nature of this action he refused to state.

The guards at the outer gates at the Rockefeller place were withdrawn this afternoon, but it was still impossible to gain access to the house, as watchmen headed off visitors before they could reach the front door.

It was expected here to-day that Mr. Rockefeller would go to New York to see his new grandson, and his house was watched closely to see if he left. He did not leave.

J. S. LOOMIS DIES ON YACHT.

Brooklyn Lumber Merchant's End Very Sudden—Was 82 Years Old.

Special to The New York Times.

BRUNSWICK, Ga., March 23.—John S. Loomis of Brooklyn, N. Y., died suddenly from heart disease about 2 o'clock this morning aboard his steam yacht Saramore, which put into this port yesterday afternoon.

Mr. Loomis had been spending the Winter cruising in Southern waters. He had appeared to be in his usual health.

John S. Loomis had been a prominent lumber merchant in Brooklyn for over fifty years. He was 82 years old. He had been suffering from heart disease for some time.

GOV. PATTISON VERY LOW.

Friends Fear He Will Die This Morning—Has Bright's Disease.

Special to The New York Times.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, March 23.—It is now learned that Gov. Pattison is suffering from Bright's disease, and it is believed that death is very near. Mr. Pattison has been in a state of coma since 1 o'clock this afternoon, and his physicians admit that there is little, if any, hope.

The Governor's friends fear that the end will come before dawn.

It was reported to-night that the Governor was being sustained by the administration of oxygen, but this was denied.

The Governor's son has been summoned here from Harvard.

YELLOW FEVER IN PANAMA.

Another Case at Bocas del Toro—Officials to Confer.

PANAMA, March 23.—Another case of yellow fever having developed at Bocas del Toro, H. D. Reed, executive Secretary in the Department of Government and Sanitation on the Canal Zone, will confer to-morrow with Foreign Secretary Guardia regarding the most efficient means of exterminating the fever there.

Probably Panama will appoint as health officer at Bocas del Toro some member of the staff of Col. Gorgas, Chief Sanitary Officer of the Canal Zone, under whose supervision the town will be fumigated and sanitary rules similar to those established here will be enforced.

PLEDGE FROM CHATTANOOGA.

Lynchers Will Be Punished, Federal Officers Are Told.

WASHINGTON, March 23.—The Department of Justice was in telegraphic communication to-day with United States District Attorney Penland, at Chattanooga, regarding the lynching of the negro Ed Johnson, following the action of the Supreme Court of the United States in granting a stay of execution in his case.

There have been conferences between the Attorney General and members of the Supreme Court regarding messages which have come to the President, members of the Supreme Court, and the Attorney General's office from Chattanooga bearing on the subject.

These are said to have expressed hope that the Government will leave maters for the local authorities to deal with, and assurance that the responsible parties in the lynching will be adequately punished.

'BUS DRIVER HAD TREASURE.

Owned Nelson MS. Which Brought $18,000—Didn't Know Its Value.

LONDON, Saturday, March 24.—The Daily Telegraph says that the "general memorandum" of Lord Nelson, being his autograph directions to his Captains on the eve of the battle of Trafalgar, which was sold at auction here on March 15 for $18,000, was the property of a London omnibus driver, who is still plying his calling.

The memorandum was given to this man's father by an Admiral, and he had no idea of its value until he was advised to consult the auctioneers.

THREE YEARS' TOUR IN SLOOP.

Capt. Adams Has Been to Nearly Every Corner of the World.

Special to The New York Times.

MOBILE, Ala., March 23.—Advices have been received here of the arrival at Georgetown, Grand Cayman, of Capt. Henry Adams in his 10-ton sloop Spray, in which he is making a tour of the world.

Capt. Adams's only companion is a dog. He left Boston three years ago, and since then has been to nearly every corner of the world in his little vessel. While in Kingston, Jamaica, the dog which started the tour with him died. Capt. Adams obtained another dog in Jamaica.

Capt. Adams has been asked to touch at Key West and Mobile.

JEROME IS WRONG, SAYS THE COURT

Grand Jury Must Decide if Campaign Gifts Were Theft.

HE REPLIES AT A DINNER

Sails Into the Newspapers, Talks of National Hysteria and Says He Wont Be Moved.

District Attorney Jerome was again the centre of the insurance scandal yesterday, and he continued to be the centre last night.

In the afternoon Judge O'Sullivan, in General Sessions, refused point-blank to be guided by Mr. Jerome's opinions on the cases of the insurance officials who have contributed to campaign funds, and told the Grand Jury that it was the duty of that body to decide whether criminal intent had been shown in the acts of the insurance men.

The District Attorney tried to get the Judge to issue a warrant for George W. Perkins, who as Vice President of the New York Life gave $48,000 to Cornelius N. Bliss for the Republicans' campaign chest. The Judge refused, and told the Grand Jury to go ahead and thresh the matter out, saying that the members of the jury were perfectly capable of passing on the case.

The District Attorney spoke at the dinner of the Delta Upsilon Club at the Hotel Savoy last night, and scathingly attacked those who have criticised him for—as they charge—inaction in insurance prosecutions. In defending his course he referred to ex-Judge Alton B. Parker as "a man, I believe, who ran for President once."

Mr. Jerome devoted a large part of his speech to the newspapers, and accused one city editor, whom he did not name, of doing a piece of stock jobbing work with "a man who has since become a Borough President, a yellow dog."

JUDGE DIFFERS FROM JEROME.

It's for Jury to Say If Campaign Gifts Were Larceny, and They Must.

Judge O'Sullivan, passing on the question of campaign gifts by officers of insurance companies out of the companies' funds, rejected District Attorney Jerome's view of the situation completely in General Sessions yesterday. In effect, he said to the Grand Jury:

"It is for you to consider the facts of these cases. It is true that these campaign gifts are not larceny unless criminal intent is proved, but it is for you to decide whether there was criminal intent. If an honest review of the evidence shows a reasonable doubt, give the accused the benefit of that doubt."

"But," Judge O'Sullivan said, literally, "you are not to go seeking for doubt as an excuse behind which to take shelter from an unpleasant duty."

That brought District Attorney Jerome to his feet. He said that, under the charge of the court, Cornelius N. Bliss and George Cortelyou were receivers of stolen goods. He asked Judge O'Sullivan to sit as a Magistrate and hear evidence then and there and decide whether or not to issue a warrant against George W. Perkins, Vice President of the New York Life, charging him with grand larceny on account of his testimony before the Armstrong Committee that he paid $48,000 of the funds of that company to Mr. Bliss, as Treasurer of the Republican National Committee. Mr. Jerome also declared his intention of obtaining the services of ex-Judge Alton B. Parker in arguing the case on the appeal which he felt sure would follow immediately upon an indictment.

Won't Sit as Magistrate.

Judge O'Sullivan refused positively to act, giving as his reason that the calendar was overcrowded and he had work on hand which would keep him busy all month.

It was evident that both the court and the District Attorney were angry and that the Grand Jury was badly puzzled. On one occasion Judge O'Sullivan struck the desk in front of him with his fist and asked why the imaginary facts of the presentment as to campaign gifts had been submitted to him the other day. He said that there were six other Magistrates sitting in the building to whom the matter might just as well be submitted.

Although he made repeated references of a flattering nature to Mr. Jerome's ability and sincerity, he made other remarks which by those who heard them were taken as direct slaps at the District Attorney. It was clear to everybody that Judge O'Sullivan was recalling the indictment of Col. William d'Alton Mann of Town Topics by the Grand Jury while a hearing on the perjury charges against him was still pending before Magistrate McAvoy, when the Judge said:

"Of late the District Attorney has been expediting justice by taking from the Magistrates cases under examination and submitting them to the Grand Jury; why not now take them from the Grand Jury and submit them to a Magistrate?"

Having declared that political contributions even by corporations were not criminal in themselves and might be eminently patriotic, Judge O'Sullivan held that self-gain was not an essential element of larceny, and that to make a case it was enough "that the offender, with the intent of depriving the true owner of his property, appropriated it to the use of another."

Goaded by the suggestion of Mr. Jerome that a warrant be issued for Mr. Perkins on the ground of the facts which evidently were kept in mind by the District Attorney when he drafted the presentment of the Grand Jury, Judge O'Sullivan exclaimed:

"There would be something of injustice, even though the law were plain, to put under its bitter penalty men who did nothing more than so many others, and who have had the approval of all time since the foundation of our institutions, as well as the approval of their fellow-citizen, but living in the higher atmosphere of the law as Judge it is my duty to tell the Grand Jury what the law is."

Nevertheless several of the Grand Jury

men were heard to say to each other while on their way from the court to their own room:

"What did he tell us, anyhow? Are we to indict or to drop it?"

The principal points of Judge O'Sullivan's charge were these:

"The hypothetical character of the questions submitted by you relating to political contributions precludes a directly responsive reply.

"Contributing to a political party is not necessarily a crime. In fact, it may be so free from the taint of crime as to be not only plainly honest, but eminently patriotic. Individuals and possibly certain corporations may contribute to political parties and be guiltless. The question is: May they contribute in such a manner as to render the transaction criminal?

"From the statement in your question evidence to establish the physical transaction of appropriating money to the use of a person other than the true owner appears to be available, which seems to bring a part of it at least within the section of the Penal Code where larceny is defined. In the absence of criminal intent it goes no further, and no indictment can be found. It is not within the province of this court to say whether or not there was intent. That is for you, gentlemen, to determine from all the facts and circumstances of the case.

"Was it an honest transaction? Did the parties concerned sincerely believe that they were acting for the best interests of the persons whose property was intrusted to them? Was their conduct in the proceeding that of men actuated by commendable motives? Or did they proceed stealthily, furtively, corruptly, craftily, and with duplicity, artifice, deceit, and concealment?—are all questions which you may consider in determining the character of intent. * * * You may ask yourselves, gentlemen: Does innocence seek to conceal itself in crime?

"In substance, you have asked the court how the acts assumed to have been done could have been done so that they would not constitute the crime of larceny. It is not within your province to speculate as to how a crime might have been avoided. It is your duty to determine whether crime has been committed, and to do so you should proceed without delay to consider all the legal evidence available. If you find that a person, with the intent to deprive or defraud the true owner of his property or the use thereof, appropiates any money in his possession or control as trustee or officer of a corporation to his own use, or to the use of any other person than the true owner, then he steals such property, and is guilty of larceny.

Don't Seek for a Doubt.

"I cannot impress upon you too strongly, gentlemen, that self-gain is not necessary to constitute the crime of larceny. What is it to the loser, fraudulently deprived of his property, whether the taker took it for self-gain or for the gain of another? If a doubt which reasonable men may entertain after a careful and honest review of the evidence survives the process of reasonable examination, you are to give the benefit of it to the person charged with the offense. But you are not to go seeking for doubt as an excuse behind which to take shelter from an unpleasant duty."

Mr. Jerome was on his feet the moment Judge O'Sullivan had finished speaking and asked for leave to address the jury and the court. He said:

"The admirable moral sentiments and the undoubted propositions of law that your Honor has laid down are not what the Grand Jury desires to be informed in regard to. It does not bother the Grand Jury or the Grand Jury's legal adviser in the slightest degree to identify the ordinary, commonplace forms of larceny which your Honor has so admirably defined. It is so manifest that a man who steals with the intent of stealing, steals that even laymen of the Grand Jury and the legal adviser can understand that.

"The difficulty in the present situation lies in something which your Honor has entirely misconceived. In connection with a recent investigation in this city there is a vast mass of facts and evidence within the control and knowledge of the District Attorney. A large number of these transactions do not, in my opinion, constitute a crime. In regard to other transactions, it can be determined whether they constitute a crime or not only by the adduction of testimony bearing upon intent.

"The Grand Jury is a body that has onerous duties to perform. There is one group of cases in which the evidence shows exactly what the Grand Jury has asked you, and your reply to them is: 'Why, gentlemen, if the men have an evil intent, they have committed the crime of larceny.' The Grand Jury knows that, and I have so advised it.

Jérome Asks a Definition.

"What they ask your Honor to charge them is whether those facts without the felonious intent constitute a crime. As the court said in a celebrated case, it is the duty of the jury to determine whether the felonious intent exists, but it is the duty of the court to define to them what the felonious intent is. The question they put to your Honor is briefly this: If these men gave these moneys—a clear conversion of the money, in my judgment—and they were sane men who knew what they were doing, shall the Grand Jury indict?"

"Felonious intent is criminal intent," replied Judge O'Sullivan, "and criminal intent is to take with the intent to deprive and defraud. If you find that they did take with the intent to deprive and defraud, you find felonious intent, and a crime defined as larceny. I do not think it is so much the business of this jury to determine what was the intent in giving the money as what was the intent in taking it."

Mr. Jerome flushed as he resumed: "It is impossible that I can concur in the views expressed by the learned court, for which I am very sorry. But this matter is susceptible of definite ascertainment. A member of the firm of J. P. Morgan & Co., George W. Perkins, Vice President of the New York Life Insurance Company, has testified with entire frankness on the stand that he gave to Cornelius N. Bliss, Chairman and Treasurer of the National Committee of the Republican Party, the sum of $48,000; that he was reimbursed out of the funds of the New York Life, and that he took the money knowing it to be the funds of the New York Life.

Cortelyou and Bliss.

"I select the case of George W. Perkins, not because it is unique—the executive officers of most financial institutions in the city have done similar acts which should be prohibited by law. The question before us is, Are they prohibited by law?

"There is now a legal proposition before this court that makes George Cortelyou a receiver of stolen goods; that makes Cornelius Bliss, an honored citizen of this community, who was respected when many of us were mere children, a receiver of stolen goods. The facts are all within my power to present. To-morrow is Saturday—an off day. I will be here if, in view of the importance of this case, your Honor will consent to sit as a Magistrate. If your Honor holds the defendant, and the Supreme Court does not deliver him on a writ of habeas corpus and certiorari, the duty of the legal adviser to the Grand Jury and of the Grand Jury will be very plain.

"I ask for the privilege of submitting to your Honor as a Magistrate the case of the People against George Perkins, based on facts such as are set forth in the presentment of this Grand Jury, in order that we may have a decision which will be binding alike upon your Honor, upon the legal adviser to the Grand Jury, and upon all Grand Juries of this county."

There was a brief pause, marked by silence, in the courtroom before Judge O'Sullivan spoke again.

"After the practice to pay to political campaigns has gained universal prevalence in our country, and when men not only may do so honestly, but with the highest patriotic motives, no one feels more reluctant than I in now turning the provisions of the law toward these men. It seems to me, and I feel it keenly, that there would be something of an injustice, even though the law were plain upon the facts, now to put under its bitter penalty men who have done no more than so many others throughout the history of our country, concerning whom nothing was ever done. But, Sir, living in the higher atmosphere of the law as a Judge, it is my duty to say to this jury what the law is. I think I have said it honestly, and I believe that you have been as honest in your desire to determine what it is.

"There are fourteen Magistrates in this jurisdiction before whom examinations in the first instance are brought; there are six under the roof of this building. Of late the District Attorney has been expediting justice by taking from Magistrates cases under examination and submitting them to the Grand Jury. Why not now take them from the Grand Jury and submit them to a Magistrate?"

Plain Question, Court Says.

Judge O'Sullivan's tone had been full of complaint. A moment later he raised his voice and continued with great emphasis, accentuating his words at times by slapping his desk. He said:

"There is nothing so unusual in the fact that men whom we know, may have been, though unaware of it, guilty of felony. I do not see why this unusual commotion should have been made. I do not see why a hypothetical question in the first instance should have been advanced to the Judge of the court. It is a plain question given to honest, representative men of this community, upon which they are to pass."

He suggested that the case go to Recorder Goff. Mr. Jerome asked him again to "place this thing where a court of final resort can pass on it," by causing arrests. The Judge refused again, and the Grand Jury filed out.

Mr. Jerome was asked later whether he meant to submit the matter to Recorder Goff.

"Of course not," he replied. "The Recorder is a policy holder in the New York Life."

JEROME DEFENDS HIS POLICY.

Says the Whole Nation Is Hysterical, but He Won't Be Moved.

"The three big insurance companies are as solvent as the United States. They are as solvent financially, I repeat, as the United States of America."

District Attorney Jerome proclaimed this loudly in a speech last night at the annual dinner of the Delta Upsilon Club at the Hotel Savoy, in which he warmly defended his policy of deliberation in proceeding against insurance officials, and bitterly attacked all who have critised him for inaction.

"The whole Nation," said Mr. Jerome, "is in a condition of absolute hysteria. Everybody wants to see the insurance grafters prosecuted, evidence or no evidence." He, for one, he said, however, was not going to be moved by this whirlwind of popular feeling, and he would not try to get the Grand Jury to indict without full, legal proof of wrongdoing.

Included in Mr. Jerome's loudly applauded remarks was a reply to Alton B. Parker, at whom the District Attorney sneered as "a man who, I believe, ran for President once."

It had been freely predicted among the 500 diners that Mr. Jerome was going to "wade into the newspapers." He did. Selecting the two which have been attacking him both in editorials and cartoons, he flayed them unmercifully. Most of the papers, he said, tried to do right and to judge justly, but not these "yellows."

His harsh description of them, couched, as it was, in no gentle terms, was greeted with almost exultant cheers by the Delta Upsilon brethren. Especially were they pleased with Mr. Jerome's assurance that they knew just as much as the editors, and that there was no reason, therefore, for them to form their opinions from headlines in the daily papers.

Hysteria and "Treason" Cry.

The whole range of National life was included in the District Attorney's diagnosis of hysteria. The entire Nation, he said, is a victim of the disease. He took David Graham Phillips's "Treason of the Senate" for an example.

"Treason is an ugly word," said Mr. Jerome. "Treason—" here he spoke slowly—"treason is a crime punishable by death. Is the Senate—a body that can hold such a man as Murray Crane of Massachusetts—a treasonable body? Because a few men are unworthy, shall we brand the entire body traitors? Base men there are in the Senate, I believe. But when you assert that the United States Senate is a treasonable body you do one of two things—you lie, or you misconceive the meaning of the English language."

Speaking of ex-Judge Alton B. Parker and the public hysteria, Mr. Jerome said, according to a stenographic report:

"This ex-Chief Justice of the Court of Appeals went among our Southern brethren. And this is what he said to them: 'The way to convict is to convict. I believe that there is not a Grand Jury in the County of New York which would not bring an indictment against the insurance company officials.'

"And I say to you that because of this very fact—the fact that there is not a Grand Jury in this county that would not bring an indictment on present knowledge—there is one public officer at least who will not permit an indictment without good and legal evidence.

"In saying that 'the way to convict is to convict,' there is one thing that the learned Justice forgets. Only yesterday, it seems, there was a great public clamor to put Jacob Schiff in the dock for his participation in syndicate transactions. It seems to me—or is it only the recollection of an idle dream?—that from this same ex-Chief Justice I got an opinion that Jacob Schiff had not only done nothing criminal, but that he had actually acted righteously. Now, did he give that opinion because money was paid to him for it or because he really thought that it was true?

"So much for this cheap claptrap—even when it comes from the Sage of Esopus.

"Don't misunderstand my meaning. I am not saying that what these insurance officials did was right. I believe that much of it was wrong. I am going to seek to punish all offenses which come within the law. But I don't believe that 'the way to convict is to convict'; the way to convict is upon legal evidence. While I am not contending that these men have done right, it must be proved upon legal evidence that they have done wrong.

"And what is the effect of all this wild outcry? I was told by a Trustee of the Mutual Life Insurance Company the other day that more than $1,000,000 in policies had lapsed in the last year. I asked him of what size these policies were, and he told me that they were for from $1,200 to $3,000. They were the policies of the poor.

"Hounds of Yellow Journalism."

"Because the poor took for the truth this hue and cry about the three big insurance companies—as solvent as the United States of America—because they were scared by this incessant yapping, the motormen, and the clerks, and the bookkeepers, who had put aside money to provide for their wives and children, let the policies lapse. They were scared by the hounds of yellow journalism.

"The real peril lies not in the peculation and graft—though that is bad enough—but the real peril lies in the fact that twelve or eighteen men should control $1,500,000,000 of quick-moving assets—men who eat luncheon with one another and who meet one another at dinners and at their clubs, men that can make the game of finance a 'brace' game! There lies the real peril."

In attacking the two newspapers which, he said, were largely responsible for the wild hysteria evidenced on all sides today, Mr. Jerome said:

"These be the kind of sheets that bring the newspaper world into disrepute, and make the thousands of reputable men engaged in that business ashamed of their profession. Let us take a few more concrete illustrations. It was only a few days ago that this whole community was clamoring that Andrew Hamilton should be brought back. 'Extradite him! Electrocute him!'

"Andrew comes back, walks into the session of the Legislative Committee, stands there and says: 'I want you to understand that the yellow dog is a dog of courage and loyalty.' Now, I haven't anything but words of praise to say to that. He did it bravely, he did it rightly, he spoke true to his traditions, but it was the 'yellow dog' that spoke. The man is now exalted as a hero. And that is the kind of hysteria these men have who were crying out for Andrew Hamilton's blood a few weeks ago. They are now exulting in the horrors of his disclosures; and his uncorroborated word is taken as sufficient evidence to brand as felons men whose lives have been before us all in this community for many years, men in whom you have trust, men whom I have trusted, men who deny his allegations. And yet educated men are swept off their feet by such things.

"Take the words of the dying McCall. 'He refused,' he said, referring to Hamilton, 'to accept the duty unless it was made confidential and secret and on condition that no accounting of moneys advanced should be asked or rendered by him. He told me that this condition he would impose as an absolute one, and unless it was accepted he would not undertake the work.'

"The worst criminal brought before the bar of justice is presumed to be innocent, yet haven't you as educated men been willing to accept the word of such a one and stamp men like Orr and Claflin and Bliss as felons? Think twice, fellow-citizens, before you do that. They may be such, but does not the character of a lifetime count for anything in the community in which they have lived? [Applause.] How far this hysteria has gone! See in this morning's paper the words of men like Roger Pryor, a former Judge of the Supreme Court, a good man, upright man, I believe, but swept off his feet. An educated man feeding fuel to a flame which may be just or which may not be just.

"There are only a handful of men in this community to-day who know whether it is just or not. He goes further and says that Section 544 of the Penal Code says that this is a crime. He is willing to talk so carelessly of the reputations of his fellow-men that he forgets to put into his statement that that section says: 'Trustees appointed by will, deed, order of the court, or other instrument in writing,' none of which the Trustees of insurance companies are. Careless, you say, for a former Judge of the Supreme Court to do such a thing?"

Here is a stenographic report of what Mr. Jerome said about the newspapers:

"A newspaper is not an eleemosynary institution, and there is of course the ever-present temptation for them to go the same gait; the people demand 'hot stuff at so much per,' and their needs are met by a certain class of publications, whose text is dictated by their counting room and by their counting room alone.

"The others often have to comment on current events, and often go wrong; but I believe to-day that the press as a whole, with those exceptions which every decent newspaper man—and most of them are such—deplore, the press as a whole strives to find what they deem to be public sentiment and try to go right. But papers such as these play to the base spirit that is ripe in the community and they play in the guise of leading public opinion. They remind me of those yachts in the great international contest; one hovers to the windward of the other; they hover to the windward of what they deem to be public opinion, and the moment public opinion goes about they go about with it.

"I have nothing but words of praise for honest papers; I have no words of praise when they go wrong, and they are wrong not infrequently. Bitter, stinging criticism is right if it is just criticism, in the conduct of a public office, and he who is not a fool can learn from it if it is just. And if he is a fool and cannot learn he ought to take his medicine. But let me illustrate concretely. There is a certain type of newspaper that would mold public opinion—or claim to mold it, at least—and yet it is actuated by the baser motives. Concrete illustrations go home so much more beautifully than abstract sentiments, as I had occasion today to remark to a Judge.

"Most of us get up rather empty in the morning intellectually—this is a strenuous life. We fill ourselves with headlines, and we forget that many of us have had as good an education as the man who writes these headlines; that we know as much about the subject as most of the men who write the headlines. We go around at our clubs or social gatherings and we poll-parrot them. And we think we are repeating and voicing public sentiment.

"There is a great paper in the City of New York—let me show you what you feed upon. I was investigating once—when I woke up, before I took to sleeping all the time—I was investigating a large corporation in this city, and the city editor of that paper came to me with an article in galley proof. I said: 'I haven't completed my investigation, but the report of my expert accountant enables me to say that that statement is an unqualified falsehood.' It is unusual for city editors to visit District Attorneys; it is unusual for District Attorneys to visit city editors—not cut on those lines myself. I said: 'This is an unqualified falsehood, so far as my investigation goes, and you can't get a scare headline out of me. If you say anything about it say that I said it was false.' The city editor remarked: 'We're going to publish it anyhow.'

"There was in those days a man who has since become a Borough President; a yellow dog without loyalty and courage. Certain of these men, including this city editor on this great newspaper, wrote to him and said: 'There is going to be something doing; go short of such and such a stock.' And this Borough President, I suppose, went short of the stock for the account of all those people ordering it. And then in a day or two just after this gentleman went short of the stock the mendacious article was published, creating some commotion.

"And then, in a day or two, the Borough President, in order to ingratiate himself with the strong financial interests that lay back of this particular stock, turned over to the gentlemen controlling the situation the letter from the city editor and his friends on this great journal. And this great capitalist had this letter photographed, saying that it might be lost.

"And then a distinguished gentleman who had roamed all over the face of the earth, had fought in various lands, and had sworn to almighty God that never again would he plunge two great nations in war, went to these capitalists and said: 'If you will give us the photographic plates, the photographs, and the letter, we will deal always with you in the future kindly.'

"In a moment of weakness that has not characterized that distinguished friend of former Gov. Odell, this capitalist gave up the letter, and from that moment to this that paper in its headlines has tried as hard as it could to back him. These are facts, not fiction."

Concluding, Mr. Jerome said:

"I am taking your time and speaking in a way bitterly; I feel bitterly in one way. I do not feel bitterly personally; I feel bitterly for my people, that they should be swept off their feet under circumstances like these.

"We are not governed, as Lincoln said that we should be, by a Government of the people, by the people, and for the people; we are coming to a government of the newspapers and by the newspapers. Public officers will cease after a while to lose their nerve, and they will come to realize that the electorate put them there to exercise their best judgment. They will make mistakes—it is but human to err—but it is their judgment they were put there to exercise, and not the judgment of the city editor of any newspaper."

Charles E. Hughes, who was a guest of honor, sprang a surprise on the diners by making a hurried speech at the beginning of the dinner and then making a quick exit. He said that he had a lot of work to do, and therefore could not stay through the dinner.

Somebody arose and drank a toast to "Charles E. Hughes, the next Governor of New York," when the Armstrong Committee's counsel had finished his talk. Cheers greeted this prophecy. In answer to it Mr. Hughes said:

"I realize that these expressions are prompted by the spirit of good-fellowship, but I appreciate them just the same. However, I will leave political ambitions to those with whom they rightfully belong."

Here Mr. Hughes indicated District Attorney Jerome and M. Linn Bruce.

Before that he had referred to the advertising section of Everybody's Magazine as an "inflamed appendix." Erman J. Ridgway, editor of Everybody's, was at the guests' table, and afterward he said that the "inflamed appendix" had brought in $70,000 last month, and that he thought he could afford to have it at that price.

Other guests were Rossiter Johnson, Congressman Charles B. Low, Third Deputy Police Commissioner W. L. Mathot, Lieut. Gov. Bruce, and the Rev. Josiah Strong.

The Weber is the Piano of the Opera

"It is with the greatest pleasure I convey to you my warmest congratulations on your Weber piano that you were good enough to send me.

"Its tone is admirable and I know of none better for a singer. As for the instrument itself, it is incomparable.

NO PROXY HUNT, SAYS ORR,

Unless at the Agents' Expense—Mr. Untermyer Thinks Otherwise.

President Alexander E. Orr of the New York Life Insurance Company started up a new insurance controversy yesterday. He declared that the charges made in Boston by Thomas W. Lawson that the New York Life and Mutual were issuing policies for proxies, and those made at Albany by Samuel Untermyer that the New York Life had spent over $30,000 in a campaign for proxies and to defeat the insurance reform bills, were "unqualifiedly false."

"So far as I have any knowledge," said Mr. Orr, "no letters have been sent out to agents calling for proxies since the Armstrong bills were promulgated, the last ones, according to my information, having been sent out on Feb. 23. If any soliciting has been done since then it has been done at the expense of the agents themselves and without cost to the company."

Mr. Orr got quick action from Mr. Untermyer, who is counsel for the International Committee of policy holders, now forming. Mr. Untermyer said:

"If Mr. Orr has been correctly reported, he is sadly out of touch with what is transpiring in the chief executive offices of his company in New York. Perhaps he would do well to make a few inquiries before issuing further statements.

"Long after the Armstrong bills were introduced into the Legislature and during the month of March, the country has been flooded with requests for proxies issued from the branch agencies of the New York Life inclosing stamped envelopes with the name of the agency printed upon them. These papers have been mailed back to the committee by indignant policy holders in great numbers. It would be a surprise to us to learn that this enormous expense has been incurred by the agents out of their own pockets.

"If Mr. Orr will refer to the telegrams that were sent last week from the home office of his company in New York by Mr. Buckner, the Vice President of the company, he will find that in those telegrams Mr. Buckner urges the agents to renew their campaign for proxies. It may be that Mr. Buckner is also acting on his individual responsibility and without expense to the company. If so, it would be quite a new departure. In the light of past events, the policy holders may perhaps be pardoned for being skeptical on that subject. Possibly Mr. Orr is drawing nice distinctions between requests for proxies that are being conducted by telegram and those by letter, although we are satisfied that both methods were being diligently worked from the head office until last week.

"The purpose of the existing managements of the New York and Mutual Life Insurance Companies in trying to connect or identify Mr. Lawson with the International Policy Holders' movement, for which I am acting as counsel, is too transparent. Mr. Lawson has no relations or connections whatever, directly or indirectly, with the committee or with our movement. My own attitude to Mr. Lawson is well known. Whatever may be our controversy or other differences, I am bound, however, to admit that in this insurance business he seems to have acted from a commendable public spirit. For reasons of our own we declined to be identified with his movement, as is well known, and that has continued and will continue to be the attitude of our committee."

Stuyvesant Fish, when asked about insurance matters yesterday, said:

"I have not as yet committed myself to any existing policy holders' committee. There will be more reason for an active movement looking to the election of new insurance Directors when the Legislature shall invalidate the proxies already given and provide a means whereby the policy holders may elect new boards.

"In the absence of such legislation the present boards, with the proxies they are said to have already in hand, could in all probability elect whomsoever they chose; but, in any event, those favoring a new policy could elect but a small minority of the boards, and the companies would remain under the control of the present managements. There are men in the several boards who might well be retained; there are men who have retired from them who should be returned. But legislation should be adopted to permit the policy holders to make a change if they desire."

PRESIDENT TO AID LABOR.

Will Take Steps to Have the Eight-Hour Law Efficiently Enforced.

WASHINGTON, March 23.—Frank Morrison, Secretary of the American Federation of Labor, to-day received the following letter from President Roosevelt:

"March 22, 1906.

"My Dear Mr. Morrison: At our interview yesterday I requested you to bring to my attention any specific violation of the eight-hour law. I would like you to call my attention as soon as possible to any of these complaints, and I shall at once forward them to Mr. Neill of the Labor Bureau, and direct him to investigate them and report direct to me.

"Furthermore, I shall hereafter direct all departments having control of work as to which this law applies to notify the Department of Commerce and Labor when the work began, and I shall notify the Secretary of the Department of Commerce and Labor whenever such notification reaches him, himself to notify the head of the Labor Bureau, whose duty it then will be to take cognizance of any complaint made as to violations of this law, to investigate the same, and to report to me.

"As you know, I not only sympathize with you on the eight-hour law, but I intend as a matter of course to see that that law is efficiently enforced.

"My belief is that you will find that, with Commissioner Niell personally supervising the enforcement of the law, all just complaints will be met. Sincerely yours,

"THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

"Mr. Frank Morrison, Secretary of the American Federation of Labor."

At the morning session of the Executive Council of the Federation of Labor the President's letter was made a part of the record, and it was decided to have compiled a list of complaints as suggested by the President. The letter from the President was generally discussed.

ACCUSES A GRAND JUROR.

Lawyer Under Indictment Declares That His Client Was "Seen."

Lawyer William O. Miles, who is under indictment for having presented alleged fraudulent claims for sewer damages, caused a sensation in the Kings County court yesterday by accusing a member of the Grand Jury of having "seen" one of his clients in the sewer cases.

The Grand Jury had been dismissed by Judge Aspinall and was filing out, when Miles rushed into court and asked that the jurors be held until he could make a statement. Judge Aspinall called the jurors back, and Miles then made his accusation. The man he accused is Samuel Rozenzweig of 653 Gates Avenue. Mr. Miles's client was in court with him. Assistant District Attorney Elder objected to Miles's method of making the accusation, and Judge Aspinall instructed the foreman of the jury to investigate the charge and directed Miles to present affidavits.

Rozenzweig said later that he had done nothing wrong. Miles's client, who knew him, had come to him in the corridor of the Court House and asked his advice. The man had recovered money on a sewer damage case against the city, and wanted to know if he would have to refund the money. Rozenzweig said he merely told the man that he was not in a position to advise him.

VERDICT FOR McKANE'S NIECE.

She Gets a $29,000 Award in Suit Against Railroad Companies.

A verdict for $29,000 was awarded yesterday to Katharine B. McKane, a niece of the late John Y. McKane, in the Supreme Court, Brooklyn, before Justice Burr in a suit over the ownership of certain property at Gravesend. The defendants named in the suit were the Coney Island & Brooklyn, Prospect Park & Coney Island, and Brooklyn Heights Railroad Company and Edward C. Boyce. The late Paul Bauer owned the property, which was left to his widow and the plaintiff. The latter contended that the defendants had used a part of it without any title, and she sued for damages to cover a reasonable value for the use of the property for six years.

RAND AFTER THE MINUTES.

Thinks the Evidence Against the Burnhams Was Illegal.

Former Assistant District Attorney Rand made a motion in General Sessions yesterday that Judge O'Sullivan permit him to inspect the minutes of the March Grand Jury as far as they refer to the indictments for grand larceny and forgery returned against President Frederick A. Burnham, Vice President George Burnham, Jr., and Second Vice President President George D. Eldridge of the Mutual Reserve Life Insurance Company. The principal reason advanced by Mr. Rand was that he had reason to believe that illegal evidence had been introduced in the investigation leading up to the indictments.

District Attorney Jerome retorted that a defendant had no constitutional right to be furnished with a bill of particulars as to the evidence given against him before the Grand Jury. He said, also, that none but legal and admissible evidence had been presented to the Grand Jury in the matter.

Judge O'Sullivan gave counsel for both sides till next Saturday to file briefs.

Circus Pleasing Everybody.

Madison Square Garden was crowded yesterday at both performances of the Barnum & Bailey circus, and the great interest manifested at the opening was duplicated with additional enthusiasm. The many great numbers on the programme have this year been beyond the expectations of even the small boy and oldest inhabitant. Josie La Mott, who was injured on Thursday, is now resting at her home in Hempstead, L. I., and will be able to resume her act next Monday.

Eight vessels are on their way to Europe from New York, and five steamers are now on their way from the other side to New York.

ROGERS WILL ANSWER HADLEY'S QUERIES NOW

Standard Oil Man May Testify To-day in Missouri Case.

TRUST'S ATTITUDE CHANGES

Information to be Given—Rockefeller May See His New Grandson, Under a Flag of Truce.

H. H. Rogers may be called to the stand to-day, when the taking of testimony in the suits brought by Attorney General Hadley of Missouri against the Standard Oil Company of Indiana, the Republic Oil Company, and the Waters-Pierce Oil Company is resumed before Special Commissioner Sanborn at 67 Wall Street.

Mr. Rogers will go on the stand pledged by his lawyer to reply to the questions which he declined by advice of counsel to answer at the previous hearing. Attorney General Hadley expects no difficulty in obtaining from him information as to the stock ownership of the companies under investigation, if Mr. Rogers has such information.

When the hearing was called yesterday Lawyer Victor of the law firm of which Mr. Rogers's personal counsel is a member was present to get an adjournment until to-day. Mr. Victor proposed to Attorney Kohn, who is associated with Henry Wollman, Mr. Hadley's New York counsel, that they agree to exclude from the hearing all reporters except perhaps a representative of The Associated Press. Mr. Kohn promptly refused.

Attorney General Hadley, who reached New York a little ahead of time, owing to the adjournment of the Missouri hearing, when the illness of H. Clay Pierce prevented his appearance as a witness, called at Mr. Wollman's office yesterday morning. When he learned that H. M. Tilford had been subpoenaed he expressed his pleasure. Mr. Tilford, he said, would prove a valuable witness. The opinion was shared by Rush Lake, Missouri's Assistant Attorney General, who is associated with Mr. Hadley in the Standard Oil investigations.

Mr. Hadley said that the attitude of the Standard Oil forces, since the decision of the Missouri Supreme Court had undergone a complete change.

"There is no longer a sneering note in the tone of its attorneys," he said. "Information is forthcoming when it is asked for. We have already got evidence in Missouri which pretty well eliminates the Republic Oil Company from the New York hearing. Its place as a creature of Standard Oil has already been fixed. What we have to do in New York now is to look into the real ownership of the 2,750 shares of Waters-Pierce stock which is nominally held by Michael M. Van Beuren, son-in-law of John D. Archbold. There are 4,000 shares of this stock outstanding, so the Van Beuren holdings constitute the controlling interest. Mr. Van Beuren is a fugitive from process. We expect to prove, however, that the stock which stands in his name is really the property of the Standard Oil Company. We will also look into the methods by which the oil business in Missouri is managed from 26 Broadway. The hearing may continue for several days."

Mr. Hadley laughed heartily when he was asked if it were true that he had called the process servers off the trail of John D. Rockefeller to give Mr. Rockefeller a chance to visit his new grandson.

"I have not been approached on the subject yet," he said, "but I should be inclined to recognize a flag of truce under the circumstances. I am a father myself, and surely the great State of Missouri would not turn a deaf ear to such pleadings as a grandparent in Mr. Rockefeller's position might make."

There are still to be examined, in addition to Mr. Rogers, John D. Archbold, next in command at the Standard's headquarters; Controller Arnold, who was served only the other day; H. M. Tilford, William G. Rockefeller, son of William and nephew of John D.; F. Q. Barstow; W. F. Taylor, a New York lawyer who is a stockholder in the Waters-Pierce Company, and several other witnesses who have been in the Standard's employ.

LIKE a trip to Paris will be a visit to the Spring opening of our millinery department Monday, March 26th.

We believe that we have ready for your inspection in our new show rooms one of the choicest arrays of millinery that has ever been gathered together.

It contains mostly creations of Georgette, Caroline Reboux, Charlotte and other famous designers of Paris, all chosen personally by our own buyer and imported direct.

No less charming are the original creations of our own French designers. Our stock, therefore, offers a wide range of choice and insures your getting always something individual and distinctive.

The accepted ornaments this season are mainly feathers and flowers. Colorings present almost an unlimited variety.

Whatever is in good form, either in coloring or design, you will find in our display and always worked into materials of unquestioned quality.

Quite as important as the selection of the hat is the choice of veils and other toilet finishings. Never before has Paris given to the world such a variety of effective designs in veils, boas, hand-embroidered neckwear, belts of every description, and hair ornaments.

We can show not a few that we are positive will not be exhibited in any other store in America this season.

We invite all those interested in the rarest selections of Spring millinery to come to our store Monday, March 26th.

INDICTS JERSEY GRAFTERS.

Hudson Grand Jury Names 169 Cases, and Is Not Through Yet.

The Hudson County Grand Jury yesterday handed up 169 indictments. They were tied in a bundle, and Judge Blair did not even read the indorsement.

No statement of the list of indictments was given out. Several witnesses had been summoned from West Hoboken, and ex-Mayor Chandless of that town was among them. He said he had no idea why he was called.

From other sources it was learned that the principal indictment was against a former Secretary and Treasurer of the West Hudson Trust Company of Harrison, N. J., charged with forging $30,000 notes which he had discounted by the company during his connection with it. A proposal to indict Directors of the company for negligence in the affair was reconsidered.

EULOGIES FOR HADLEY, OIL TRUST PROSECUTOR

Lawless Corporations the Great Peril, He Declares.

MISSOURI MEN HAIL HIM

And Toastmaster Gardenshire Is Sorry Rockefeller, Being Detained, Could Not Hear His Words of Wisdom.

Herbert S. Hadley, Attorney General of Missouri, was the guest of honor last night at the sixth annual dinner of the Missouri Society of New York, which a year ago entertained Gov. Folk.

Fully 200 members of the society attended the dinner, which was held in the Astor Gallery of the Waldorf-Astoria, and the welcome accorded the prosecutor, who is in New York on the trail of the Standard Oil Company, could not have been heartier. Those present rose to their feet when he was introduced and applauded him for several minutes.

At the guests' table with the President of the society, Samuel M. Gardenhire, and Attorney General Hadley, sat Julius M. Mayer, Attorney General of the State of New York; Congressman John P. Lloyd of Missouri, Assemblyman Merritt of New York City, the Rev. J. Neavitt Steele, President of the Maryland Society, Rush C. Lake, Assistant Attorney General of Missouri; Marion H. Verdery, President of the Southern Society; Henry Wollman, Mr. Hadley's New York counsel in the Standard Oil cases, and Supreme Court Justice Van Kirk. The boxes overlooking the tables were filled with women.

President Gardenhire, as toastmaster, styled Missouri "The State of Destiny, which challenges the attention of corporation and politician alike." He introduced Attorney General Hadley as a "true American and fearless public official, who with charity and without rancor, is doing his duty as he sees it."

Mr. Hadley declared that he was a Missourian as a matter of deliberate choice and premeditation.

"I would emphasize that satisfaction," he said, "which belongs to us who come to Missouri with our clothes on. We do not have to share our glory with our ancestors."

He reviewed the history of Missouri from the time of the purchase, and then spoke of the part taken by her sons in the world's work.

"In that great moral awakening," he said, "which has swept across the country creating an increased interest in the exercise of the privileges of citizenship, causing the duties of public office to be placed above the influence of politics, and patriotism to be placed above partisanship, Missouri has been something of a pioneer. Though Missouri has done much in the eradication of those evils which corrupt our public life, she has learned that a complete and permanent reform requires a change in those conditions of our industrial life which of necessity tend to dishonor and degrade.

Commercial Lawbreakers.

"For when you consider these great questions with which Missouri had labored and is now, in company with her sister States and the Nation, laboring for a solution, how true it must seem that in the last analysis the responsibility for their existence must rest upon these great commercial enterprises which exist in violation of our common and our statute law, and which in the conduct of their business resort to dishonest and illegal methods to secure special privileges and unfair advantages.

"Behind the political boss is the industrial boss, the captain of industry. If you will search for an explanation as to how and why it was that the City Council or State Legislature has been bribed, you will, in the great majority of cases, find that some business interest has been seeking some special privilege or dishonest advantage which it could not secure by the honest judgment of the representatives of the people.

"The explanation of the unfair railroad freight rate, the midnight tariff, the drawback or rebate, is that some commercial interest represents a power and an influence in our industrial life strong enough to demand and secure such unlawful privileges.

The Vital Problem.

"To my mind the vital problem that confronts the American people to-day, which confronts the people of New York as it confronts the people of Missouri, is the question as to whether these great commercial enterprises can continue in open defiance and violation of the laws of the Nation and the State.

"It is a conservative statement fully sustained by the investigations of those familiar with our economic conditions, that a large portion, if not the greater portion, of the trade and commerce of this country is controlled by corporate interests which are unlawful either in the plan of their organization or in the method in which their business is conducted.

"I do not believe that such conditions can continue to exist in our National life. I do not believe that our industrial and commercial system will be overthrown or destroyed. I do not believe that Socialism or Government ownership offers a solution or a remdy.

"But I do believe that our industrial system cannot continue to exist half lawful, half unlawful. I believe that the American people will see to it that the unlawful shall cease and conform itself to those laws which represent the experience of centuries and the moral judgment of 80,000,000 of people.

"And I believe that this result will be accomplished as the result of an aroused public sentiment and conscience which will require that men who would be respectable must be honest; that those who would be respected by others must respect the rights of others, which will require that lawyers cease to be accessories to violations of the law and be true to the principles and the traditions of their profession, which will require that courts shall learn that time is the essence of litigation and cease to place the form above the substance and the method above the right.

"In the solution and the settlement of these great questions Missouri will endeavor to do her part; she will proceed without prejudice and without passion; she will proceed with caution and deliberation. And she will proceed in such a way that no one can truthfully say that within her domain a single dollar invested in an honest business enterprise has suffered diminution in its value or that aught of prejudice against wealth, as such, directs her actions."

Mr. Hadley was frequently interrupted by applause. When he took his seat the toastmaster arose and regarded him in all seriousness for an appreciable time. Then Mr. Gardenhire turned to the diners.

"My friends," he said, "I seriously regret that John D. Rockefeller was not able to be with us to-night that he might have been uplifted and elevated by the wise counsels of the Attorney General of whom we are all so proud.

Mayer Praises Hadley.

"Mr. Rockefeller, however, was kept away by circumstances over which he has no control. In this case, however, his loss is our gain, and it isn't often that you can say his loss is anybody's gain."

Walter Alexander, Vice President of the society, followed Mr. Hadley, and Attorney General Mayer was then introduced.

"The Attorney General of Missouri," said the Attorney General of New York, "is almost obsolete. Here he is puzzling over oil, the light of days long dead. We in New York are having our troubles with gas and electricity, to say nothing of insurance."

In a serious vein, the speaker then explained the esteem in which the guest of the evening is held, not only by the people of his own State, but the people of the country.

"Mr. Hadley doesn't express hysteria in public office," he declared. "He sees a duty ahead of him and goes about its performance in the best way he can. The true public servant is the man who doesn't spend his time in talking about what he proposes to do, but goes ahead and does it. Mr. Hadley of Missouri is that kind of man."

Congressman Lloyd, the last speaker, sang the praises of his State, and the guests were then presented to Mr. Hadley.

Hats for the wee folks

BOTH the Peasant of Holland and the Russian Aristocrat have had their peculiar headgear copied for the benefit of Young America. Here are Dutch bonnets for baby and Czar's caps for little boys—some of them will wash, which will be convenient, when careless play has changed white to black.

Materials are fine lawns, daintily enriched with embroidery—or straw—style depending chiefly on a smart shape, without much trimming. Our command of materials and facilities for making these infants' caps bring the prices within very reasonable limits.

Infants' Dutch bonnets, 50c.

Made of fine lawn—embroidery trimmed lawn—tie strings.

Infants' fine lawn caps, 1.25

Cluster of pin tucks with satin ribbon rosette—lawn strings.

Children's poke bonnets, 2.95

Flare trimmed with lace, embroidery, insertion and ribbon trimmed—sizes 14 to 16 inch.

Boys' Czar caps, 1.25

Made of straw with brush at side—white only—a dashing little military cap that is sure to take New York by storm.

1,000 PACKAGES BILLED WRONG HERE EVERY DAY

Trunk Line Inspector Says It's the Regular Thing.

ROADS AFRAID, LAWYER SAYS

Would Lose Business, Counsel of Inter-State Commerce Commission Declares—Shippers to be Summoned.

One thousand of the packages sent out of New York every day are either underbilled, or have less than their proper weight entered on their bills of lading, according to a statement made to the Inter-State Commerce Commission yesterday at its sitting in the Federal Building by Robert G. Stevenson, General Inspector of the Trunk Line Association for New York, Connecticut, and Massachusetts. The commission was inquiring into the charges that freight is habitually recorded under headings that entitle it to lower rates of compensation than it deserves.

Abundant evidence was given that this was the practice of certain shippers, but as it was testified that certain firms have underbilled habitually for years without any action on the part of the railroads, and as again and again the classification of these goods has been questioned, the Commissioners came to the conclusion that there must be a real doubt as to what class these articles belong to, and they will call some of the shippers complained of to state to-day their side of the case.

Chairman Knapp presided. Commissioners J. C. Clements and C. A. Prouty were present. P. J. Farrell, the attorney of the commission, examined the witness. Inspector Stevenson explained that there were forty-nine Inspectors in New York, Brooklyn, and Jersey City, and that they were familiar enough with the business of the city to knew what goods each regular shipper should handle and to have a pretty good idea of those who habitually underbilled.

"We pay particular attention to these," he said, "and I don't think they get much of their stuff through at less than the proper rates. When they put on a weight it is not done to help the railroad companies, but to get off cheap. We invariably weigh more particularly than ever all packages with a weight on their shipping bill, and we always find it too low."

In support of this he quoted from the Inspectors' returns for last Friday the cases of C. A. Poyet, who billed a 1,060-pound package at 850, and the Auto Piano Company, who thought a box weighing 1,000 pounds might very well go at 600. But most of his complaint dealt with misdescription of the goods. D. Spero wanted to send a box of artificial flowers to Louisville. The railways were disposed to charge him double first-class rates. Spero, he said, described his shipment as millinery goods, on which ordinary first-class rates would be paid. He explained that artificial flowers were light and bulky, and deserved a higher rate than heavy millinery.

"Do they ever bill them as artificial flowers?" he was asked.

"I never knew a case, and we've records of hundreds of times when they were described as millinery," he replied.

"Why don't you call attention to the fact?"

"Every firm has a shipping clerk, and he should know the classification. When we started the Inspection Bureau in 1883 we used to hold the goods at the station and notify the shippers of the underbilling. But not one in twenty-five took any notice, the platforms got blocked, and so we gave it up."

"Who gets the advantage of the underbilling?"

"The consignee. The shipper merely gets the benefit of pleasing his customer."

Mr. Stevenson gave particulars of a lot of cases, in which the recurrence of looking glasses shipped as plate glass, and cotton piece goods as cotton plush, and crockery as china was noticeable. He told how vaseline had been described as axle grease, and how those who buy from the converted Chinaman his priceless queue want it to go as horse hair rather than human hair, because it is so coarse. He told, too, of the ways that are dark and the ways that are mean of the shipper caught in his evil practices who seems to reform. He packs the goods he should not at the top, at the bottom, or right in the middle of crates of a lower classification, and all goes well until the Inspectors learn his curves.

Nineteen shippers were singled out as being frequent underbillers. They are Stransky & Co., Schrenck & Co., J. W. Goddard, Butler Brothers, Jacques Kahn, C. B. Rouss, Seamon, Bache & Co., Maas & Waldstein, Tagliabue & Co., Gerstendorf Brothers, Murallo & Co., Baer Brothers, Morimura Brothers, the Henis Fruit Press Company, A. A. Vantine & Co., the W. A. Sweeney Manufacturing Company, J. Busch, the Manhattan Brass Company, and the New York Stamping Company.

In January 10,486 shipments of through freight and 14,060 of local freight needed correction; by the correction the receipts of the railways were increased $17,840.

"Has any railway asked you to let the goods of certain firms go through uninspected?" the witness was asked.

"I never heard of such a case. They would not be so indiscreet. Newspaper stories of collusion between the Inspectors and the shippers are absolutely untrue."

"What can be done to prevent these irregularities?" asked Chairman Knapp.

"There is a law by which offenders may be prosecuted. There is no other method I can see."

Mr. Farrell said afterward that the shippers were liable under the Elkins law for penalties running from $1,000 to $20,000 for underbilling, but that no railway company would be the first to prosecute for fear of losing business.

Confirmatory evidence by some of the Inspectors under Mr. Stevenson was given, and the commission adjourned till 10 o'clock this morning.

At the recess for lunch C. J. Shearn, counsel for W. R. Hearst, conferred for a short time with Chairman Knapp. He said that his client had meditated entering an appearance before the commission at this hearing, but had decided it was not necessary.

AGREE ON LOCAL OPTION.

Bill Now Provides for Special Elections to Wipe Out Saloons.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 23.—The Senate Committee on Taxation and Retrenchment and the Assembly Committee on Excise have agreed on an amendment to the Tully-Wainwright Local Option bill which indicates that the measure now has a very fair chance to go through the Legislature and become a law.

Senator Tully has agreed to the amendment, which eliminates the most objectionable feature, the clause making the filing of petitions with a Supreme Court Judge all that is necessary to have a saloon discontinued in any residence locality. The amendment provides that instead of a petition there shall be special elections to effect the wiping out of any objectionable saloon in a district.

The Rev. Dr. Russell, head of the Anti-Saloon League, and several others representing it, who have been watching closely the course of the measure, agreed to the amendment as the surest way of getting action on the bill.

WASHINGTON, March 23.—Perry Belmont, President of the State Publicity Organization, said to-day: "The bill providing for publicity of campaign contributions reported to the New York State Assembly by the Judiciary Committee of that body is entirely satisfactory to the Publicity Organization. It is based upon the measure submitted by our organization, and we shall be very glad to see it adopted."

CHINA OUR OPPORTUNITY.

John Foord and C. A. Conant Urge Fair Treatment of Chinese.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, March 23.—A strong plea for reasonable modification of the Chinese exclusion laws was made at a dinner given to-night by the Massachusetts Reform Club at Young's Hotel.

John Foord, Secretary of the Executive Committee of the American Asiatic Association, explained the work being done at Washington in favor of such a modification of the exclusion laws as would permit reputable Chinese students and merchants to visit the United States without being subjected to humiliation and insult at the port of entry. He urged the passage of the bill of Representative Foster of Vermont, a member of the House Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Charles A. Conant, Treasurer of the Morton Trust Company of New York, spoke on the general commercial and economic situation in the Orient and pointed out the possibilities that lay there for the United States. He declared that the commercial and financial opportunities of the future lay largely in the Orient. The awakening of the 400,000,000 people of China to modern civilization would mean an opening of markets and opportunities for investment which would rival or surpass the markets opened by any previous step in the progress of modern commerce.

Through China, also, Mr. Conant pointed out, much trade would go to Eastern Siberia, which, in spite of the recent reverses of Russia, was becoming an important factor in modern commercial development. Siberia was being filled with modern cities, with fine buildings, traction systems, and electric lighting plants. To this development the United States might contribute if it pursued a broad commercial policy at home and in the Orient and treated the Chinese like other self-respecting peoples.

SIX RIDES FOR 25 CENTS.

Bill Affecting New York Traction Companies Advanced—Other Bills.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 23.—To compel New York City traction companies to sell six tickets for 25 cents is what the Krulewitsch bill provides. The Assembly to-day advanced the measure. Assemblyman Krulewitsch has performed much missionary work, and the prospects of its passage appear to be good.

Action by the House on the Raines-Murphy Recount bill was postponed until Wednesday when it appeared on second reading to-day. It is said that most of the session of that day will be taken to thrash out the controversy between Hearst and McClellan.

Somebody wants to prevent the New York City Aldermen from obtaining a salary of $2,000 a year, for when the bill providing for an increase of $1,000 in the salary of New York Aldermen came up to-day in the House Majority Leader Moreland said he had received notice of opposition to it and would therefore be compelled to ask that action be delayed until Monday.

The Miller bill, reducing the present tariff that may be charged by the Long Island Railroad, was advanced in the House to-day. The measure provides that the rate may not be more than 2 cents a mile, except when a distance of less than two miles is to be traveled, when 5 cents may be charged. Edward M. Shepard opposed this measure last year and has been here against it this year.

JUSSERAND SEES PRESIDENT.

London Outlook Says Morocco Agreement Will Be Due to America.

WASHINGTON, March 23.—Secretary Root and M. Jusserand, the French Ambassador, had a long conference with the President at the White House late this afternoon.

While it was surmised that the discussion was on the Moroccan Conference, no definite information could be obtained.

LONDON, Saturday, March 24.—Commenting on the Moroccan situation, The Outlook to-day says there is very little doubt that the Algeciras Conference is on the eve of its last sitting, and that an agreement will be reached nominally upon the basis of the Austrian proposal, but in reality through the mediation of the United States.

The plan, the writer says, deprives Germany of victory in any dramatic form, but means, nevertheless, the defeat of all the original purposes of France and of the British policy on which the Anglo-French agreement was founded. Mixed control of the ports of Tangier and Mogador, The Outlook says, "means internationalization in its weakest form, nullifies the policy of pacific penetration, defeats all the ends aimed at in the main clause of the Anglo-French convention, and secures Emperor William's purposes. France is deprived of all real influence upon the interior, and is confined to a local rôle at three ports out of eight."

CONFERENCE FURTHER DELAYED

Police Projects Not Ready—American Plan May Not Be Presented.

LONDON TIMES—NEW YORK TIMES.
Special Cable. Copyright, 1906.

ALGECIRAS, March 23.—The two projects for a police organization mentioned yesterday are still under consideration. It is understood that communications on the subject are passing between the Governments concerned.

Some delegates were this morning of the opinion that the General Committee should assemble to-day, but it was afterward recognized that no progress could be made till an agreement was reached on the police question, and that neither of the two projects was sufficiently prepared to serve as a basis for formal deliberation. It was decided, therefore, to hold merely a meeting of the Drafting Committee to consider and put into shape matters of detail which will have to be sanctioned later in a plenary sitting.

As the President of the conference, the Duke of Almodovar, leaves to-night for Cadiz, the next meeting of the General Committee cannot be held before Monday.

In the exchange of views which is taking place privately between the delegates considerable progress was made to-day in the question of the State Bank.

ALGECIRAS, March 23.—The American and Austrian police proposals will not be introduced unless a settlement is not otherwise attainable, which seems improbable.

RUSSIAN AID TO FRANCE CAUSES GERMAN PROTEST

Support at Algeciras Instead of Hostility Was Expected.

MUCH IRRITATION IN BERLIN

Anger Increased by Russian Note to M. Bourgeois and Communication Regarding Casablanca Plan.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.
[Copyright, 1906.]

BERLIN, March 23.—For some days it has been reported that Russia's attitude at the Algeciras Conference has produced extreme irritation in high quarters in Germany.

The Tageblatt to-day not only confirms this report, but asserts that the German Government has sent a plainly worded note to St. Petersburg protesting against the "extreme support" accorded by Russia to the French Moroccan policy.

Why Germany should have expected that Russia was going to desert, or at any rate accord only cold support to her ally at Algeciras, is unknown to the newspapers and public here, but that this was the supposition seems evident.

Anger toward Russia was manifested as long ago as March 6, when the second Russian delegate at Algeciras read a memorandum before the conference in which he declared that only France and Spain had officers properly qualified to organize a police force in Morocco, and that an international police force was bound to be a failure.

Germany's irritation has been growing ever since then, and it was increased by the note handed by the Russian Ambassador to the French Foreign Minister, M. Bourgeois, on March 20, which declared that the Russian Government had "never ceased, and would never cease, to act toward France as a faithful ally."

Russia's formal denial that she supported the creation of a special police organization at Casablanca followed and still further increased Germany's anger.

SOUVORIN MUST GO TO JAIL.

Czar Confirms Sentence — Journalist Was at the Peace Conference.

LONDON TIMES—NEW YORK TIMES.
Special Cable. Copyright, 1906.

ST. PETERSBURG, March 23.—Alexis Souvorin, Jr., the editor of the Russ, has been arrested and will have to undergo a year's imprisonment for printing the revolutionary manifesto last December. The court's recommendation that the sentence be reduced or deferred was ignored. The Government is anxious to remove one of the most fearless and single-hearted champions of freedom in the country.

The Russ, under the able guidance of its founder and editor, had become such a scourge to the bureaucracy that various satraps, principally those of Moscow and Odessa, penalized all who sold or read the paper.

The imprisonment of M. Souvorin is as eloquent a sign of the prevailing lawlessness as the execution of ex-Lieut. Schmidt, the abominable outrage committed by two officers on Mlle. Spiridorovna, and numerous other outrages with which the newspapers are daily filled.

Alexis Souvorin is the eldest son of the editor of the Novoe Vremya. He represented his father's paper at the Portsmouth Peace Conference and on returning to Russia became the editor of the Russ. While in this country Souvorin made many friends and created a most favorable impression at Portsmouth and New York. After the Peace Conference concluded its work a number of dinners were given to him.

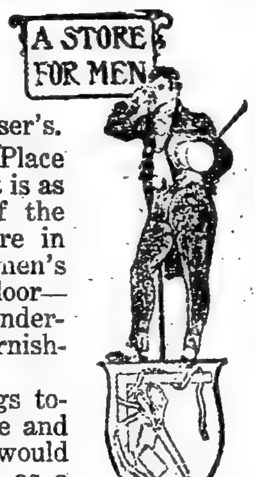
A Store for Men.

A STORE FOR MEN



A STORE FOR MEN—separate, exclusive, convenient and complete—at Loeser's.

The door from Elm Place lets you into it at once. It is as separate from the rest of the Store as though you were in another building. And all men's wearables are on the main floor—Clothes, Hats, Gloves, Underwear, Shirts and other furnishings.

We put all these things together here in this separate and convenient way so that it would be as handy for any man as a store could be.

But it is the merit of the merchandise that has made this STORE FOR MEN such a success. Men came here and found they could buy Clothing with such style and fit and good tailoring as cannot be matched in Brooklyn. Men who want Shirts to measure found here an immensely larger variety of shirtings to choose from than could be seen anywhere else—and such shirt-tailoring as in any other place costs higher prices. Men found throughout the stocks a distinctive style and good taste which is largely appreciated in Brooklyn.

And so the Store has grown to large prominence in the community—as much by personal recommendation of those who trade here as by any other advertising.

It will take you perhaps five minutes to-day to come in and see what a complete and satisfactory STORE FOR MEN is located here. If you spend a few minutes longer and discover how much less are the regular prices here than you have been accustomed to pay in other places, the Store will have won another permanent patron.

WORKMANSHIP Is the Heart Of Good Clothing : : Of This New Spring Clothing for Men

WHEN YOU GO TO BUY A WATCH, you are more interested in the works in the INSIDE of the Watch than you are in the case.

When you pick out a man for a friend or an employe it is what is INSIDE the man and not his exterior that governs your judgment.

When you buy Clothing, it ought to be the INSIDE of the Clothing that received your most careful examination.

For it is the INSIDE of Clothing just the same as it is the inside of the Watch and the man that stands for worth and wear.

Loeser Clothes for men are RIGHT INSIDE as well as outside. On that feature we have built up a Clothing business here that has hundreds of stanch friends.

Loeser Clothes look right at the start. They are made of fine materials. They have distinctiveness and style such as few, even of the best custom tailors, can assure you. They fit perfectly whether you are tall or short, stout or thin.

And Loeser Clothes for men wear and hold their shape because they have careful, skillful, honest WORKMANSHIP inside of them.

The new stocks for Spring are ready. They are the handsomest we ever showed. The prices are as little or less than the prices of ordinary ready-for-service Clothes. And the Clothes are better than you can buy anywhere else for these prices.

Don't take our word for these things. Make the test yourself. To-day will be a very good time to do it.

Business Sack Suits are $12.50 to $30
Prince Albert Coats and Vests ...... $20 to $32
Cutaway Coats and Vests $15 to $25

"Ramie" Underwear for Men.
Best of Mesh Underwear.

THE BEST RECOMMENDATION of the "Ringheim-Schlichten Ramie Fiber Health Underwear" is the fact that probably no man who ever tried a suit of it will be content with Underwear of any other sort.

"Ramie" Underwear in both the mesh and flat weaves is especially ideal for Spring and Summer wear. It allows the air to circulate freely. It absorbs and carries off more moisture than any other texture, and so keeps the skin always at an even temperature. It imparts to the skin a stimulating effect which cannot be described, but which every "Ramie" wearer appreciates. Further, it looks better and wears longer than any other mesh Underwear made.

The medium weights are $2.50 and $3 a garment, and we have sizes to fit any man.

A Complete Stock of Underwear.

Every good sort of Underwear is here, no matter what your preference may be. And prices are reasonable.
Merino Underwear, 75c. to $1.75 a garment.
Balbriggan Underwear, 50c. to $1 a garment.
Pure wool unshrinkable Underwear, $2 and $3 a garment.

ROOSEVELT FOR REFORM BY ORDER OF EXECUTIVE

Warns the Keep Commission Not to Ask for Much Legislation.

TOO MUCH BUREAUCRACY NOW

Some Red Tape Needed, but He Wants the Government Business Brought Up to Date.

WASHINGTON, March 23.—President Roosevelt had an informal meeting with the members of the Keep Commission last Tuesday evening at the residence of Gifford Pinchot, chief of the Division of Forestry. The commission was appointed a year ago to study the business methods of the several departments of the Government with a view to systematizing the work of the departments and reducing the amount of "red tape" to a minimum.

After discussing the work of the commission and its achievement up to this time, the President delivered an address to the members. His remarks were made public to-day at the White House.

"It would be a good thing for certain cities of our Government," he said, "to realize the amount of hard, disinterested work for the Government represented by this gathering, to which I am now speaking—a work, which must in the immense majority of cases be its own reward, and therefore an ample reward; for there is nothing pleasanter than the consciousness of having done well a bit of work well worth doing.

"A year ago I appointed the Keep Commission, because I had become convinced that the business methods of our Government were by no means abreast of the times. While I think there is comparatively little corruption in the National Governmental service, and while that little I intend to cut out or have cut cut through other agencies than yours, it yet remains true that there is a good deal of duplication of work, a good deal of clumsiness of work, and, above all, the inevitable tendency toward mere bureaucratic methods against which every Government official should be perpetually on his guard."

Referring to the work of the commission, the President said:

"I do not want a diagnosis of the case. I want a recommendation how to reach the case; I do not want merely to know that things are bad; I want to know what is bad and what is to be done to make it better, so that if legislation is necessary I can recommend it, so that if, as I hope will be true in the enormous majority of cases, the matter can be reached by executive regulation, I can see that that regulation is issued.

"I want to say right here, gentlemen, that I shall value the reports that I receive largely, not exclusively at all, but largely in proportion as they do not call for legislation. There is nothing easier, as all of you know, than to draw up an elaborate minute to show how well things would go on if some one else did something different.

"You have literally an unparalleled opportunity for useful work. As far as I am aware there has never before been made in this country, indeed, in any country, such a comprehensive, systematic effort to put the country's housekeeping in order.

"I need not say to you that it is urgent. A great deal of our Government work has become proverbial for the red tape involved. Of course, much of the outside criticism upon red tape is due to forgetfulness of the fact that you and I are responsible to Congress for every dollar we spend, and for every dollar's worth of work that we do, while the outsider is responsible only to himself or those interested with him, so that we not only have to do what is right and efficient, but have to be able to show that what we have done is right and efficient, and this inevitably means that there must be certain forms observed which the unthinking outsider is apt to stigmatize as red tape. Nevertheless it is true that there is always a tendency in Government work to run to needless red tape.

"There never was an army that amounted to anything in campaign or in battle unless the average soldier had in him the spirit which made him regard the winning of the campaign, the winning of the battle as in itself the end, and his service, if good enough, as in itself the reward. He might wish other rewards if they happened to come, but if they did not, well and good.

"The doing the duty is of itself a sufficient reward for any man. So it has to be if the work of the Government is really well done.

"I do not want you in any case to recommend a change simply for the sake of making a change; nothing could be more foolish. But never hesitate for a moment in basing your recommendations upon the conditions actually found and the best way to meet them, no matter how radical may be the departure from established methods required.

"Good team work is as much needed in the executive civil service as it can possibly be anywhere else. And it is the only way to prevent duplication of work. Your own work is most important, but it covers only half of the field. To put the departments on the best and most economical working basis the President, as I have already recommended, should be given power to transfer any part of the work of a department to another department, as was done in the case of the Department of Commerce and Labor."

BLIND, BUT WANTS TO TEACH.

Applicant at Maxwell's Office Can't Understand Disqualification.

Two comparatively young men, one of whom wore ground eyeglasses with heavy black rims and was led by the other, entered City Supt. Maxwell's office yesterday and asked information concerning the requirements for a teacher's license. George Wharton, Dr. Maxwell's secretary, explained the requirements. He learned, in response to questions, that the applicant was totally blind. This was sufficient to disqualify him for a teacher's license.

The stranger could not comprehend this. He explained that he came from the West, that he wanted a teacher's license to return home and get a place as instructor in a school for the blind. He was greatly disappointed, and asked for a list of books by studying which he might better equip himself for a teacher's work. The list was furnished by Examiner Smith.

A DIFFERENCE IN LUNGS.

In the Edinburgh University three human lungs lie side by side. One is of an Eskimo and is snow white. In life, this would be ruddy with rich blood. Another is that of a coal-miner and is black. The other is of a town dweller and is a dirty slate gray, as are the lungs of most city residents. That's why consumption thrives in cities.

One reason why Scott's Emulsion does so much to keep down consumption is because it helps to keep the lungs clean and supplies them with rich, red blood. It makes the lungs germ-resisting. If the body is run down and health is at a low ebb Scott's Emulsion will build it up quickly and permanently.

HOUSE LEADERS BAITED.

A Republican and a Democrat Rip Up Appropriation Bill.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 23.—A Republican and a Democrat got together in the House to-day, tangled up legislation over the Legislative, Executive, and Judicial Appropriation bill until the House leaders and the Appropriations Committee were in a white-heat rage, and furnished Mark Smith of Arizona with a chance to make a speech hammering the House machine.

The Republican was Prince of Illinois and the Democrat was Hardwick of Georgia. Prince was actuated by a desire for vengeance, the Appropriations Committee having enjoyed itself punching holes in the Military Committee's Army bill. Hardwick is believed to have been animated by hereditary Democracy and pure deviltry.

Chairman Tawney of the Appropriations Committee charged that the Prince-Hardwick objections would strike out more than half of the bill. Prince and Hardwick seemed to take this as a compliment, and went merrily on their way objecting.

Tawney and Littauer of New York finally charged Prince with having got a janitor on the payrolls at $60 a month and then shipped him back to Illinois, having his work done by another man at $8 a month, while the $60 still went to the janitor.

The utmost bitterness was shown, and by 3:30 o'clock it was plain that the work of the Appropriations Committee had been pretty well demolished. The bill looked like a sieve. Then it was that Mark Smith of Arizona, who has never forgiven the House machine for jamming through the bill forcing his Territory into union with New Mexico as a State, got the floor.

"This bill is dead-locked," said he, "and I have a suggestion to make. Why don't the Committee of the Whole rise, report its inability to pass this appropriation bill, refer it to the Committee on Territories, have a rule brought in prohibiting amendments, and have it passed without anybody reading it?"

A roar of laughter came from all over the House, and the Democrats and Statehood insurgents joined in a storm of applause.

"Two million people," continued Smith wrathfully, coming down the aisle and facing the Republican leaders, "can be disposed of in twenty minutes, and yet here we are fussing over the salary of a single clerk."

"Abuse the Senate with the lips and serve it with the heart," went on the Arizona man, waving his arm at Sereno Payne and Tawney. "I have seen it for twenty years.

The annual Grosvenor-Hepburn attack on the appropriation of the Civil Service Commission came off as usual when that item was reached, but this time Col. Hepburn made it all by himself. Time has mellowed the bitterness which once filled the Colonel's breast at the mention of civil service reform, and to-day he did not rage against it. He merely showered it with gentle ridicule and kept the House in roars.

FOOLED BY BOGUS DIVORCES.

Man and Wife Want Marriage Annulled So They Can Legally Marry.

Justice Davis, in the Supreme Court, listened to an unusual case yesterday, when husband and wife both asked for annulment of their marriage. They declared that each had been the victim of a bogus divorce. They sought to establish their right to remarry, and so legitimize their 3-year-old son.

Edward H. Coppinger of Sydney, Australia, and Alice M. Christmas of Birmingham, England, while living in West New York, N. J., became acquainted and decided to get married if the legal obstacles could be overcome. Each had been married. A member of the law firm of Leonard & Leonard of 231 Broadway, Coppinger testified yesterday, undertook to get divorces for both for $250. Coppinger paid it. Both received documents bearing red seals, purporting to be divorce papers, and Coppinger's was in the shape of an annulment, and seemed to be signed by Justice Lambert. Mrs. Christmas got what looked like a divorce from a Pennsylvania court.

Witnesses testified yesterday that no such papers had ever been issued. Following the annulment that is expected, each will sue for divorce, and when they get their papers they will remarry.

WILL BACK THE MAYOR UP.

McGowan with Him in the Matter of the Connecting Railroad.

Mayor McClellan's opposition to granting a franchise to the New York Connecting Railroad on the terms proposed by the Rapid Transit Commission resulted yesterday in the appointment by him of President McGowan of the Board of Aldermen as Chairman of the Board of Estimate's Committee on conference to meet with the Rapid Transit Commission's committee. Borough Presidents Coler, Haffen, and Bermel were appointed the other members of the Conference Committee of the Board of Estimate.

President McGowan will become the President of the joint conference. He is determined to back up the Mayor's contention and to insist on the restoration of the franchise contract to the original conditions proposed by Harry P. Nichols, head of the Bureau of Franchises. These conditions are $2,250,000 compensation to the city for a twenty-five-year franchise and the right to regulate freight rates over the road so that the city shall not be discriminated against in favor of other cities, on shipments. The Rapid Transit Commission proposed a compensation of $1,100,000.

WANTS TO SEAL UP BALLOTS.

Hearst Asks Court to Protect the Storehouses from Entry.

W. R. Hearst, candidate for Mayor on the Municipal Ownership ticket last Fall, applied to the Supreme Court yesterday for a peremptory writ to compel the Board of Elections to permit seals to be put on the warehouses in five boroughs where the ballots are stored. Assistant Corporation Counsel Butts opposed the application. Justice Clinch reserved decision.

Mr. Hearst is still on record as contesting Mayor McClellan's election, and his application is predicated on the fact that his evidence is in the ballot boxes, which are under the guardianship of the Mayor's appointees.

"NOT I," SAYS WOODRUFF.

Denies That He and Aldridge Have Combined to Oust Odell.

Ex-Lieut. Gov. Timothy L. Woodruff issued a statement yesterday at Republican State Headquarters in the Fifth Avenue Hotel, in which he denied the Washington reports that he had entererd into a compact with Railroad Commissioner George W. Aldridge to oust Odell from the State Chairmanship and to take between them that Chairmanship and the Executive Chairmanship as well.

RATE DEBATE STIRRED BY CORNFIELD LAWYER

His View, Read by Tillman, Finds Support in the Senate.

SIGNS OF GETTING TOGETHER

Conferences Result in the Drawing of an Amendment That May Be Agreed To.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 23.—A new idea was brought into the rate debate to-day. At the close of Senator Spooner's argument against the constitutionality of the Bailey amendment Senator Tillman arose to read what he termed a cornfield lawyer's contribution to the discussion.

The writer, a lawyer living at Norman, Oklahoma, commending the fight for rate control, said that if it was fair to give the carriers the right to get an injunction stopping the operation of a new rate made by the Inter-State Commerce Commission it ought also to be fair to establish the converse of that by giving the commission the right to get an injunction against a carrier who intended to put a higher rate into effect.

The suggestion brought on a lively exchange of views in regard to this offset to the injunction right to be given to the railroads. Senator Foraker declared that Tillman's confield friend had hit the crucial point of the whole contention, and asked that Senators look over his rate bill wherein he had tried to meet exactly this cornfield point. In effect he claimed there existed now this right under the Elkins act. This allusion he tried to support by citing the case of the Chesapeake and Ohio Railroad, where an injunction was obtained to prevent a higher rate.

The debate to-day indicated a steadily growing disposition on the part of Senators who disagreed to converge in their concessions and reach a common ground. Senator Spooner, in reply to a question from Tillman, said he would support an amendment providing that in case temporary injunctions were sought due notice should be given to the Inter-State Commerce Commission, and it should have the right to be heard by counsel.

It has been learned from an undoubted authority that since the clash yesterday between Senators Spooner and Rayner on this notice amendment, several conferences have been held between Senators holding opposite views, and an amendment has been drawn by a Senator who has taken a leading position for the Hepburn bill. This amendment provides that when there are contentions against a new rate made by the Inter-State Commerce Commission and an appeal to the courts is taken by a railroad, the preliminary injunction shall not be issued for a period of twenty days, and the rate shall continue in effect during that time, notice being given to the Inter-State Commerce Commission of the application, and the latter body having the right to appear and be heard through counsel and witnesses.

It is believed that if the majority of the Senate cannot meet on common ground short of this proposition it will in the ultimate alignment be accepted. The lawyers of the Senate on both sides are quoted to-night as approving of the amendment.

$61 FOR A LINCOLN LETTER.

And 50 Cents Each for Mayor's Signed Books Bid at Auction.

A two-page autograph letter from President Lincoln to Rufus F. Andrews, dated at Washington, Aug. 6, 1861, brought $61, the high price at a sale of autographs and books by the Merwin-Clayton Company yesterday.

The low price was bid for Mayor McClellan's signed author's copies of "The Oligarchy of Venice," two copies of which went for 50 cents each.

The original manuscript of "Whitman—A Study," by John Burroughs, sold for $53, and a four-page letter of Oscar Wilde on the subject of "Parodies," $41.50.

Four autograph war telegrams of U. S. Grant brought $16, $18, $30, and $32, respectively. A letter of Andrew Johnson, dated at Greenville, Aug. 11, 1853, $26, and a letter of Grover Cleveland on March 10, 1890, referring to the tariff, $6.50. A letter of Charles Dickens, Dec. 3, 1849, to Charles Cowden Clarke, with portraits and views relating to him, sold for $21.

VICTIM IDENTIFIES GOSLIN.

Alfred R. Goslin, through whom many have expected to get rich quickly, and none but lawyers have achieved riches, was arraigned before Magistrate Wahle, in the Tombs Court yesterday on the charge of doing business under an assumed name. Werner Fabian of Denver, who accused Goslin of swindling him out of $25,000 by Western Gold Mining Company's stock, identified Goslin as the alleged Western mine owner introduced under the name of Griffin.

Fabian said that he had been instructed not to call at the Nassau Street office where he first met Goslin, but to do all business over the telephone. Having heard Goslin speak yesterday, Fabian was willing to swear that he recognized the voice.

Magistrate Wahle, at 7:15 o'clock last evening, adjourned the case until next Monday, fixing bail at $2,000, which was put up in cash by Goslin's counsel.

The District Attorney intimated that other charges against Goslin were ready. Goslin asked Assistant District Attorney Lockwood if a report that he might be rearrested was true, but got no definite reply.

A "Stool Pigeon" Inquiry.

Judge O'Sullivan decided yesterday that it would be necessary to investigate some of the stories about innocent men being sent to jail which have been told since his arrest by "Larry" Rogers, exposer of an alleged plot to kill Dr. Parkhurst.

Rogers was in General Sessions yesterday to be sentenced on the charge of perjury to which he has pleaded guilty. His counsel, Frank Boland, pleaded for delay and referred to the prisoner's talk about having sworn falsely in cases in which he acted as a stool pigeon for the police.

District Attorney Jerome reviewed the "plot," and said that the principal object of Rogers seemed to have been "to make suckers of certain persons." He did not appear to think that any "innocent men" were pining away in the Tombs or in prison as a result of the testimony of Rogers. He intimated plainly that he was in doubt as to the prisoner's mental soundness.

Judge O'Sullivan deferred sentence to next Friday.

Sir George Darwin Here.

Sir George Darwin, who will represent the University of Cambridge, the British Association, and the Royal Institute of Great Britain at the celebration of the two hundredth anniversary of the birth of Benjamin Franklin, to be held in Philadelphia on April 17, arrived in New York on the White Star liner Cedric yesterday. He bears an address of welcome from the British Association to the American Philosophical Society, which was founded by Franklin in 1743.

Lingerie and Silk Waists 5.00

Former Prices, $7.90 to $19.50,

These are all new waists—faultlessly fashioned in late and smart styles for Spring wearing.

The simplest one in the lot was marked yesterday $7.90, and was a first-class value at that price. The most elaborate one was priced yesterday at $19.50. The majority are waists that were marked 24 hours ago at a price around the $10 mark.

You May Choose To-day at $5.

The reason is that the garments show some small signs of handling—nothing that you will consider in comparison to the price reduction, but enough to prevent our keeping them in regular stock.

The Lingerie Waists are exquisite hand-embroidered and lace-trimmed models of white batiste, linen and lawn. The silk waists are richly lace trimmed.

The quantities are limited, and, of course, the $15 and $19.50 styles will be snapped up first. We advise getting here as early as possible to-day.

OPERATORS IN DEAD-LOCK; SPLIT IS THREATENED

Robbins and Independents May Pay the Scale Asked.

HAD HOT ALL-DAY FIGHT

No Progress Made and Outlook Dark—Another Meeting To-day—Hard Coal Situation Waits.

INDIANAPOLIS, March 23.—The deadlock between coal operators and miners of the central competitive and the southwestern districts continued to-day throughout the meetings of the two joint Scale Committees, and when the meetings adjourned late this afternoon no agreement had been reached on the wage scale. The differences seemed at the hour of adjournment as far from adjustment as ever. Both Joint Scale Committees adjourned to meet to-morrow morning.

The discussion in the Scale Committee of the central competitive district to-day was confined to arguments among the operators on the committee, and radical differences of views were heatedly expressed by them. The miners' representatives were, for the most part, auditors. An effort was made to secure from President Mitchell of the Mine Workers an expression as to whether he held the Ryan resolution to be in effect. This resolution was adopted by the former joint conference in January, and binds the miners not to sign in any district until an agreement shall have been reached in every district. Mitchell declined to commit himself.

F. L. Robbins of the Western Pennsylvania operators was the target to-day of vigorous attacks by operators, who assailed his position in favor of paying the scale of 1903, which would mean an advance of 5.55 per cent. in wages in the district, and would comply with the demands of the miners. One of the most heated of these attacks was made by J. B. Zerbe of Cleveland, who spoke for the Ohio operators. After paying his respects to Robbins, Zerbe turned to the representatives of the miners and said:

"For the mere consideration of dollars and cents no strike can be justified, and under no circumstances can any strike be justified unless the benefits to be derived thereby far exceed the misery endured, the human energy wasted, and the property destroyed. With you it can be only a question of dollars and cents. You are now getting a fair wage, and one with which you have been satisfied for the last two years; but you are now demanding more. Therefore, if you order this strike your position cannot be justified.

"The Ohio operators' position is different. They are not now getting a fair return for capital invested and the interest thereon. You demand that they surrender a portion of the returns they are now receiving. They have a right to stand for a fair return, and, therefore, are standing upon a principle, and if a strike should come, they are justified, and the responsibility rests wholly with you."

Robbins said on the floor that he did not purpose to be dictated to by the operators of Illinois, Indiana, and Ohio. He said his position was fair and just to all interests, and the Pittsburg Coal Company, which he represented, was willing to pay the advance in wages asked. He said he was also willing to pay the advance at his own mines in Pennsylvania, Ohio, and Illinois, and he had received notice from an Illinois coal company having an output of 1,000,000 tons annually that it had instructed its representatives to vote with him.

Robbins said the country would not permit a general strike upon the causes shown. He turned to President Mitchell and said he did not believe the officials of the miners would dare to refuse to allow the miners to work where their demands were met.

G. A. Magoon, representing the Western Pennsylvania independent operators, in reply to a question by Mr. Robbins, said that if the Pittsburg Coal Company paid the advance and operated its mines the independent operators of Western Pennsylvania would do likewise. The dissensions among the operators became so heated that the operators asked the miners to withdraw for an hour. This was granted, and at the end of the period the operators asked for an adjournment of the committee until to-morrow morning, as they had not finished their discussion. This action was taken. The operators continued in session for an hour longer and then adjourned, after arranging for conferences by States.

Leading operators said this evening that nothing whatever had been accomplished. The situation was exactly as it was at the beginning of the joint conference. There seemed to be no way of adjusting their differences.

The Southwestern district accomplished nothing to-day. President Mitchell offered on behalf of the miners to take the 1903 scale, with 3 per cent. added, but this was defeated by the operators of that district.

President Mitchell said to-day he had set no time as yet to call the anthracite committee together, but a meeting might be held to-morrow. All the members are here. The meeting will consider President Baer's letter accepting Mitchell's proposition for a conference, and will fix a time and place for this conference, to endeavor to adjust the anthracite wage controversy.

It was announced to-night by one of the National officers of the mine workers that when the Joint Scale Committee of the central competitive district meets to-morrow morning, a vote will be taken on the proposition of F. L. Robbins to restore the 1903 scale with the same conditions for a period of two years. This motion, it is anticipated, will be defeated by the operators of Illinois, Indiana, and Ohio, and a motion will then be adopted to report a disagreement of the Scale Committee to a session of the joint conference, which will be called probably to-morrow afternoon. The fight will then be made on the floor of the joint conference.

RISE IN COAL NOT EXPECTED.

Wholesale Dealers, However, Wait to Hear from the Operators.

The large wholesale coal dealers this year will send out no notification about prices until they receive the April list from the operators. This, they expect, will be a continuation of the present prices, strike or no strike. The buying up of small steam sizes of anthracite by middlemen accounts, it is said, for the increased price in those sizes.

In case of a soft coal strike West Virginia, where there are no union miners, would be the principal source of supply. A representative of the New River Collieries Company, organized this week, said yesterday:

"The yield of soft coal throughout the United States is 200,000,000 tons a year. The yield from West Virginia is about 12,000,000 tons, and never more than 20,000,000 tons."

MANY CROOKS LEAVING TOWN.

Quintet Off for Boston Loaded Down with Aliases.

Inspector McLaughlin of Detective Headquarters is drawing the net so closely about pickpockets, thieves, and all-around criminals that many of them are leaving town. Even then, many of them are not able to depart without special permission. Yesterday a man walked up to Detective Sergts. Leesing and Manning, who are stationed at the Fall River Line Pier, Warren Street and North River.

"There's a bunch wot wants to get out on the next boat to Bos'on," ventured the messenger to Leesing.

"Produce your crooks," answered the detective. "I'll look 'em over, and if they're making a real hike I'll see about it."

A moment later a quintet of men, carrying suit cases, hove in sight. Leesing recognized them as Patrick, alias "Patsy," Hill, "Coxey" Holden, Jim, alias "Yokamay," Jones, James, alias "Denver Hop," Johnson, and Pat, alias "Gillen," Burke.

"Bos'on for ours," suggested "Yokamay." "Let us by the wire and we'll spring for Beanburg faster'n a Jerome raid."

"You know what the man from Missouri said," answered Leesing.

"Sure," rejoined "Yokamay," "Here's the goods." Then the quintet opened their suit cases, showing a variety of clothing, but revealing nothing suspicious.

"Beat it," admonished Leesing, as the four men disappeared up the gangway. "And if any of you people ever land in this town again we'll put you away for keeps." They promised to come no nearer than Boston.

WOMEN MOB A LANDLORD.

Police Reserves Called Out to Help Evict Tenement Dwellers.

The rebellious tenants in the row of apartment dwellings at 90 to 100 Cook Street, Williamsburg, who went on strike against their new landlords nearly a month ago, furnished a lot of excitement yesterday while eighteen of the seventy-one families in the houses were being evicted for non-payment of rent. One of the landlords was attacked by women, and the police reserves, who were called out, had considerable difficulty in protecting him.

The tenants had rebelled against an increase of rent, and none of the seventy-one families paid any March rent. Owing to measles in some of the families, the owners of the houses instituted dispossess proceedings against only eighteen of the families.

A crowd gathered when the City Marshal and several assistants appeared. A woman harangued the crowd and cried, "Down with the landlords!"

Before City Marshal Rogers appeared, Victor Bogolowitz, one of the three owners of the houses, was attacked by half a dozen of the women, and he was being kicked and punched when police aid reached him, Rogers having telephoned to the Stagg Street Police Station for the reserves.

IT'LL BE A CABLE BRIDGE.

Eye-Bar Advocates Didn't Appear to Discuss the Manhattan Structure.

None of the advocates of the eye-bar system of bridge building attended the hearing before Controller Metz and Bridge Commissioner Stevenson yesterday to discuss the advantages of the eye-bar and cable forms of construction. Somebody told Controller Metz a week or so ago that if the cable construction planned for the Manhattan Bridge was abandoned and the eye-bar substituted there would be a saving of a year's time and more than $1,000,000.

Mr. Stevenson said his department has about completed the plans and specifications for the bridge, and he expects to be ready to advertise them in a few days. Mr Stevenson said he thinks a cable bridge can be built as quickly and as cheaply as an eye-bar bridge. The Manhattan Bridge will be a cable bridge.

J. J. HILL FOOLS WALL ST.

He Is in St. Paul, Not Aiken—May Be Here Next Week.

James J. Hill is not in the South, as Wall Street had supposed, but at his home in St. Paul. Mr. Hill went to Aiken, S. C., about two weeks ago, and it was thought that he would remain there until he decided to return to New York. Instead he went direct to St. Paul. It was reported yesterday that Mr. Hill had come to this city secretly some days ago and stayed here two days before starting for the West. At Mr. Hill's office it was said that he did not pass through this city.

It has been expected in some quarters that Mr. Hill's return to this city will be followed by a resumption of negotiations for lease of the Great Northern's ore lands. For that reason the financial district has watched his movements closely. Mr. Hill's friends said yesterday that they did not know when he would come to New York, although it was quite possible that he might be here early next week.

Brave Policeman Gets a Medal.

Police Commissioner Bingham presented to Patrolman Thomas F. Quinn of the Madison Street Station yesterday a gold medal awarded to him by Congress for rescuing two men from drowning in the East River in 1903 and 1904. At the same time the Commissioner read to the patrolman a long letter sent by Secretary of the Treasury Shaw, complimenting Quinn on his bravery.

THREE MEN CAPTURED AFTER MURDER IN BANK

Try to Shoot Police When Cornered in a Rochester House.

TWO ESCAPE OUT OF WINDOW

Accused of Killing the Constable of Sodus Who, Single-Handed, Had Tackled Five Robbers.

Special to The New York Times.

ROCHESTER, March 23.—Edward Pullman, constable and night watchman of Sodus, a small village about forty miles east of Rochester, was shot and killed this morning by a gang of five safe crackers, whom he had detected in the act of robbing the Bank of Sodus, in the main street of the village.

Locked up at Police Headquarters in this city are three men whom the police have good reason to believe are members of the gang. They were arrested shortly before noon in a rooming house near the Rome, Watertown & Ogdensburg Railroad station after a desperate fight, in which they attempted to shoot the six officers who had cornered them. In the room were found burglar tools, masks, nitro-glycerine, and other things used by safe-blowers.

One of the men, who gave his name as Fred Schultz and his home as Connecticut, had a fresh bullet wound in his leg. Another of the trio was identified as "Big Ed" Kelly, the Boston bank burglar, whose picture is in the local Rogues' Gallery and who recently skipped his bail in Toronto, where he is wanted for robbing a safe. The third man gave his name as James McCormick.

An abandoned horse and cutter in the northern part of the city gave the police the first clue. They learned that three men had been seen entering the city about 6:30 o'clock this morning, and they had earlier information that three suspicious characters had engaged rooms at the rooming house near the station. The men had been in the habit of remaining in the house all day and sallying forth at night.

When the officers arrived at the house they went up to the room occupied by the men and knocked at the door. There was no answer, but they could hear whispering inside, so opening the door with a skeleton key they rushed in. The three men ran for the window, but were headed off, and then drew revolvers, but were knocked down and overpowered before they could fire a shot.

Subsequently the police learned that the two other members of the gang were in another room when the officers arrived, and escaped by a window in their underclothing, leaving their street clothes behind. The police have the clothes, and are scouring the city for the men.

Several residents of Sodus heard four shots a few minutes before 2 o'clock this morning, and five men were seen running up Main Street, but were mistaken for boys who had been firing off crackers, and no investigation was made. When Pullman did not come home for breakfast his family became alarmed and made inquiry, which resulted in the finding of his body in the bank.

Everything points to the supposition that Pullman discovered the men in the bank, fired one shot at them through the window, and then boldly entered, only to be shot down. Three bullet wounds were found in the body.

Inspection of the safe showed that the robbers had bored a hole four inches deep close to the combination knob, and were almost ready to explode a charge of nitro-glycerine, which was found near by, together with a kit of burglars' tools.

Before attempting to rob the bank the men had entered and robbed the Rome, Watertown & Ogdensburg Railway station at Sodus. One safe was blown open, a small safe was carried away, and express packages were ripped open. The sole booty obtained was 75 cents.

After killing Pullman the robbers stole a horse and cutter from the barn of H. S. Boyd and another horse and sleigh from Wellburn's barn. Three of them in one rig started for Rochester and the other two went in another direction. The journey of the three men to Rochester has been traced by the reports which have since reached the city, for they changed their horses twice en route. It has also been ascertained that the two other members of the gang reached Rochester a few hours after the three men in custody had arrived.

All five were at the rooming house three weeks ago, when the Post Office at Charlotte was robbed. They went away on that day, and the police expect to trace that job to them.

GAME CLUB'S REPORT.

Blooming Grove Hunters and Fishers Hear of Treasures They Have.

The Blooming Grove Hunting and Fishing Club at a smoker in Delmonico's last night heard the report of Nathaniel S. Smith, the President, showing the opportunities for hunting, fishing, and outdoor sports which the preserves of the club, at Glen Eyre, Pike County, Penn., made possible to its members.

"Think of what we have!" he said. "Upward of 18,000 acres, of which 5,000 acres are well timbered; eight lakes, most of them good fishing waters; four trout streams, with an aggregate extent of fully twenty miles as the streams run, which streams are being constantly stocked from our hatcheries; a park of nearly 1,000 acres, inclosed with a wire fence, in which there is a large number of deer, and the number constantly increasing; a hatchery at which we annually hatch out hundreds of thousands of trout, and a commodious and comfortable clubhouse."

The members decided to suggest to the Directors in May that the coming season be closed for grouse, to permit the birds to increase. Resolutions were adopted expressing regret at the continued illness of Dr. Spencer M. Nash, and a committee was appointed to nominate Directors for the coming year and report to the annual meeting at the club's preserves on May 6.

PRICE COURT-MARTIAL ENDS.

Major Says Two Glasses of Malt Upset Him for Two Weeks.

The court-martial of Major David Price, Artillery Corps, for intoxication, conduct unbecoming an officer, and violation of a pledge of total abstinence ended yesterday. The court's findings will be transmitted to Gen. Grant and then to Washington. It will be several weeks before the decision is known.

Major Shanks, the Judge Advocate, yesterday asked Major Price why he failed to submit a report of his failure to inspect the militia organizations in Syracuse, Albany, and Troy. Major Price said he supposed he had missed only one night's inspection, and thought he could catch up in Troy. He swore that he was not in possession of his full mental faculties in Syracuse, and could not recall the date when he entered the saloon where his troubles began.

"Do you mean to say that your faculties were impaired for two weeks because of the drinking of two glasses of malt?" asked the court.

"I really believe such to be the case," replied the witness.

SEIZED BY CHINESE PIRATES.

Launch Owned by the Standard Oil Company Looted Near Canton.

HONGKONG, March 23.—A launch owned by the Standard Oil Company was seized and looted by pirates near Canton yesterday.

The pirates obtained a number of Winchester rifles and a thousand rounds of ammunition.

The United States gunboat Callao is proceeding to the scene of the piracy.

The Callao is attached to the Asiatic fleet, and is commanded by Lieut. Robert W. Henderson. She has a displacement of 200 tons and carries six guns.

LEARNS TO KNOW WALDO.

Probationary Policeman Gets an Introduction That He Will Remember.

Deputy Police Commissioner Rhinelander Waldo visited the Tenderloin Station last night. He was looking over the books with Sergt. McCann when Henry Schrieber, a probationary policeman, came in and leaned with folded arms and a sigh of content upon the rail. The Deputy raised his eyebrows.

"Br-r-r-r-roop!" shouted McCann.

Schrieber looked pained.

"Stan' up straight—you!" roared the Sergeant. "How d'ye s'pose ye'll ever be a p'liceman? S'lute, too! No; t'other hand. Again! Sharp, this time. As you were! Right wheel! Quick march!"

The "right wheel" and "quick march" took Schrieber right through the door. Otuside he paused, and peering under the window blind, gazed long upon the man in civilian dress.

Then he faded into the night.

WANT RUGBY FOOTBALL FOR COLUMBIA STUDENTS

W. de B. Whyte Leading Movement to Introduce the Sport.

ENGLISH PLAYERS TO AID

Promise of Coaches Made by Rugby Football Union of Great Britain If Colleges Want to Play.

A strong effort is being made by Columbia alumni to secure the introduction of Rugby football at Columbia next Fall, and, in order to provide intercollegiate contests for the Morningside collegians, to introduce it as well in other leading American colleges. To this end, the aid of the Rugby Football Union of Great Britain has been sought, and there is every probability of an offer of a cup following, similar to that tendered by Sir Ernest Cochrane recently for the advocates of the association game in the colleges. The project has not assumed definite form as yet, but the chances appear to strongly favor its success.

The prime mover in the matter has been W. De Burgh Whyte of the Columbia University Club, who has conducted the negotiations with the English Rugby authorities, and yesterday he addressed a letter to The Columbia Spectator embodying his ideas. He says:

I have lately been in correspondence with the Secretary of the Rugby Football Union of Great Britain, with a view to interesting his committee in endeavoring to replace our present game of football by rugby. I received a reply stating that the whole matter will come up before the International Board at their meeting on Saturday next, when a resolution will be introduced proposing that a conference be held between delegates of the Colonial Unions, the United States of America, and the international board, such conference to take place before the meeting of the board in March, 1907.

It is to be hoped that a delegate from Columbia and delegates from other of our leading universities will be able to attend this conference.

Our first aim is to get Columbia and Harvard and as many other universities as possible to send delegates to a conference. If this can be done, it will be because the students want the game, and the rest will then be simple.

The English Union has expressed its willingness to allow several teams to come to America to play exhibition games, and also to play with any of the college teams which may have been formed. Further than this, if Columbia or any other university takes up the game, many of the English players would be willing to come over to give them points in method of playing. With good college teams coached by first-class players from the other side, the time would shortly come when rugby would be popular.

Aready many of the professors at Columbia, as well as graduates and students, have expressed themselves in favor of the game, and I believe we will have a team there in a short time.

Other universities have taken to rugby and seem well pleased with it. The most notable example is in the case of the University of California, which played two games with a team from Vancouver, B. C., and liked the sport so much that they have sent their football coach to England to learn more of the game in order that he will be better able to coach.

The scheme suggested by Mr. Whyte of bringing teams over here to play exhibition games and also having individual players come over to act as coaches is based on the method employed by Sir Ernest Cochrane in his effort to introduce Association into this country. Sir Ernest Cochrane, who brought the Pilgrim Association Football team to America last Fall, offered a cup for the American colleges to play for among themselves, and volunteered to send several English players to this country to act as coaches at his expense. Others outside of the college men are interested in the effort to introduce Rugby. The Crescent Athletic Club has a number of members who are to play either Association or Rugby, and they promise surely to have a team next Fall. The matter is in the hands of Louis J. Doyle, who is earnestly at work on it with every prospect of success. It is said that others in the New York Athletic Club and without that club are interested in developing the game, and that there is good prospects for the organization of an amateur league about New York. Gordon Brown, the old Yale Captain, has taken it up and is interested in two teams that have been organized and are playing in Flushing. It is asserted that the game has taken hold there and that it needs only the suggestion to carry the project of a new Association to a successful issue.

YALE WRESTLERS TRIUMPH.

Columbia Only Wins Two Bouts in Seven Contests at New Haven.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Marche 23.—The Yale wrestling team had little trouble in defeating Columbia in the Yale gymnasium this evening, winning five out of the seven bouts. A feature of the meet was the work of L. A. Dole, Yale's leading featherweight, who not only easily defeated Conant, Columbia's entry, but substituted in the welterweight class and gained a decision over Howell of Columbia on points.

The visitors were strong in the two heavyweight classes, but lamentably weak in the lightweight divisions. The summaries:

Bantam Class.—Murphy, Yale, defeated Bloom, Columbia. Time—1:56.
Featherweight Class.—L. A. Dole, Yale, defeated Conant, Columbia. Time—4:04.
Lightweight Class.—Sweeney, Yale, defeated Schirmer, Columbia. Time—3:38.
Welterweight Class.—L. A. Dole, Yale, gained decision over Howell, Columbia. Time—15:00.
Middleweight Class.—Green, Yale, gained decision over Kilroe, Columbia. Time—15:00.
Light Heavyweight Class.—Post, Columbia, defeated Kenworthy, Yale. Time—2:35.
Heavyweight Class.—Escheverria, Columbia, defeated Somers, Yale. Time—7:17.

C. C. N. Y. Spring Class Games.

The Spring inter-class games of the College of the City of New York, held yesterday afternoon in the Sixty-ninth Regiment Armory, Third Avenue and Seventh Street, resulted in a victory for the senior class, with 42 points. The sophomore class, with 21 points, was second. Summary:

50-Yard Dash, Handicap.—Won by M. Bernstein, 1906, (scratch;) H. Wallace, 1906, (3 feet,) second; H. Cohen, 1908, (4 feet,) third. Time—0:06.

Two-Mile Inter-Class Relay, Six Men.—Won by 1906 team, (Knitel, Cohen, Wallace, Pepis, Finkelstein, and Bernstein;) 1908 team, second, (Kruskal, Lehman, Stander, Corts, Mullin, and Larkin.) Time—8:19 4-5.

Princeton "Sophs" Win Track Meet.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., March 23.—The third annual indoor track meet was held this afternoon in connection with the contest for the individual championship of the gymnastic team. Some very creditable work was done in the track events, but no records were broken. The university gymnastic championship was carried off by E. W. Mecabe, 1908, of Newark, N. J. The freshman class won the meet with 28 points, and the sophomores came next with 26. The winners:

50-Yard Dash.—R. C. Runyon, '08, (10 feet.) Time—0:05 3-5.
45-Yard Hurdles.—W. M. Armstrong, '07, (scratch.)
880-Yard Run.—E. H. Kelley, '09, (20 yards.) Time—2:11 3-5.
440-Yard Run.—R. A. Gamble, '09, (5 yards.) Time—0:56.

FAST HAND TENNIS GAMES.

W. A. Burke and J. H. Haslin Win in New York A. C. Singles.

Two hotly contested matches in the second round of the hand tennis tournament at the New York Athletic Club yesterday resulted in W. A. Burke and J. H. Haslin coming through winners. Burke, with a handicap of 5 aces, defeated Dr. H. A. Conklin, 6 aces, in straight sets by the scores of 25—19, 25—23. Haslin met W. A. McCredy on even terms, as each had a handicap mark of 7 aces. It took three fast sets to decide this competition, the score being 11—25, 25—11, and 25—3.

Burke made use of a severe and hard service to advantage in his match with Dr. Conklin. The latter played a remarkably clever net game, but the fast pace of Burke forced him upon the defensive during much of the time in both sets. Dr. Conklin scored 10 aces on the second service hand of the last set by adroitly placed shots. With this long lead over Burke, the score standing 12 to 1, Dr. Conklin began to show the fatiguing effects of the play, Burke taking the final set by the close margin of 2 aces. The score:

FIRST SET.

W. A. Burke, 5 aces—

Linesmen—Rufus Davis and W. L. Stow.

Haslin took some time to steady down into his contest with McCredy, and the latter won the first set by his rapidly played volley shots and passes along the sides. Then Haslin began to rally at the net with surprising vigor, shooting the ball under the arm of his opponent in a way that made it impossible for him to get back a fair return. McCredy endeavored to check Haslin's net play by lobbing over his head, but the ball fell outside of the court lines so frequently that he contributed to his own defeat, losing the deciding set by a one-sided score. The score:

NEW CLUBS IN HOCKEY.

Boston, Philadelphia, and New Haven Players in a New League.

Aside from the interest that attaches to the visit of the Boston Athletic Association marksmen to Bay Ridge to-day, to contest a shoot with the Crescent Athletic Club team, the meeting may develop another of importance. The project of introducing hockey in Boston and other cities and organizing a league to embrace the clubs of New York City will also be informally discussed. If the plans can be consummated Boston will have a hockey team next year, and there is an excellent chance, it is said, for them appearing in the Amateur Hockey League, while Philadelphia, New Haven, and Norfolk are also mentioned.

"After to-morrow's shoot," said Chairman McDermott of the Crescents' Athletic Committee yesterday, "I shall talk over the hockey matter with the Boston men. What will come of it I do not know. There is talk of a rink and a team in New Haven, and measures are now under way to start a rink in Philadelphia. Quaker City players are anxious to secure admission to the league. Kennedy of our club is now at work on the plans for the Philadelphia rink, which I understand is assured.

"Even as far South as Norfolk they are taking up the game. When I was in Norfolk some time ago friends of mine told me of a rink contemplated there, and urged me to bring the Crescent team down there and play. It is a pretty good cry from Broadway to Norfolk, however, and I do not know how Norfolk might be regarded. There would be no difficulty in getting teams from Boston, Philadelphia, and New Haven into the league."

Mr. McDermott was asked about the rumored starting of a new rink in New York. "I have heard some talk of it, and understand it is contemplated. There will be a new rink in Brooklyn, in my opinion, next Winter. I tell you the game is taking hold, and both are bound to come."

The Crescents also contemplate taking up basket ball in the Fall, while announcement has already been made of their new yachting plans.

A REAL YACHTING NOVELTY.

C. D. Mower Designs a 21-Foot Schooner for Sound Cruising.

A decided novelty is to be seen on Long Island Sound this year—a 21-foot schooner, probably the smallest ever built. It is not a racer but a cruising boat, but it will be seen in various cruising races during the year. It is building from designs by C. D. Mower at Hensen's yard at City Island for R. W. Jackson of the Manhasset Bay Yacht Club.

The boat, which will be appropriately called Pagan, is entirely unorthodox. It is the outgrowth of a desire by Mr. Jackson for a larger craft than the 18-foot knockaboat he had last year, and is a reproduction of that boat, extended to permit of the addition of a foremast. Mr. Mower calls it a knockaboat schooner.

She will be 32 feet overall and 21 feet on the water line. She will have 8 feet beam, 5 feet draught, with no accommodations aboard other than those provided by a small cut-in cabin containing two berths and a big cockpit, being designed purely for day sailing.

Her rig will be small and will be handled from the stern, every rope leading aft to the cockpit. The dimensions of her spars are interesting. The foremast is 24 feet with a 19-foot lift, and her mainmast 30 feet with a 22-foot lift. The fore gaff is 8 feet and boom the same. The main gaff is 12 feet 6 inches and the main boom 23 feet 8 inches, while the bowsprit extends 4 feet overboard. This gives a total sail spread of 616 square feet—100 in jib, 140 in foresail, and 376 in mainsail, while she will be fitted with a big "bug" foresail like a ballooner.

Thoroughbreds on the Boulevard.

Trainers found the Coney Island Boulevard an excellent training course yesterday, and many of them sent their charges along in nice open gallops over the long, level stretches. At Gravesend the track was rather hard for speed, so most of the trainers sent their charges to the Boulevard.

James Rowe had no less than seventeen two-year-olds out, and he was one of the patrons of the public highway. All of the youngsters are looking well, and for this season of the year are going along in a manner that is entirely satisfactory, even though there has not been as much talk of their possibilities as there was of the Keene baby racers a year ago, when Kuroki, Oyama, and Nogi were attracting so much attention.

Fred Burlew kept the Bennington horses on the Gravesend track and had them out in three big sets. Of those shown, Disaster, Captain Emerick, Conville, Tiro, Mirza, Easton, Waterfall, and Waterbury attracted most attention. Little was asked of any of them, except a long, easy gallop, finishing with a smart three-furlong in about 0:44.

George Cornell had Gloversville and Wizard under saddle, and after a long gallop they were permitted to go along for an easy half mile in 0:58.

Trainer Flannagan brought out Billy Banaster, and he showed a great deal of ambition in a three-furlong breeze in 0:42½. All through the distance he was fighting for his head, and the manner of the move suggests that he will be better than useful this season.

Frank McCabe had his smart two-year-old Killowan under saddle, and after a gallop he was sent along for three furlongs in 0:42.

"Tom" Welsh had all of his out, with the exception of Ormondale. They went along smoothly, though no speed questions were asked.

Most of the stables that have designs on Benning have already shipped, and the horses still on Long Island will not be hurried in preparation until the weather and track conditions are much more favorable than they are at present.

Sydney Paget was at Sheepshead Bay yesterday looking over his horses that are in the care of A. J. Joyner. He expressed himself as being well pleased with their general condition.

Jockey Hildebrand was at Sheepshead Bay yesterday. He will leave for Benning to-morrow, where he will ride through the season of the Washington Jockey Club.

Boys, Not Teacher, at Fault.

Miss Cummings, the Principal of Evening Recreation Centre No. 158, instead of disagreeing with the decision of the referee, I. Ottenburg, Columbia University, in the dual athletic meet with Recreation Centre No. 159 on Thursday night upheld his ruling. The referee decided that E. Dempsey of No. 158 stole a yard at the start of the forty-yard race and ordered the race run a second time. It was the athletic team of No. 158 that would not abide by the decision of the referee, and not Miss Cummings that protested against it, as was at first reported. Miss Cummings was so displeased with the conduct of the athletes of No. 158 when they decided not to compete further in the meet that she voluntarily forfeited all the points that the team of her recreation centre had won.

NO NATIONAL LEAGUE FOR PUBLIC SCHOOLS

Gen. Wingate Says Organization Will Never Entertain Proposal.

PLAN IS COMPLETE SURPRISE

To Coalesce with Private Schools Would Defeat the Object Which Has Enlisted Generous Support.

There can be no absorption of the Public Schools Athletic League by a National organization, such as was suggested for the control of all schoolboy athletics by prominent educators on Thursday. Gen. George W. Wingate, President and originator of the organization, and Gustavus T. Kirby of its Executive Committee, made this unequivocal statement most emphatically yesterday when apprised of the plan projected by the Principals' Athletic Council at their meeting at the rooms of the Board of Education. If the plan proposed were put in operation, it would deprive the Public Schools Athletic League of its whole effectiveness and its identity would be hopelessly lost in the larger body.

The meeting of the Principals' Athletic Council was called only to consider the advisability of abolishing the game of football in the schools of New York, but out of it grew the more ambitious plan to control all sports. The glamour of a National organization embracing all the schools of the United States and clothed with absolute authority over the boys' activities proved too alluring to resist. The meeting confidently looked for the support of the Public Schools Athletic League.

The project came as a big surprise to Gen. Wingate and Mr. Kirby. Both are actively engaged in furthering the interests of the league. Neither had been consulted as to the formation of a National body. Nor were they even aware that such a scheme was to be launched.

When Gen. Wingate was seen at his office, 20 Nassau Street, yesterday, he said that the plan suggested was wholly new to him. All the league had done toward extending the movement to other cities throughout the country was to answer inquiries concerning its methods and its influence upon the school boys. Beyond acting with advice drawn from its experience it had allowed other cities to work out their own problems and had never considered other co-operation, let alone coalition with them.

To engage in such a project as suggested would deprive the league of the aid of those philanthropic men of wealth who had given it their support. Its object was to improve the physical condition of the boys and girls in the congested sections of New York who had no opportunity for exercise. Private schools, in which the boys represented families of large means, did not enter into the scope of its work.

It was further pointed out by Gen. Wingate that its charter and the object for which the league had received funds made any affiliation with private schools impossible. Never would the league consent to merging with others. Its field of work was confined to New York and would continue to be.

As a member of the Executive Committee Mr. Kirby said that the plan had never come before the working body of the league. The possibility of sacrificing the identity of the Public Schools Athletic League was not to be considered for a moment. Any attempt to usurp any of its functions, he declared, would be harmful and would result in the withdrawal from the league of the support of public-spirited citizens of the city which was necessary for its maintenance. He failed to see the need of a National organization and believed that the league would not consent to enter into it.

LOCAL GYMNASTS WIN.

New York University Outclasses Pennsylvania by 30 Points to 18.

The New York University gymnastic team defeated the University of Pennsylvania in the former's gymnasium at University Heights last night by the score of 30 points to 18.

Brayden, the former intercollegiate club-swinging champion, easily outclassed Ritchie of Pennsylvania, winning this event by ten points. Fernandez and Schnall, who were looked upon as winners in the side horse and horizontal bar events, met defeat by Krauss of Pennsylvania, who won both contests. Greenfield and Ketcham, for the local university, took both places in the flying rings, and when Thompson and Williamson got first and second respectively in tumbling, victory for the New Yorkers was assured. The summary:

Club Swinging.—Won by C. P. A. Brayden, New York, 78 points; G. Ritchie, Pennsylvania, 68 points, second.
Horizontal Bar.—Won by E. E. Krauss, Pennsylvania, 68.3 points; A. Schnell, New York, 67.2 points, second.
Side Horse.—Won by E. E. Krauss, Pennsylvania, 66.2 points; E. J. O'Brien, New York, 63.6 points, second.
Flying Rings.—Won by L. Greenfield, New York, 76.4 points; S. C. Ketcham, New York, 72.3 points, second.
Tumbling.—Won by W. E. Thompson, New York, 71.5 points; W. Williamson, New York, 60.7 points, second.
Parallel Bars.—Won by E. E. Krauss, Pennsylvania, 70.6 points; A. Schnell, New York, 70.3 points, second.

McGraw Favors Spring Series.

Special to The New York Times.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., March 23.—Word received here from McGraw to-day states that he favors a Spring exhibition series with the New York Americans, and there is some lively discussion in the American camp as a result. Griffith has already expressed his willingness to meet McGraw, and it is probable that terms will be made at once.

The Highlanders are in excellent condition to meet the Giants. In the game this afternoon the regulars defeated the Yanigans by a big score. Newton pitched for the regulars and Leroy for the scrubs.

To-morrow afternoon the next game with the Barons occurs. The latter think that they will be victorious, the close battle of yesterday encouraging them noticeably. Each of the Highlanders declare he is in perfect condition.

Brooklyns Defeat Augustas.

Special to The New York Times.

AUGUSTA, Ga., March 23.—The Brooklyn National League team won from the local nine this afternoon by superior all-around playing. The game was well attended, and although it was the first appearance of the locals before the public the contest was interesting. The visitors played three different pitchers in the box, but this part of the exhibition was little better than that of the home team, which played but two. These teams will play again to-morrow, following which the Brooklyns will leave for Columbia. Score:

GARAGE RATES ADVANCING.

Due to Heavy Expenses and Popularity of Motor Cars.

Storage rates for automobiles in New York garages are likely to be increased from 10 to 15 per cent. within the next two months. The New York Automobile Trade Association, which is composed of about forty of the leading dealers in the city, will discuss and act upon this question at its next meeting. Clinton R. Mabley is President, and he, as well as a majority of the members who do a garage business, believe that the time has come when it is absolutely necessary to increase rates.

One reason for this necessity is due to the expense of maintaining the palatial salesrooms and garages that have recently been erected along upper Broadway. Not only are the rents high, but the running expenses are much greater than is the case in older and less luxurious buildings. While New York's pre-eminence in this respect has been commented upon with more or less surprise and wonder by visitors from abroad, this pride will now have to be shared financially by a large number of New York automobile owners. Many of these new garages have already increased their rates, and yet they have nearly all the machines that they can care for. One benefit in many of the garages on Broadway in the upper Fifties and Sixties is that they are within easy access to the homes of the motor car owners, and little time, therefore, is lost in getting the car.

There is no rule to prohibit a dealer or garage manager from charging any price he sees fit. The trade association simply fixes a minimum rate per month, and the coming increase will be made on this basis. The present prices are, for runabouts, $20; for small tonneau cars, $22.50; for ordinary touring cars, $25; for large touring cars, $27.50, and for limousine or closed cars, $30. These prices include storage, washing, and polishing of the car. Gasoline and all repairs are extra.

"Storage rates would probably be gradually advanced this season," said the manager of one of the best patronized garages yesterday, "without the action of the Trade Association. Apart from the heavy expenses that the occupants of the new buildings have to meet, good garages are scarce. It is not always the new building that gives the best garage satisfaction. That depends upon the men, and I have seen fine machines scratched and badly handled in some of the best-looking quarters in town. Good men, who are careful of a car, are hard to find. It seems a simple matter to wash and polish a car, but it is really a skillful piece of work. Why, with our large cars, it takes a man fully three hours to wash the car, rub it dry, and then go over it with a chamois. If the work is poorly done, the varnish will soon crack and the high polish will lose its lustre. Good washers get from $14 to $16 a week, and if a car is used about every day and needs three hours of attention, that takes off quite a slice of the profits in storing a car at $25 a month. We have not raised rates yet on our old customers, but newcomers usually have to pay a slightly higher rate."

Within the next month, all of the best garages in the city will probably be filled with all the cars they can store. Already customers are sending their machines from the South, and the influx of new machines from abroad is beginning to be felt.

Last Fall, when the leading garages were crowded, many new customers were actually turned away, and the same conditions are likely to be repeated this Spring. During the Summer many cars are taken away to country homes, and then there will be more room.

Notwithstanding all the new automobile buildings that have been erected this past year, the fact remains that reliable garage facilities are not keeping pace with the increasing use of machines. The demand for room and good service is greater than the supply, and automobile owners, therefore, must not be surprised if they are asked to pay a little more for their luxurious enjoyment.

World's Swimming Record.

Special to The New York Times.

ST. LOUIS, March 23.—C. M. Daniels of the New York Athletic Club established a new world's record of 0:56 for the one-hundred-yard swim when he beat Marquand Schwarz in their match race to-night.

New York again swept the card. Trubenbach, who was substituted for Kitching in the fifty-yard event, easily disposed of Otto Schwarz.

In the relay Ruddy secured a yard lead on Evans. Crane added five yards more; Trubenbach gained as much, allowing Daniels to take things easy and cross the line fifteen yards to the good. As a finishing touch New York made six points in the polo game and whitewashed the local team.

HOPPE'S BILLIARD MATCH.

Champion Easily Disposes Of Gallagher in Final Play.

William F. Hoppe, the world's champion at eighteen-inch balk line billiards, one count in balk, won his match last night with Thomas J. Gallagher, at the former's academy, 56 West Thirtieth Street, in which the latter endeavored to play 2,000 points to 3,000 by Hoppe for six days of play. The final grand total was 3,000 points for Hoppe and 1,845 for Gallagher.

In the afternoon contest Gallagher held his position well by counting an even 300 carroms with Hoppe, in which he had the better of the averages with 13 1-23. Hoppe held the ivory balls together for fair-sized runs in the last block of points in the evening. His best effort was a cluster of 59, but he only missed counting in three of his turns at the table. Gallagher was outplayed by the champion, who is preparing for his match for the title with George Slosson next Tuesday night, and was only successful in counting 157 as his final score. The scores:

Tuthill's Bowling Record Thrown Out.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., March 23.—The record of 675 pins made last night by Walter Tuthill of Brooklyn in the tournament of the National Bowling Congress in progress here was thrown out by the Executive Committee of the congress to-day on the protest of Vandersyde of Chicago. Tuthill rolled as substitute for Carlson of Chicago, who had broken his finger and was unable to continue. Vandersyde alleged that Tuthill's entry had been improperly received, and that he was not the proper substitute in any event. The Executive Committee decided that Carlson should have engaged Stevens, who bowled for him in a previous contest, and that Tuthill's appearance and performance were therefore irregular.

THE CRIME AGAINST ARIZONA.

Speaker Cannon gained a phantom triumph on Thursday when a special rule disagreeing with the Senate amendments striking from the Statehood bill Arizona and New Mexico was got through the House and the appointment of a conference committee authorized. Before the session is ended the Speaker and the House will yield to the Senate. Oklahoma and the Indian Territory will be admitted as one State, the rights and wishes of the people of Arizona will be respected, and the pledged faith of the Government will be kept, by abandoning the attempt to coerce Arizona into a union with New Mexico. The Statehood bill, with other measures now apparently writhing in the throes of death, will doubtless be resuscitated and put through as a part of that body of legislation which the Republican majority thinks it owes to the country.

An attempt has been made by the advocates of the admission of Arizona and New Mexico as a single State to belittle the pledge made to the people of Arizona at the time Congress accorded to them the status of a Territory. The act of Feb. 24, 1863, establishing the Territorial Government, contained this provision:

> That the said Government shall be maintained and continued until such time as the people residing in said Territory shall apply for and obtain admission as a State on an equal footing with the other States.

So far from "applying for" admission to the Union unequally yoked with New Mexico, 95 per cent. of "the people residing in said Territory" oppose the Hamilton bill. They have petitioned and besought Congress not to force upon them this unjust and ruinous alliance. They point to the differences of race, to the radical and irreconcilable differences in laws, legal customs, and procedure, to the difference in industries and in ideals that would make the proposed union a source of irreconcilable discord. Arizona is a Territory of prosperity and promise. Yet the Hamilton bill provides that in the Convention assembled to draw up a Constitution for the new State New Mexico would have 66 members and Arizona only 44. The legislation, the life, and the destiny of the State would be controlled by the numerically greater population of New Mexico.

Not alone these political, social, and material considerations, but the good faith of the Government demand that the pledge of 1863 to "the people residing in said Territory" of Arizona shall be kept. At the time the act creating the Territory was passed we were in the midst of the Civil War. The people of Arizona for their own interest and safety desired a separation from New Mexico, with which they were then united. The capital was 700 miles away, and there were no courts of justice in Arizona. It was known in Washington that agents of the Confederacy were active among the people trying to persuade them to throw in their lot with the Confederate States. The Senate debate which preceded the passage of the bill was participated in by Wade, by Fessenden, by Collamer, by Saulsbury, by Trumbull, by Grimes, and by Doolittle. Yet in recent Senate debates upon the Statehood bill an effort was made by Senator Beveridge to show upon the testimony of gossip gathered by Hubert Howe Bancroft and presented in his history of Arizona that a group of adventurers actuated by no higher motive than the desire to parcel out the Territorial offices among themselves were the real moving force behind the bill creating the Territory, a bill of sufficient importance to engage the attention of the eminent Senators whose names we have just recorded. But whatever may have been the force behind the bill, the pledge, it seems to us, is binding. Senator Beveridge ridicules the pledge. He declares that it was no contract, that it is not legal, that it is not binding. If that is the case, then the declaration of the act that "there shall neither be slavery nor involuntary servitude in said Territory" is an equally impotent declaration, or would be save for the Constitutional prohibition. We agree with Senator Spooner that "the people residing in said Territory" have a right to expect Congress to keep its word. In the course of the debate Senator Spooner said:

> It is not a contract enforceable in the courts. Specific performance of it cannot be compelled in equity. It is like a treaty, in one sense. It is binding, binding as the word of a man of honor, binding in foro conscientiae, binding in honor; and if ever there was a pledge which ought to be kept, this pledge made by the Congress of the United States away back in 1863 to all the men and women and children who have gone their way from the South and from the New England States and the Middle Western States to the plains of Arizona is such.

In Arizona the opposition to the bill may be fairly described as unanimous. Apparently everybody approached upon the subject has by voice or signature expressed his repugnance to the inclusion of Arizona and New Mexico in a joint Statehood. It is evident that these considerations have failed to influence the present Speaker and his obedient servants in the House. The Senate, however, has a different sense of the obligations of Congress, and it stands firm. The fact that Oklahoma cannot be got into the Union unless the proposed coercion of Arizona is abandoned will, in the end, we think, constrain the Speaker and the House to yield to the Senate.

THE RAILWAY RASCALS.

We take time by the forelock and assume that we are authorized in the name of the shippers who are ground under the heel of the railway trust to protest against the outrage which the Inter-State Commerce Commission exposed here yesterday. We also feel authorized to demand in the name of the downtrodden shippers aforesaid that all and sundry the accomplices and abettors of the crime alleged shall be punished along with the felon railways. The crime is nothing less than accepting less than the law allows, or rather requires, to be collected from shippers. It is no extenuation that nobody alleges that the demands of the railways are extortionate. It is enough that some favored shippers are allowed to pay less than others, with the result that those who pay the full rate are discriminated against and subjected to unfair competition.

Now, who are the rascals and who the accomplices? The man who knows that he pays a less freight than his neighbor seems to us the head devil. His crime is exactly that alleged against the Standard Oil Trust and other monopolists. In morals the scale is nothing. The totals involved may be small individually, but the aggregate is enormous. Honest competition may be the life of trade, but dishonest competition is the death of fair dealing. The man who underbills his freight, who falsely describes the weight or contents of his packages, cheats his competitor and the railway alike. He is not entitled to be heard in complaint of the crime which is his. Yet it is exactly his voice which is loudest in denunciation of the robber railways. Honest men believe in honesty even where it is lacking, and rascals believe in rascality even where it is non-existent. The man who cheats in his freight bills believes that all men do the same, and is consumed by fear that the other man cheats worse than he. The remedy is to allow no man to cheat.

If the railway knows what is going on it is an accomplice, and deserves all that has been said above. If it is a party to underweighing, or underbilling, or wrong description, all that is coming to it under the law is none too much. Just as the shipper defrauds fellow-shippers, railways thus offending defraud competitor railways. And the joint act is graft against the community. The law is remedy for such crimes, but a sound public opinion is a good reinforcement. Such acts would be infrequent if their quality were recognized, and honest men boycotted those guilty of them. Among those responsible for the unsound opinion which has formed a false conscience upon the subject are all who have failed to expose it. Chief among such are the Inter-State Commerce Commissioners. They are especially charged with a duty in the premises, and to them are given the resources of the law to expose and punish. Yet they have wasted their strength and opportunity in other activities while awaiting "a combined complaint from all the great railroads entering New York" respecting frauds so numerous that they average 1,000 cases daily.

Be it remarked that it is the railways who are complainants. It is the shippers who are liable to a minimum fine of $1,000. But who ever heard of the Inter-State Commerce Commission believing ill of any shipper? For example, the Commission's formal notice of yesterday's hearing describes the shippers' fraudulent acts as a "forced rebate." That indicates a finely judicial attitude, the railways being condemned in advance of the hearing, in a case in which they are complainants, and the allegation being that they are defrauded through trick and device. A "rebate" thus secured is not "forced," and securing valuable services by false representations is not fairly described as a rebate. The hearing ought to be useful at Washington.

THE HOPE FOR CONSULAR REFORM.

We call the attention of our readers to a letter published in another column from Mr. Frank S. Gardner, Secretary of the recent Consular Reform Convention and of the New York Board of Trade and Transportation, in which he gives his reasons for a cheerful view of the situation as to Consular reform. We are bound to say that we were not unaware of the substance of the facts recited by him. If we cannot regard the actual accomplishment so far with quite the cheerful confidence he expresses, we are convinced that ultimate success will be attained if the organizations he represents push the matter with energy and determination, and we have no hesitation in promising them the cordial support of The Times "to the end."

It is possible and even probable that something substantial will be secured in the conference committee to which the bill as it passed the House must now be sent. The Senate retained in the bill presented by Senator Lodge the provision that a Consul or Consul General may be transferred from one to another place, within the classes provided for, at the discretion of the President, and the House committee struck it out. We understand that the committee was not opposed to the provision, but feared that it would excite opposition in the House which could not be overcome. If, however, this feature of the bill is insisted on by the Senate, as it is pretty sure to be, and if its acceptance is recommended by the House conferrees, it will probably pass the House. It is a matter of considerable importance. The provision gives to the President indirectly the power of virtual promotion within certain limits, and it gives to him decided help in adapting the Consular force to the real needs of the service. So far as we can see, there can be no opposition to it except on the part of friends of Consuls who have reason to fear that they would not stand the tests of selection the President would be likely to apply. The Senate conferrees are Senators Lodge, Hale, and Cullom; those of the House are Messrs. Adams, Denby, and Towne, (N. Y.) They ought to be able to "get together" on this point.

THE CONNECTING ROAD.

We assume that Mayor McClellan is not prepared to defeat altogether the project of the Pennsylvania Railroad to build a line from Bay Ridge through the Boroughs of Brooklyn and Queens to form a connection with the New Haven system. The representatives of the company and all the members of the Rapid Transit Commission, save only the Mayor, are in agreement as to the terms upon which the franchise would be granted. The Mayor says the terms are not satisfactory, and he reminds the board that his controlling veto in the Board of Estimate gives him mastery of the situation.

Mastery of situations should be exercised with great soberness of judgment. As our neighbor The Brooklyn Eagle points out, the connecting road would offer "incalculable advantages" to the Boroughs of Brooklyn and Queens. The terms of the grant are a matter of fairness and figuring. The Pennsylvania Railroad will not, and ought not, to submit to unjust exactions. The Mayor, of course, should not accept for the city an inadequate compensation. But somewhere there is between the two parties to the transaction a line of fairness and justice. There they should meet. By insistence upon unreasonable terms Mayor McClellan would endanger the carrying out of the project. We do not suppose he would care to bear the responsibility of defeating a work so beneficial to two great boroughs of the city.

JUSTICE DEUEL'S PREDICAMENT.

Justice Deuel has resigned his membership in the Bar Association rather than face the charges which had been preferred against him before that body. We are not prepared to dispute that he has been well advised.

But, after all, that is a mere episode of his case. The Bar Association has not put him on the bench. The Bar Association does not pay him a salary for administering justice according to law. His real responsibility is to the people who have put him on the bench and paid him a salary for that purpose, and by necessary inference, for setting a personal example of a law-abiding citizen which should not make his presence on the bench of justice a public scandal or a tragical farce.

There is no cause which can justify Justice Deuel's resignation of his membership in the Bar Association, without a fight to retain it, which would not still more justify, and even compel, his resignation of his Justiceship. It may perhaps be assumed that this latter resignation will swiftly follow the former. It has already been delayed too long. But, if it be promptly rendered now, the people will endeavor to forgive Justice Deuel, and also to forget him, which is the best thing that could possibly happen to him.

A 20,000-TON BATTLESHIP.

It seems that the laurels of the British battleship Dreadnought—which, by the way, has not won any—will not suffer our own naval constructors to sleep. They have designed a monster to "go" the Dreadnought "one better" in every particular. And they have prevailed upon the Secretary of the Navy to recommend the construction of this monster to Congress as an alternative to the construction of two battleships of the more usual tonnage and armament.

It is rather unfortunate for the theorists of the bureau that, just as they had finished figuring out the new monster, and proving her unmatchable, on paper, word should come that the Oregon was suffering from structural weakness induced by the frequent firing of her two thirteen-inch guns, which had undermined her keel. Two twelve or thirteen inch guns, in turrets, are the accepted armament of a battleship, and as much, it has been assumed, as she could profitably carry. The jump from that to a whole broadside of twelve-inch guns is sudden. It has no warrant in experience. And we know, since the fate of the Captain, that theoretical conclusions are unsafe practical guides in naval architecture.

It is true that we also know that a battery power superior to that of the probable enemy, ship for ship, is the tradition of our service. But we rather think that a judicious Congress would dodge both horns of Mr. Bonaparte's dilemma, and content itself with authorizing one battleship, of the kind that we and others "have proved," relying upon the superior wieldiness, both of the ship and of its main battery, either to overcome or to escape from the nightmare of a naval monster which the British Admiralty has evolved and our bureau has exaggerated.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

More Mileage or More Passes?

So great was the irritation expressed by Senator Grady in moving his amendment to the Brackett bill forbidding the giving of railway passes to anybody except railway employés that one is almost inclined to believe that the severe virtue of the companies of which so much has been heard of late has really been carried to the extent of making our statesmen pay their fares in actual money. Hitherto the declarations to that effect have seemed to be what in New England they call "agin natur" and wholly incredible. But Senator Grady spoke with what seemed to be sincere emotion when he suggested that members of the Legislature and all elected State officials should be excepted from the prohibitions of the proposed law and should be allowed to travel free by right, not by favor. "There is no reason," he said indignantly, "why our virtue in this regard should be exalted when every other State makes the railroads carry legislators on official business for the State. Every week I have to go down into my pocket for $6.20, and the State allows me $3 for mileage. Whenever I get bunkoed like that you may expect to hear a howl from me." It is perhaps not less surprising than creditable that Senator Grady's amendment provides that officials shall have no right to travel free until after they have assigned to the State their mileage allowance for the year. Some statesmen, now, would have tried, not only to force the railways to provide them with free transportation, but to retain the mileage as well, mileage having long since come to be generally recognized as a sort of "honest graft," like the widely assorted "findings" and "furnishings" that masquerade as "stationery." Is it really necessary, however, that the Senator should come down from Albany every week, either at his own expense or that of the State? The practice has certain advantages—some of them, conceivably, public advantages—but there would also be advantages if the lawmakers should stick to their work six days a week till it was done, as most of them would be apt, or at least more apt, to do if there were no passes of any kind and mileage were exactly limited to the amount spent in reaching the capital at the beginning of each session and getting back home at the end of it. An even better way, perhaps, would be to have no mileage at all, and only two passes a year for each legislator, except in the case of an extra session. That would reduce to the minimum a burden which there is not much reason for putting on the railways—a burden which somehow or other the companies make the public bear in the last analysis.

Surely a False Accusation.

Judge Parker's recent suggestion that the time had come for the South to insist on nominating one of its own sons for the Presidency is not at all well received by The Nashville American—it is, indeed, received neither graciously nor gracefully, but with rather cruel sarcasm and a raking-up of ancient history that seems to have been intended to give pain to the giver of advice. "Apparently," says the Nashville cynic, "Judge Parker is anxious for some other Democrat to have the record of meeting with greater defeat than he did. It would not be easy for a Southern Democrat to make such a record. A Southern candidate would not carry a single State outside of the South. This, however, was all Parker did, and nearly as much as the candidate before him did. But we like to feel that there is a chance to do something more, and with a Southern Democrat as the candidate we would know beforehand that he could not be elected. There is nothing to be gained by running a man simply because he is a Southerner, and there is small satisfaction in inviting one's neighbors to a Barmecide feast." This is certainly unkind, and it is almost certainly untrue, at least so far as concerns the charge that Judge Parker wants somebody to be beaten worse than he was. Sharing the peculiarities of human nature, he probably would view such a disaster with a degree of equanimity, and possibly would find in it measurable elements of consolation for too-well-remembered chagrins of his own, but that is far from a conscious, or even an unconscious, anxiety for the establishment of a "record" connected with another name. Such anxiety would not only be too ferocious for Judge Parker; it would be too ferocious for these gentle times, and is therefore utterly incredible. The Nashville cynic should take shame to himself.

Good Advice, but Not Heeded.

Passengers on the Subway, and on the elevated roads as well, should ponder the excellent suggestion of Chief Engineer Rice that they take more pains than they do so to distribute themselves through the trains that there may be about the same number of people in each car. Because of failure to do this, thousands and thousands of persons daily swing disconsolate and lamenting from straps when by the exercise of a little intelligence they could find seats in front or rear cars, and other thousands suffer unnecessary discomfort and give it to others simply because they insist on standing close to the doors instead of passing to the comparatively uncrowded centre of the cars. But there is little use in talking about this. The facts are perfectly well known to every New Yorker, but they are effectively realized and acted upon by only a few. The majority do not think of seeking the uncrowded, or least crowded, part of a station platform, and they cause innumerable delays by always entering their trains by the doors nearest to the stairways. Reform would be easy, but, apparently, it will not come for some time, if ever. Meanwhile the wise minority do, and long have done, exactly what Mr. Rice says they should do, and they have their reward. As most of the benefits of their superior thoughtfulness would be lost if everybody were as canny as they, selfishness prompts them to keep quiet about the plan they follow, and only the best of them preach the beauties of the policy by which they profit. Mr. Rice has betrayed the secret, however, and some of them are apprehensive and resentful—probably without cause. His advice will not be heeded to any great extent.

SPELLING REFORM.

Mr. Roosevelt Indorses Mr. Carnegie's Ideas, but Points a Few Difficulties.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

It is the duty of our educated and intelligent fellow-citizens to back up Mr. Carnegie in his efforts to improve "English" spelling. The method of correction is simple and wise. It is not necessary to be perfectly accurate and the changes need not be many.

Take what I have written here. It is doubtful whether it is necessary to write double "o" in "to," as there is no other way of spelling the word. "Of" need hardly be changed to "uv," few people being aware of its real pronunciation. I should retain the silent "e" at the end of words to lengthen the preceding vowel. The French do so and the effect is grateful to the eye.

The main difficulty which I have encountered is with the "oo," "ou," and "ow." They have all sorts of sounds and none distinctive. The use of the "y" before the "u" would eliminate other troubles, the change of the indefinite article, for instance. It is odd to see some educated people trying to write "an university." "Bel-i-eve," "perc-e-ive," and words of that class are easily disposed of.

In my study of the reform I have not come across any insuperable difficulty and few serious ones—that is, if the change is made just as Mr. Carnegie is making it, in a careful, moderate, and sensible way.

ROBERT B. ROOSEVELT.
New York, March 23, 1906.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

A spelling revisionist suggests "Richud Watsn Gildeh" as a new model in orthography. I draw the line on the "chud." The elision of the letter "r" shows that in order to make a truly phonetic system of spelling workable, many citizens of the town of Nee Auk must first learn to speak English, and as there is no earthly likelihood of their ever learning anything of the sort, spelling reform will have to depend entirely upon influences outside the city. They will continue to "chud" along, with their mouth-full-of-mashed-potato style of enunciation, till Father Time hangs up his scythe; also, to throw in r's where none are called for in the specifications.

AN OHIER VISITUH.
Columbus, Ohio, March 20, 1906.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Will some of the amateur philologists who urge the retention of the "good old spelling of the Bible and of Shakespeare" kindly take the trouble to ascertain what that spelling really was? A study of either authority, as first published, will certainly surprise them.

Would they seriously advocate a return to heere, sonne, lyon, ranne, maiestie, mercie, Iustice? They will find all these, and more, in the First Folio.

New York, March 23, 1906.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Somewhere I read that the words selected for simplification number only three hundred. Why not print those 300 words in big black type and let us look them squarely in the face?

SMALL TALK OF WASHINGTON.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 23.—Representative Babcock of Wisconsin, the leader of the House "insurgents" on the Statehood bill, finds some gleams of comfort in defeat. He remarked to-day to Mr. Mondell of Wyoming, also an insurgent:

"Mondell, I have reason to believe that some members of this House will be unable to collect their mileage this year."

He said it with portentous gravity and Mondell was scared.

"What do you mean?" he inquired anxiously.

"I am referring to our esteemed Republican colleagues from Missouri and Kansas," said Babcock. "Since they voted against the admission of Oklahoma they won't dare go home."

The extraordinarily high character of the debate in the Senate over the Rate bill has attracted much attention, and there has been much comment on the way the greatest lawyers in that body have gone to work on the measure and the thoroughness with which they are thrashing out every disputed legal point.

"Yes," said one prominent Senator, when something of this sort was said to him to-day, "but there's a funny side to it, too. As soon as this law is enacted and enforced there will be a test case before a Federal court, and the result of all this legal learning you talk about will be submitted to it for decision.

"By some strange fatality whenever a President—any President—appoints a Congressman to the Federal bench he never appoints one of the great lawyers; he always takes somebody whose legal attainments were more or less the topic for merriment when he was in Congress. Just go over the list of those who have been appointed in the last few years."

The Senator went over the list, naming them all.

"Now," he finished quizzically, "doesn't it strike you that there's a funny side to all this thrashing out of legal arguments here? Isn't it funny that after we have all got through and enacted our law, it should go for decision to an august tribunal presided over by a man who, when he was in Congress, would not have dared to join in the discussion and whom nobody would have listened to if he had?"

Woman—the Scapegoat.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

From the days of Adam woman has been the world's pet scapegoat, on through the ages to John of Salisbury, who quoted the so-called "Fathers" in hurling all the opprobrious epithets possible against the sex to urge men to celibacy, down to Dr. Peters, with his good intentions but illogical standing ground. That it is illogical is not his fault, but is due to the "cherche la femme" doctrine," which is as pernicious as false, and which has sent more men to the bad than any other one false doctrine.

The world will not reach its highest civilization until women are untrammeled in using the talents (mental) with which God has endowed them, or while the moral standard of the male portion of the human race remains low.

Here's to the arrival of a civilization
Which will consider,
Profanity, drunkenness, and all impurity
As reprehensible and obnoxious in men,
As they are now considered
Reprehensible and obnoxious in women.

The Janitor Is Amused.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I was greatly amused by "Flat Dweller's" opinion of the average janitor in calling him a petty tyrant.

If he is, it can be traced to the tenants themselves. One will tell him one minute to turn the steam on, it being too cold, only to have another tell him the next that it's too hot. They also pester him with a great many imaginary complaints.

What a great many people who live in flats need is a valet or a flunkey, one who will fetch and carry and do all kinds of work for little or nothing. A janitor ought to emulate the tactics of the alert waiter on the outlook for tips and work his job for all it is worth, for at best it is a servile and thankless one.

SCHOOL PROBLEMS.

Views of Dr. Shearer and Supt. Maxwell on the Training of Dullards.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Apropos of Dr. Shearer's interesting papers, does it not occur to some of the New York Board of Education that it is not more buildings, but more teachers that will relieve the congestion of undigested ideas in the class rooms of Greater New York?

Assistant teachers detailed to help deficient pupils to catch step with their grade will facilitate promotions of whole grades. If I were a millionaire I should devote many dollars to provide assistant teachers for every public school in Greater New York, at least for one year's trial.

Dr. Shearer might pass more mercifully on Mr. Maxwell's work. It is stupendous, and its results are the best that time, talent, and experience can produce, in handling very much alive and wriggling thousands of complex fractions of humanity.

Mrs. MARY LAWTON METCALFE, Director Home Garden Clubs for Public School Children.
New York, March 20, 1906.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Let me express the gratitude of not a few teachers with whom I have talked since the publication of the first article of Dr. Shearer on our defective school methods. I have long realized the necessity for a change, but scarce knew what to propose in the stead of that which I condemn, and therefore kept silent.

Here in Connecticut the School Boards are making rules that the teachers must visit pupils in their homes to get an idea as to what each individual child especially needs, and to get at the causes underlying their failure in certain studies, but in New York there has been a swing to the other extreme, and by the latest ruling of Supt. Maxwell the different classes are to be swung through a circle of teachers in order that the last vestige of individuality may be effaced and the "average boy and girl" brought into the mental vision of the half-frantic teacher. C. T. S.

Bridgeport, Conn., March 20, 1906.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

May I suggest to Dr. Shearer, through your courtesy, that he present his remedies to Supt. Maxwell now rather than after an extended exploitation of the defects of our schools in the public newspapers?

If Dr. Shearer refuses to come forward at this time with his remedial plans, but continues his diatribes in the newspapers against our schools, his motives may well be questioned. BRONX PRINCIPAL.

SHAKESPEARE PLAYED POKER.

Possibly Invented It, Suggests This Student of the Bard and the Game.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

That Shakespeare prophesied, in a subtle way, many modern inventions and conditions long before Jules Verne gave them "a local habitation and a name," seems a matter of no controversy among the readers of The Times. They have shown in recent communications that the bard of Stratford prophesied the girdling of the earth by electricity, the voice of the automobile in the land, and the twentieth-century plaint of fashion—appendicitis.

A friend of mine informs me—and brings conclusive proof—that William Shakespeare, if he did not actually invent the game of poker, had often played it. If the readers of The Times will turn to their Shakespeare and read once more they will find in "All's Well That Ends Well" that the great author, with a hand of four spades and the ruinous jack of diamonds, exclaims:

> What does this knave here?
> Get ye gone, Sirrah!

Again, having the ten, jack, king, and ace of spades, with the five of hearts breaking a royal flush, Shakespeare says:

> The Queen being absent, 'tis a needful fitness > that we adjourn this court.
> —King Henry VIII.

Then we have the full house with queens on top. The bard says:

> I know the hand—in faith 'tis a fair hand.
> —Merchant of Venice.

Again, for the seven, eight, nine, and ten of diamonds, broken with the five of clubs, Shakespeare cries:

> A diamond gone, cost me two thousand ducats!
> —Merchant of Venice.

And when the great intellect of Avon saw a spade flush broken by an ace of diamonds he impatiently shrieks:

> Out damned spot! Out, I say!
> —Macbeth.

For the three eights, with a trey and a seven-spot on the side, this is the bard's fervent prayer in "Midsummer Night's Dream":

> Yet but three? Come one more.

With four diamonds and a queen of spades he is naturally displeased, but sighs, practically:

> A lady walled about with diamonds.
> —Love's Labor's Lost.

And, finally, to the commonplace pair of kings, although not a bad hand, he pays this compliment in "Much Ado About Nothing":

> Here stood a pair of honorable men.

The case is clear. Shakespeare undoubtedly played jackpots long before poker chips were invented and when America was in its gambler's swaddling clothes. C. R.

Mr. Lane's Ice Scheme.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I notice the very liberal (?) offer of Mr. Nathan Lane, to sell some 30,000 tons of ice at $2.50 per ton, now stored upon the banks of the Hudson, near Albany. He agrees to load it on his boats at a cost of 10 cents per ton and bring it to New York at a freight of 70 cents per ton, making the cost in this city, allowing 15 per cent. for shrinkage, $3.60 per ton. He goes on to say that you could sell this ice at $4 per ton (20 cents per 100 pounds) and make a good profit.

Of course, you can hardly expect poor people to go to the piers and purchase twenty pounds of ice and carry it to their homes. It might not be full weight on arrival. Suppose one employed an ice wagon and delivery man for $4 per day, and delivered the ice in small lots of twenty pounds, the deliverer would have to make 100 deliveries for each ton, and have 80 cents profit with which to pay the $4.

But then you would be doing a great charitable work, and there is where the great profit would come in. SOBRAE.

New London, Conn., March 22, 1906.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The ice offered by Nathan Lane at $2.50 per ton, located in a house fifteen miles above Albany, would cost, allowing 40 per cent. shrinkage and 80 cents per ton for loading and unloading, not less than $5 per ton on the dock in this city.

Ice is now sold to retailers on the dock in New York at $3.

Mr. Lane's enterprise is more impressive than his benevolence. W. C. BRYANT.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Permit me to congratulate you on your editorial entitled "Gratifying Insurance Facts." It is well timed and admirable. Such articles are bound to do great good, and it is a pity that more newspapers do not follow your example in saying a good word for insurance.

CONSULAR REFORM HOPEFUL.

The Present Bill Marks a Great Step Forward.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Your Consular Service editorial to-day would undoubtedly have been less pessimistic if you had been cognizant of the following facts:

In reply to a letter which the New York Board of Trade and Transportation wrote last October to Senator Lodge, inquiring whether he intended to introduce a Consular Reform bill at this session of Congress, he stated that for seven or eight years he had succeeded in getting a consular reform bill out of the Senate committee only to die for want of support outside of Congress. We promised him if he would again introduce his bill and do his part, this board would see that support was not again lacking. We then, at once, began organization throughout the country. Now, after only five months, the bill has come out of Senate Committee, passed the Senate, and has been reported from the House Committee. True, the bill is not all that is required, but if its provisions are enacted—and there is little doubt of that—it will mark a greater step forward than has been made in twenty-five years. President Roosevelt, Secretary Root, Senator Lodge, Congressman Adams, and the National Consular Reform Convention are all agreed as to that. Had not the Board of Trade and Transportation taken the initiative and called the convention, nothing would have been accomplished. The convention organization has been made permanent, and it embraces leading men and associations from the Atlantic to the Pacific, and from the Gulf to the Lakes, and they are in earnest in their efforts to secure a thorough reform of the Consular Service. There will be no halting or turning back until full success has been achieved, and for this work we hope to have the support of The Times to the end. FRANK S. GARDNER, Secretary New York Board of Trade and Transportation; Secretary National Consular Reform Convention.

THE AMERICAN WIFE.

Mary Mortimer Maxwell's View of Her Domestic Attitude Is Seconded.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I would like to say a word in behalf of Mary Mortimer Maxwell, whose delightful articles have been appearing in the Sunday Times.

I cannot understand how a fair-minded person can take exception to anything she has said, for these articles, from the first, have been singularly just and free from prejudice. She has a bright, wholesome, kindly way of telling us our faults, and a generous, hearty way of praising our superiority. It seems to me very silly to protest against her kindly criticism. I think Miss Maxwell has hit upon one of our worst faults when she gives us her impressions regarding our husbands and wives, and the bringing up of our children.

I have lived for years in Europe and have always been struck by the superiority foreigners display in the training of their children, especially in England, and have often been ashamed of spoiled young Americans, so disrespectful to their parents and older people, whom one so often meets abroad.

All this is the result of mistaken early training by these overanxious American mothers of whom Miss Maxwell speaks. I think our American women are acknowledged to be more ignorant than those of any civilized nation about things domestic, and they show this ignorance in finding fault with Mary Mortimer Maxwell. If they knew more of the life and customs on the other side they would be better able to understand her point of view. To neglect one's husband for the children seems to me exceedingly foolish, for he needs his wife's loving care and companionship as much as they do. Did not God say in the beginning: "It is not good for man to be alone"?

A sensible woman should be able to give her husband the attention which is his right, and superintend the bringing up of her children without making herself a slave to the nursery. If the husband and father cannot afford a competent nurse for his children or servants to lighten his wife's cares, he should then turn to and share them himself, helping her in household duties and in looking after the family of little folks whenever he has a spare moment. For my part I would like to thank Miss Maxwell for her bright little articles, and I think we can learn many things by exchanging ideas with our cousins across the water. AN AMERICAN WOMAN.

That Unreconstructed Mayor.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The Mayor of Richmond says the Stars and Stripes "are all right in their way," but he recognizes only the flag of Virginia and the battle flag of the Confederacy. Then he explains that he is the son of an Irishman.

We used to have a Mayor here in New York—Van Wyck—who never let an opportunity pass for raising the green flag of the shamrock over the City Hall. Surely the Mayor of Richmond ought to be loyal enough to the old sod to add this to his other two.

I wish he had explained what he meant by saying the "Stars and Stripes are good enough in their way." Is he convinced that if they were folded three or four times they would make a nice door mat for his State House? At a meeting of ice men his remarks ought to have met with a cool reception, but your dispatch does not mention this. R. A. DIX.

New York, March 22, 1906.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I regret exceedingly that you are compelled to print news of an unreconstructed Irishman who holds the office of Mayor in the Southern City of Richmond, Va. And I am ashamed to learn that the executive in question is a MacCarthy, (MacCarthaigh, son of Cartach, commander against the Danes in A. D. 1045.)

That he should be after failing to recognize the flag that brought him out of slavery in this country and the old country as well, is only attributable to too much St. Patrick's Day and the soreness of Terry McGovern's defeat at the hands of a Dane in A. D. 1906.

"Yellow Journalism."

The following communication appears in The Springfield Republican:

To the Editor of The Republican:

I notice that The Republican, The New York Times Saturday Review of Books, and other journals credit the phrase "yellow journalism" to the author of the text and illustrations of "The Yellow Kid," a sort of idiotic nonsense that the sensational Sunday papers made use of for a little while, ten or twelve years ago.

The truth is, however, that the adjective "yellow" applied to cheap and decadent (not to say putrid) writing, was familiar sixty years ago. The piratical and "blood and thunder" novels suggested this jaundiced tint, which was made additionally appropriate by the fact that they were almost invariably issued in "yellow" paper covers.

In the yellow journals of to-day, red, green, and blue tints are much more in evidence than yellow is—the first-named color taking the lead in frequency of appearance. The subject is trivial enough, to be sure, but it deserves truthful statement if it is to be spoken of at all. JOEL BENTON.

AN EASTER TRANSITION.

Lenten Maiden, clad in gray,
What a saint you are to-day!
Prim, demure, or sweetly shy,
How your eyes turn toward the sky!

Easter Maiden, clad in white,
What an angel in my sight!
In your pew, sedate and meek,
How your eyes the hymnal seek!

May Day maiden, clad in blue,
Once again I welcome you!
What a joy once more to see
Roguish glances turned on me!

BARNARD SOPHS WIN THE HELLENIC CONTEST

They Had Zeus with Them at the Start, and Couldn't Lose.

STILL IT WAS PRETTY CLOSE

Closer Than the Score, 36 to 25, Might Indicate—There Were Feats Both Mental and Physical.

Greek met Greek yesterday at Barnard College when the freshmen tackled the sophomores in a series of good old Olympian contests. The ancient rules and regulations may not have been strictly adhered to, but enough attention was paid to them to give the sports a decidedly Hellenic atmosphere.

All the members of both classes were present, clad in beautiful white togas, those of the freshmen hemmed with green and the sophomores with blue. These are the class colors. Of course the athletes had their togas cut a little short, not too short, though. No man was admitted. Even the ingenuous orbs of John Dermody were not permitted to look upon the games yesterday. John is the property guardian, who acquired fame by being the only man at the "Dippydrome" a fortnight ago.

The college theatre was crowded with juniors and seniors and their friends yesterday afternoon when, promptly at 3:30, the sophomores marched into the stadion, as it must be called. At their head was the class standard bearer, Miss Ellen O'Gorman. She carried the 1908 flag, the existence of which was quite unknown to the freshmen, and carried consternation into their ranks.

"Oh my! just look at that," said one of the younger 1909 girls; "if we only had a banner! It is pretty tough to go into these games without a flag to wave. They didn't tell us about it, either. Never mind, wait till next year, and we'll fool 1910 the same way."

After 1908 had marched around the stage with fitting dignity the freshmen were allowed to enter. They were led by their President, Miss Ruth Childs, who took a place opposite the sophomore President, Miss Mary Osborne.

According to one of her friends, Miss Osborne spent a busy day on Thursday ransacking the mythologies for names of Greek gods. She certainly had a long list of them on tap, for when she once started to invoke their aid in the games it took her nearly half an hour to mention them all. The invocation over, both Presidents approached the sacred urn, which contained pieces of paper, on one of which "Victory" was written. They drew these out in turn, and Zeus prophesied in favor of Miss Osborne. Zeus guessed right, too, for his prophecy was verified by later results.

When these rites had been attended to the contest of the epic poets began. The poems were imitative of the style of Virgil, but dealt entirely with humorous happenings at the college since the beginning of the year. Again, there were many good-natured hits at the strictness of Miss Hearst, the Latin teacher. This was daring of the performers, as she was the chief judge of the contest.

The first prize went to Miss Florence Wolff, 1908, whose epic was considered a shade superior to that of Miss Lillian Carson, the author of the "Dippydrome" lyrics. As another 1908 girl was placed third, this started the sophomores off with a good lead, as first prize counted 5, second 3, and third 1.

Whether it was that the freshmen had not recovered from the effects of the "Dippydrome," or that the sophomores had been training more carefully for the events, 1909 seemed just to miss winning in every contest but one. They invariably got second place, but the 1908 champion always managed to do the main trick with a shade to spare. There were no walkovers, though, and, as a soph said after it was all over:

"We scored 36 points to their 25, but that doesn't really show what a close fight it was. It was a great advantage for us to have had the experience of last year's games, and I think 1909 will probably win just as easily from their opponents next year."

The high jump was the first event decided, and all the points were won by sophomores. Miss Eleanor Hudson was first, with 4 feet 11 inches, and Miss Edith Ferris and Miss Marian Wilson were second and third, respectively. Miss Hudson also won the broad jump from two freshmen, doing 10 feet 4 inches.

The wrestling bouts were run on the same principle as in the old days; that is, the winners in each round met until there was an all-conqueror. This was the most exciting contest of all, though the style of wrestling used was not the Graeco-Roman. One girl stood opposite another, and tried to throw her opponent off her balance largely by skillful turning and twisting of the wrist. The first round left three freshmen still in the ring to face one sophomore. Mrs. Elsa Jeidell was undaunted, however, and defeated all her adversaries with great ease.

The potato race, one of the departures from Greek traditions, also fell to a sophomore, Miss Grace Turnbull. She performed the usual stunts of transporting extra large potatoes in a teaspoon with rare skill, and was not flurried in the least by the cheering of the spectators.

The games ended with a tug of war, with fifteen girls on a side. The freshmen showed that they were not discouraged by their previous defeats, and wound up the day by pulling the "sophs" off their feet. As this was their only victory, it was greeted with an appropriate amount of noise, in which the other classes joined.

As a reward for the triumphant sophomores Miss Elsa Alsberg of the Barnard Faculty presented to them a silver loving cup. This was entirely unexpected, and brought forth great applause. Each class then got together and cheered all the others as a wind-up to the most successful set of Olympian games held in some centuries.

LEADING WOMAN VERY ILL.

Miss Welles of "The Clansman" Operated On for Appendicitis.

Miss Georgia Welles, leading woman in "The Clansman," at the Harlem Opera House, is in a precarious condition in the General Memorial Hospital at 106th Street and Fifth Avenue, after an operation, performed on Wednesday, for appendicitis.

Miss Welles became ill in Baltimore on Saturday night, and a physician there said she was suffering from ptomaine poisoning. She arrived at her apartments at the Melba, 102 Central Park West, Sunday afternoon. She was still ill and continued to suffer on Monday, but insisted upon playing her part of Elsie, at the Harlem Opera House, because she had no understudy.

On the advice of her sister, Mrs. Harriet Bain, she remained indoors on Tuesday, and on Wednesday her physician removed her to the Hospital for the operation. Dr. J. H. McInerny of 136 Manhattan Avenue performed the operation, but found that Miss Welles's delay of three days was likely to prove fatal. Last night it was said that her recovery was doubtful. It was reported that Miss Welles had delayed the operation because she thought she could cure her illness by the exercise of will power and by prayer. Mrs. Bain said last night that Miss Welles did believe more or less in the general principles of mental science, but that she had solicited regular medical attention just as soon as she was taken ill.

Mrs. Cole's Bequests to Charity.

The will of Mrs. Helen Ellis Cole of 147 East Thirty-sixth Street, who died on Feb. 2, was filed in the Surrogate's office yesterday. The woman's Hospital of the State of New York receives $5,000 to endow a bed for invalids, while the Sheltering Arms Society gets $3,000.

MARY ANN GIVES NOTICE.

But Not Until the Cell Door Opens to Receive Her.

Mary Ann Rooney has been cook at Miss Elizabeth Smith's boarding house, 52 West Twenty-fifth Street, for two weeks. Yesterday she took a day off, and, returning in the evening, began to smash windows and dishes.

Miss Smith, who is gentle in appearance and mild of voice, remonstrated with Mary Ann Rooney, who is large and strenuous. What Mary Ann Rooney said in reply is not recorded at the Tenderloin Station, but Mary Ann Rooney is. It took the "star boarder," a large policeman, and Miss Elizabeth Smith to induce her to leave the house.

At the station, when asked where she was born, Mary Ann roared:

"Where wud ye think, ye gossoon?"

"Married, Mary Ann?"

"G'wan. Whut d'ye s'pose? Would I be cookin' doughnuts if I had a good man?"

When it came to the charge Mary Ann burst into tears.

"It wuz the lasht cook as done the smashin', Sor. T'say it av me that's bin so savin' an kindly t'the things!"

As she was being led to a cell, however, Mary Ann stopped, turned, folded her arms, and, glaring upon Miss Elizabeth Smith, said with great dignity:

"Madame, conshider yersilf noticed."

A NEW $150,000 HUNT CLUB.

Options Obtained on 2,000 Acres of Jersey Farm Land.

Special to The New York Times.

MORRISTOWN, N. J., March 23.—It came out to-day that a land syndicate which has been purchasing farms in Bedminster Township has acquired the property in the interest of E. R. Squibb of Bernardsville and Brooklyn, who is about to organize a hunt club to be known as the Bedminster Hunt Club. Real estate agents already have options on farms aggregating more than 2,000 acres and covering a tract about one mile wide and one and a half miles long, lying between Bedminster and Peapack.

The best of the farmhouses now on the tract will be maintained as lodges. It is stated that $150,000 will be expended on the club.

FRENCH PLAYS.

The Alliance Francaise Seen in a Comedy and Burlesque.

Montgirault	M. Rene Wildenstein
Rabute	M. Perrin
Boisanfray	George A. Monod
Lord Barlington	M. Sweetland
Sosthenes	Owen Gwent
Un Commissaire de Police	M. Coupard
Mevrel	M. Tisne
Colette	Mme. Gelot
Lucienne	Mme. Girault
Laurence	Mme. J. Case
Catherine	Mme. Del Valle

With two light French comedies, one in prose and the other in verse, the Cercle Dramatique of the Alliance Française amused an audience that filled Carnegie Lyceum last evening.

"Disporu! ! !" a three-act prose comedy by Alexandre Bisson and André Sylvane, has three exclamation points after its title, one for each act. It deals with the fortunes of a wealthy Parisian bachelor, who makes love to his friends' wives by his celebrated "last-will-and-testament method." This consists in handing his adored one a will leaving her all his property, at the same time telling her that he is going to blow out his brains. His device having failed with both ladies, he leaves Paris unknown to any one with another friend and the friend's charming sister.

Some months later, when the police investigate the affairs of the missing man, the two wills come to light. The husbands of the two women named joyously claim the estate. But the bachelor's return and his marriage with his traveling companion ruin their hopes.

The audience, which was largely French and therefore responsive, laughed when they were meant to laugh and warmly applauded MM. Wildenstein, Perrin, G. A. Monod, Owen Gwent, Mmes. Gelot, Girault, Case, and the others of the cast.

"Disparu ! ! !" was preceded by "Le Baiser," a dainty one-act burlesque in verse relating the love of Pierrot for a wood fairy who flies away just as he has every reason to believe she will yield. The lines abound in delightfully funny echos of old French comedies. Mlle. Girault and Ernest Perrin made a charming impression in the two rôles.

In the audience were M. Alcide Ebray, the French Consul General; Henry Bargy, Mrs. Seth Low, Senator Frank Pavey, Mr. and Mrs. Lucien S. Bonheur, Mr. and Mrs. F. De Witt Welles, and Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Jordan.

The plays, which will be repeated to-night, are the last of the series of lectures and evening entertainments announced by the Alliance for the season of 1905-6.

HAMMERSTEIN'S CONDUCTOR.

He Engages Cleofonte Campanini of the Milan Opera.

Two pieces of news were sent by cable yesterday by Oscar Hammerstein, who recently went abroad to engage artists, conductors, and a chorus for his Manhattan Opera House in Thirty-fourth Street near Eighth Avenue.

Mr. Hammerstein cabled that he had completed arrangements by which Cleofonte Campanini will become the conductor of his orchestra. Mr. Campanini has been connected for years with the Scala Theatre at Milan, but has also been known in London, having conducted for several seasons at the Covent Garden. Several handsome offers are said to have been made to him to come to America in recent years. Mr. Conried complained recently that the operatic conductors of Europe had refused offers of large sums from the Metropolitan, so it is evident that Mr. Hammerstein has arranged for a liberal honorarium to Mr. Campanini.

Mr. Hammerstein said in his dispatch that he will give twenty weeks of opera in the Manhattan. His season will begin early in November.

OCEAN TRAVELERS.

STEINBACH CONDUCTS THE PHILHARMONIC

The Last Concerts of the Season in Carnegie Hall.

HAROLD BAUER AS SOLOIST

Brahms's Second Symphony, Elgar's Variations, and Beethoven's "Leonore" and E Flat Concerto Played.

The Philharmonic Society closes its season this week under a conductor who, according to present intentions, will be the last of its series of "guests" invited to direct its successive performances. The afternoon concert was given yesterday and will be repeated to-night. Fritz Steinbach, who came from Cologne, was a stranger to New York, but he was not unknown here as the director of more than one of the Rhenish city's musical activities, and as formerly the conductor of the famous Meiningen Orchestra, where he succeeded Hans von Bülow. In these functions he has made a name which, if not among the most distinguished of European conductors, is, nevertheless, one of distinction.

Like many of the other visiting conductors, Mr. Steinbach is a specialist. He is supposed to have in his keeping the true traditions of Brahms's music, derived from the master himself, and to speak with authority upon the music of Beethoven. He is set down as a sympathizer with the older ideals in music rather than with the newer tendencies, represented by the "young" schools of Germany, France, or Russia. His programme was made up on these lines. It was a programme that represented several of the faults inseparable from the "star" system of conductors, as they have frequently been pointed out here. Brahms and Beethoven furnished the chief matter upon it. But Brahms was represented by his second symphony, that has already been performed four or five times in New York this season, and this, with Elgar's "Enigma" variations, Beethoven's E flat piano concerto played by Harold Bauer, and his third "Leonore" overture made a programme as much too long as any that the other visiting conductors have presented.

Mr. Steinbach is a conductor of authority and of much force and energy. His motions and signs are extremely abundant, to the point of restlessness; but it is clear that they are for the orchestra, not for the audience; that they have a purpose, and that that purpose is attained in the performance. As the one-time conductor of the virtuoso Meiningen orchestra and the heir of Hans von Bülow's methods, Mr. Steinbach comes with something of the reputation of a martinet, but he showed that he was in fact a musician of sympathy and insight, as a skillful technician. He obtained from the Philharmonic players a higher degree of finish than they have sometimes put into their work, and there were a certainty and precision in the way he produced his effects that disclosed in him, not only a master of detail, but a man who can impress upon those under him the logic and the feeling of the larger proportions of a work of art.

His performance of Brahms's symphony was in many respects a singularly fine one. It was the product of a perfectly clear and well-ordered conception, in which every detail was adjusted with a view to its place in the whole. It was a reading that emphasized the lyric quality, especially of the first movement.

Mr. Steinbach took this at a tempo slower than that to which we are accustomed. The allegretto grazioso was also taken at a measured tempo. He conceives the work with warmth and poetical feeling, undoubtedly. He brought out the melodic line with a true appreciation of where and what it was, and what it meant. His modeling of the phrase was plastic, and he did not hesitate to accentuate it with incessant modifications of tempo and skillful nuance of all sorts. Withal there were life and spirit in it.

Elgar's variations are difficult and exacting music, and the skill with which they were played, the approach to brilliancy in several of them, reflected credit alike on the conductor and the men. The music does not gain, as a whole, upon repeated hearing; there are a few of the variations that are extremely charming, as the one entitled "Dorabella," and in most of them the ingenuity and skill with which the music is made keeps the attention. But too much of the music is made, too little of it springs irresistibly from the heart and soul of the musician.

In the "Leonore" overture Mr. Steinbach achieved a strong and muscular interpretation. The climaxes were highly emphasized, highly colored, and the whole had a truly dramatic feeling. Mr. Bauer's playing of the E flat concerto was truly artistic, somewhat reserved in feeling, but a most sincere and devoted reproduction of the spirit of the work. It was this that dominated his playing and never the desire for personal display. There was no attempt at making brilliant the technical side of it, in fact. Mr. Baur has played technically with greater brilliancy and accuracy—but there was the artist's devotion to the inner significance of a great work of art. Only the accompaniment was rather poorly and negligently played.

There seemed to be an interest in Mr. Steinbach's appearance that extended considerably beyond New York. It extended, indeed, to Boston, and the impressions that were gained of the Cologne conductor's work will be carried in several ways to the home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, lacking a conductor after this season.

JOHNSTONE BENNETT ILL.

The Actress is Said to be Dying of Tuberculosis.

Special to The New York Times.

BLOOMFIELD, N. J., March 23.—Johnstone Bennett, the actress, is critically ill at the home of Frank Pettit, in Myrtle Avenue, Bloomfield, and her death is said to be a question of only a few days.

Miss Bennett began her stage career in 1887 at the Madison Square Theatre with Richard Mansfield, in "Monsieur." She remained with him for some time and was then engaged by Charles Frohman, opening in "All the Comforts of Home." Miss Bennett made her greatest hit in "Jane," which was produced in 1890. Later she became connected with the company playing "The Amazons," under Mr. Frohman. For three years Miss Bennett was the star in "The Female Drummer," and was at the head of the "Empire Vaudevillians" for one year.

Two years ago, while appearing in vaudeville, at Denver, the actress caught a severe cold, which developed into tuberculosis.

MANSFIELD PLAYS "SHYLOCK"

Revival of "The Merchant of Venice" at the New Amsterdam.

Richard Mansfield's Shylock, largely altered from its original design and mellowed with the passing of time, is one of the actor's finest rôles, and its repetition at the New Amsterdam last night provided a felicitous occasion.

In the revival Arthur Forrest appeared to excellent advantage as Bassanio, Leslie Kenyon was the Gratiano, and A. G. Andrews, as heretofore, the Launcelot Gobbo. Miss Florence Rockwell played Portia.

To-night "A Parisian Romance" is the bill.

TO SAVE NIAGARA FALLS.

Bills to Annul Charters of Six Companies—Strike at L'Hommedieu.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 23.—Legislation has just been introduced by Assemblyman Foelker of Kings which is directed against all the Niagara power companies. The charters of six would be annulled by the Foelker bills if enacted into law. Incidentally these bills jar Senator L'Hommedieu. This session he introduced bills annulling the charters of the four companies, leaving the field clear for the Niagara, Lockport, and Ontario Power Company and its subsidiary company. Foelker, to test the sincerity of the Senator's assertion that he was a friend of the Falls, and to make the preservation of the Falls something more than a legislative fiction, has now put forth this batch of bills. The power companies feel some alarm at these bills, owing to the feeling in the Legislature against corporations in general.

YERKES OFFER TO CHICAGO.

Heirs Would Sell $6,750,000 Worth of Traction Securities.

CHICAGO, March 23.—All the traction securities of the estate of the late Charles T. Yerkes, amounting to $6,750,000, are said to have been placed at the disposal of the City of Chicago yesterday during a conference between Mayor Dunne and Attorney Knight, the latter representing the heirs to the Yerkes estate. The heirs are reported to be anxious to withdraw from the Chicago traction muddle and willing to take Mueller certificates in full payment.

The last Legislature at the instance of Senator Mueller passed a bill providing that the City of Chicago might issue certificates to the aggregate value of $75,000,000 for the purchase of existing traction lines.

The Mayor declined to-day to discuss the proposition further than to say that Mr. Knight had offered suggestions which might aid in the general solution of the problem of taking over the lines for municipal ownership.

CREDITORS PRESS SHIELDS.

Want the Subway Contractor Declared Personally Bankrupt.

Special to The New York Times.

TRENTON, March 23.—Creditors of John Shields, a sub-contractor for the Rapid Transit Subway in New York, moved to-day to have him declared personally a bankrupt. Failure of the bankruptcy action against the John Shields Construction Company, which the Judge decided did not come within the Bankruptcy act, caused to-day's step. Shields is ordered to answer on April 2.

STARR-HAMMOND WEDDING.

Plans Completed for Ceremony Which Takes Place on April 17.

Plans for the wedding of Miss Margaret Hammond and Louis Starr, second, of Philadelphia have been completed. Miss Hammond, who is a daughter of the late Gen. John H. Hammond of St. Paul, Minn., will be married to Mr. Starr on April 17 at the residence of her brother, John Henry Hammond, who married Miss Emily Vanderbilt Sloane, 9 East Ninety-first Street.

The maid of honor is to be Miss Elizabeth Starr, a sister of Mr. Starr, and the bridesmaids are to be the Misses Anita Peabody, Ione Page, Clare Ellsworth, and Mercer Atterbury.

Mr. Starr's best man will be his brother, Dillwyn P. Starr, and the ushers are to be Nathaniel F. Emmons, Francis W. Sargent, Jr., and George Whitney, all of Boston, and Robert L. Bacon, James J. Higginson, James Watson Webb, and Malcolm D. Sloane, all of New York, and Philip Boyer of Philadelphia.

The ceremony will take place at 4 o'clock, and relatives and intimate friends only will be asked to it.

WHAT IS DOING IN SOCIETY.

The Misses Anna and Amelia Stephens of 128 East Thirty-fifth Street were hostesses yesterday at a large bridge party. In the evening Miss Marguerite Pierson gave a dinner for Miss Annie Lyman of Boston.

⁂

Mrs. Charles H. Steinway and Mrs. Frederick Hamlin gave an informal domino dance last night at Steinway Hall. It was preceded by a costume dinner. The guests, who were chiefly of the artistic set in New York, went in all sorts of costumes save regulation evening dress. The invitations in verse, by Richard Butler Glaenzer, were as follows:

> Come you clad in fancy dress,
> As knight or maiden in distress,
> As Puck or pirate, prince or pig,
> With shaven head or powdered wig,
> In clothes of shopgirl, thug, or clown;
> But not dress suit or evening gown.

⁂

Mrs. Birkbeck, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Shaw, is visiting her parents at their Staten Island home. Mrs. Birkbeck's first husband was George Lawrence Myers, who died several years ago. A few months ago she married abroad Major Birkbeck of the British Army, and she came over from England a few weeks ago.

⁂

On Saturday, March 31, Mrs. Charles B. Alexander will throw open her house in West Fifty-eighth Street for a children's bazaar for charity. Young misses and masters, the daughters and sons of well-known society women, will have charge of tables covered with fancy and useful articles to sell for charity.

⁂

Mrs. Seth Low, Mrs. Thomas H. Whitney, Mrs. Dudley Phelps, Mrs. Charles Sprague Smith, Mrs. John R. Drexel, Mrs. Morris K. Jesup, Mrs. Edward de la Poer, Mrs. H. H. Flagler, Mrs. W. M. Barnum, Mrs. H. H. Wood, Mrs. S. Osgood Pell, Mrs. James A. Wright, Mrs. John Henry Martin, Mrs. James Speyer, Mrs. Russell Sage, Mrs. Richard M. Hunt, Mrs. H. Archibald Pell, Mrs. Donald McLean, Mrs. Frederick Pearson, Mrs. John H. Judge, Mrs. Robert Olyphant, and Mrs. William E. Iselin are among the patronesses for the Waldorf-Astoria series of Darrach recitals, which begin this morning at 11 with a presentation of "The Merchant of Venice." Next Saturday Mr. Darrach gives "Julius Caesar," closing his course on April 7 with "Twelfth Night."

Miss Stoddard to Marry.

The engagement is announced of Miss Margaret E. Stoddard, daughter of William O. Stoddard, the author, to Harold S. Buttenheim of this city.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

Richard Mansfield has decided to play a fourth week at the New Amsterdam Theatre, beginning April 9. His schedule of plays will be: Monday, "The Scarlet Letter"; Tuesday, "A Parisian Romance"; Wednesday, "The Merchant of Venice"; Thursday, "Beau Brummel"; Friday, "King Richard III."; Saturday matinee, "The Merchant of Venice," and Saturday evening, an act from each of "Ivan the Terrible," "Beau Brummel," "King Richard III.," "The Scarlet Letter," and "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde."

The cast for Sydney Rosenfeld's latest play, "The Octopus," to be produced in Washington on April 16, includes J. H. Gilmour, Thomas A. Wise, Charlotte Walker, Wallace Eddinger, Lizzie Hudson Collier, M. L. Alsop, and Kathryn Browne.

Fritzi Scheff at her special matinee of "Mlle. Modiste" at the Knickerbocker Theatre on Tuesday, will have as her guests a hundred girls employed in the shops which supplied the hats and gowns for the opera.

Our City's First School For Crippled Children.

For two years the Board of Education has conducted a successful school for crippled children at Sea Breeze Hospital, Coney Island. The little patients are proud of their record for regular attendance, even those strapped to frames, whom the sympathetic kindergartner convinces that they are attending school out on their open, breezy piazza.

If you are fond of crippled children, let us tell you of our Snow Babies' happy out-of-door life, night and day—their proof that sea air would cure their 4,000 fellow-victims in New York, and their plea for a permanent seaside hospital.

CAN REACH NORTH POLE, SAYS WALTER WELLMAN

Tells New York Motor Club About His Big Airship.

WILL CARRY AUTO SLEDGES

Arctic Balloon Will Hold Five Persons and Lift 16,000 Pounds—How He Hopes to Get Back.

Walter Wellman, who is soon to make a dash for the North Pole in the largest dirigible balloon that has ever been designed, was the guest of honor last night of the New York Motor Club at its smoker held in the Hotel Wellington, Seventh Avenue and Fifty-fifth Street. Mr. Wellman recently returned from Paris, where he made arrangements with Louis Godard, the builder of the Lebaudy airship and other famous balloons, to construct the 160-foot airship with which he will try to discover the pole, starting from Spitzbergen. He related for the first time some of the details and hopes of his coming Arctic journey.

"I am no enthusiast, no hero," said Mr. Wellman, after his introduction by R. H. Johnston, "and I have no desire to reach the North Pole without a return ticket and a chance to use it. It was three years ago that I conceived the idea of getting to the pole through the air. I studied the problem of the gas-inflated balloon, but although I was younger and more reckless, I came to the conclusion that it was not for mine. Then Andree came along and used it, with the result that he and his brave companions lost their lives, being at the mercy of every gust of wind in the Arctic regions.

"My two previous trips into the arctic zone have made me well acquainted with the conditions and the customary winds. Taking zero as the most favorable state of the winds and 100 as the maximum of the most difficult, I have figured that, according to the law of averages, I ought not to encounter anything worse than an average of 75. With that it is possible to reach the pole. With 60 it is still easier, and with 50 or less it is all right.

"My airship has been designed on a different principle from all preceding ships of this character. It is not built for speed. It is to make from 12 to 15 statute miles an hour, and 5,500 pounds of gasoline will be carried as fuel. This will drive the ship for a distance of 1,760 miles, requiring about 140 hours. The distance from Spitzbergen to the pole is estimated at 1,200 miles, so I will be provided with 50 per cent. more carrying force than is absolutely necessary.

"The balloon will be propelled by two motors, one of 50 horse power and the other of 25 horse power. Even the best motors fail, and I would not risk the lives of my four companions with only one engine. The carrying capacity of the balloon will be 16,000 pounds. It will be ten times larger than the famous Santos Dumont ship, and nearly twice as large as the Lebaudy airship.

"You perhaps may ask how I am going to get back, as the airship will not carry enough fuel to come entirely home by it. Well, I am now having built in Paris and America two experimental motor sledges. Each will weigh from 210 to 215 pounds. They will be equipped with small engines, and will only carry the two persons operating them. One is being tested in Europe this week, and the other, in this country, will be tried next week. If they succeed I will take, perhaps, three with me.

"One difficulty is in going from a given to a mathematical point, but having arrived at the north pole we have this advantage—all the winds blow to the south. Sailing with the winds, our ship might be carried to Siberia, and, although I have no love for that country, it would mean safety. We might reach Greenland, or Franz Josef Land, where I left a large stock of supplies on my last trip. Anywhere on land is safety, and with these motor sledges we can reach civilization. If they fail, I shall have to use the arctic dog sledge.

"I accept the entire responsibility if any mistake occurs. The best French aeronauts and students have agreed that the plan is feasible, but many doubt its success. The final decision to adopt this method was mine, and any blame will attach to no one but myself. No one knows of how much or of how little value the discovery of the north pole will be. One opinion is as good as another. The scientific spirit is to go and find out and discuss it afterward, and that is all that I hope to do."

THE WEATHER.

WASHINGTON, March 23.—An area of high pressure of great magnitude covers the lake region and New England, its influence extending southward and eastward over a vast area. West of the Rocky Mountains pressure is low, with the centre of the lowest in North Pacific Coast States.

Winds along the New England coast will be light north; along the Middle Atlantic Coast light north; on the South Atlantic Coast fresh to brisk northeast; on the East Gulf Coast light, and variable; on the West Gulf Coast fresh southeast to south, and on Lake Michigan fresh northeast.

Steamers departing Saturday for European ports will have light north winds and fair weather to the Grand Banks.

FORECAST FOR TO-DAY AND SUNDAY.

Eastern New York—Fair Saturday and Sunday, followed by snow Sunday afternoon or night in south portion, fresh west winds, becoming northeast.

New Jersey, Eastern Pennsylvania, and Delaware—Fair Saturday; Sunday, snow or rain, fresh north to northeast winds.

New England—Fair Saturday and Sunday, fresh west winds.

The temperature record for the twenty-four hours ended at midnight, taken from the thermometer at the local office of the United States Weather Bureau, is as follows:

	1905.	1906.		1905.	1906.
3 A. M.	37	27	3 P. M.	44	25

RAS MAKONNEN DEAD.

Commanded the Abyssinian Army Which Defeated the Italians.

JIBUTI, March 23.—Ras Makonnen, Governor of Harrar, is dead.

Next to the Negus, Ras Makonnen was the most powerful and celebrated man in Abyssinia.

It was he who commanded the Abyssinian army which defeated the Italians at the Battle of Adowa in 1896. He distinguished himself at the battle not only by his victorious strategy, but by his personal bravery. He fought in the front rank and was wounded by a bullet which passed through his arm. The shock nearly threw him from the saddle, and an Italian officer was just about to shoot him when the Ras's son dashed to his father's rescue and shot the Italian dead.

The Ras attended the coronation of King Edward as the envoy of the Negus, and none among the many famous foreigners in London at that time attracted more attention.

Makonnen was a cousin of the Negus and was regarded as his probable successor. Throughout his life he enjoyed the complete confidence of Emperor Menelek.

GEN. SANGUILY IS DEAD.

Took Part in Two Cuban Revolts—Captured by Spaniards in 1897.

HAVANA, March 23.—Gen. Julio Sanguily died at his home here to-day. He gained his military title in the Cuban insurrection of 1868, rising from the ranks by notable bravery and energy. He also took part in the last Cuban revolution, but in 1897 he was captured by the Spaniards, who tried and sentenced him to imprisonment for life. Sanguily, however, claimed American citizenship, and through the intervention of the Government at Washington was released.

For a time Sanguily was in bad repute with the insurgents, the allegation being made that he was in the pay of the Spanish Government and had revealed to it the plans of the Cuban leaders. He admitted that for a long time prior to the beginning of the last insurrection he was regularly employed in the Spanish secret service, and that the connection continued for some time after the revolution began, but asserted that this later connection was only maintained in order that he might aid the Cuban cause.

DEATH LIST OF A DAY.

John D. Miner.

John D. Miner, 72 years old, well known in insurance circles in this city and the East, died suddenly at his home, 66 West 131st Street, yesterday of heart disease. He was born in Scranton, Penn., and as a young man learned shipbuilding. For many years he was connected with the Pacific Steam Navigation Company, and was sent to Shanghai to construct several vessels. He also built several of the old wooden pilotboats that cruised off Sandy Hook before steam pilotboats were thought of.

In later years he became connected with the Board of Fire Underwriters, doing much of their appraising work, and continued in that employment up to the time of his death. Among the many organizations of which he was a member were the Harlem Club, the Metropolitan Museum of Art, the Mechanics and Tradesmen's Society, and the Building Trades Club. A wife, two sons, and three daughters survive him. Funeral services will be held at All Saints' Church, 129th Street and Madison Avenue, Monday at 10 A. M. The burial will be in Woodlawn.

Funeral of Gen. John M. Thayer.

LINCOLN, Neb., March 23.—The body of Gen. John M. Thayer, ex-Governor and ex-United States Senator, was to-day removed from the Capitol, where it had rested in state for twenty-four hours, to St. Paul's Methodist Episcopal Church, and funeral services, participated in by all the military organizations of the State, were there conducted. From the church to the cemetery there was an imposing procession of civic and military societies.

The Rev. Christopher S. Williams.

The Rev. Christopher S. Williams, pastor of the Windsor Terrace Methodist Episcopal Church, died on Thursday at his home, 261 Linden Boulevard, Brooklyn. Mr. Williams was born in Ireland sixty-five years ago, and was educated for the ministry at Evanston, Ill. A widow, three sons, and three daughters survive him. The funeral services will be held to-morrow afternoon at 1 o'clock at the church.

Horace M. Emerson.

Horace M. Emerson, general traffic manager of the Atlantic Coast Line Railroad Company, died last night at his home in Wilmington, N. C., of heart trouble. He was born in Preble County, Ohio, and was 47 years old. He had been continuously in the service of the Atlantic Coast Line for thirty years.

Obituary Notes.

Mrs. AMELIA GRABERT, while preparing yesterday to return to her home at Point Pleasant, N. J., after a visit to her son, Henry E. Grabert of 903 Avenue D, Bayonne, was taken ill with heart trouble and died in a few minutes. She was 75 years old.

ROBERT M. ROGERS, United States Army, retired, died at Portland, Me., yesterday. He was born in Georgia, and was 60 years old. He was graduated from West Point in 1867, and served through the Spanish War.

FRANK E. MOORES, Mayor of Omaha, died at his home in Omaha yesterday. He was 66 years old. He was serving the last year of his third term as Mayor. President Zimman of the City Council will finish out the term as Mayor.

JOHN J. CAMPBELL, who died on Thursday at his home, 114 St. Mark's Avenue, Brooklyn, was for many years in business in Newburg, his native place, as a tailor. He was 76 years old and had lived retired for sixteen years. A son and two daughters survive him.

Dr. JESSIE M. McGREGOR, a noted Scotch physician, died at her home in this city last night of cerebral spinal meningitis. She ranked among the best of women physicians, and won distinction at Edinburgh, Leipsic, and Paris, where she pursued her studies. She was said to be the possessor of the highest degree ever given to a woman physician.

THE FINANCIAL MARKETS

Stocks Strong; Call Money Rates, 3@4¾ Per Cent.

Reading Feature of the Trading—Estimated Cash Gain by Banks.

Heavy purchases of Reading shares, stimulating speculative activity in other directions, was the feature of yesterday's stock market, as it was of Thursday's, and while there was nothing in such meagre news as came to light during the day to explain this movement, which, in fact, seemed largely due to professional initiative, it was, nevertheless, successful in drawing up after it the general list of securities, which at the close rested well above the level of the previous night. Such advices as came to hand, before the close of business, from the conference under way at Indianapolis, told only of the beginning of another session between the interests concerned, leaving as the real influence of the day from this situation an apparent deadlock between the miners and operators of Western Pennsylvania on the one hand, and the operators in the Ohio, Indiana, and Illinois fields on the other hand. Some cheer was derived from the possibility that even if a strike occurred in the last-named fields, the production of the Pennsylvania mines would be undisturbed. In the meantime soft coal prices at the chief manufacturing centres are rising sharply. No developments of any kind occurred in the anthracite situation, in which, of course, the Reading Company is directly interested. side of Reading, active issues of the day's trading, which was on a slightly larger scale than that of Thursday, were Union Pacific, Southern Pacific, St Paul, and Canadian Pacific in the railroad list, all of these issues gaining substantially, while in the industrial list Amalgamated Copper rose fractionally, and the Steel shares were once again heavy throughout. Chicago & Northwestern repeated in part its remarkable rise of mid-week, advancing in all 4⅛ points.

Preliminary estimates of the week's currency movements foreshadowed a gain of from $500,000 to $1,500,000 in cash. On the direct movement to the interior, it is interesting to note that the banks have increased to some extent the gain made by them a week ago, while to the Sub-Treasury the loss has been $836,000, or about half the drain to the Government in the former week. These changes, together with the contraction of business on the Stock Exchange, should, without the intervention of other and unknown factors, lead to very little change in the reserve item to be reported by the banks to-day. The foreign exchange market was weak during a large part of the day, but rallied at the close, an interesting feature of the situation here being the understanding that Paris bankers intimated their willingness yesterday to part with gold on a basis very nearly acceptable to our bankers. The markets abroad were dull, the reported death of the Emperor of Austria possessing considerable influence at London and Paris.

PARIS OFFERING GOLD TO BANKS IN THIS CITY

Terms Are Such That Early Importations Are Probable.

SIGN OF EUROPEAN PEACE

French Hopeful as to Morocco and Russia—London and Berlin Increasing Credits Here.

A large amount of gold was offered yesterday by Paris to bankers in this city believed to be interested in the import of gold to New York. The gold was offered at a price only slightly above that which would make importations profitable. The banker who was authority for this statement added that negotiations in progress might lead to the engagement of gold in Paris to be brought to this country.

The fact that Paris was disposed to permit a substantial shipment of gold to New York was regarded as highly significant of that market's attitude toward a much freer movement of gold to this country than has yet occurred. The opinion was expressed that French bankers would not offer us gold if any apprehension was felt in Paris in regard to future developments, either political or financial.

Willingness on the part of French bankers to aid in any way in an outflow of gold to this country, it was thought, meant that all apprehension had passed in regard to the outcome of the Algeciras Conference over the Moroccan situation and that confidence was felt that the financial position of Russia would not cause embarrassment to the Paris market.

In the last two weeks $2,600,000 gold has been obtained abroad for import to this country. All this was engaged by the National City Bank, about half being taken in London and the balance in Berlin. The first shipment of about $900,000 from London has been received, and the arrival of about $450,000 more from the same city is expected to-day. The engagement made in Berlin amounted to about $1,250,000, which will reach this city probably by the middle of next week.

The gold imported by the National City Bank from Berlin, it was said yesterday, might represent the payment of a portion of the Disconto Gesellschaft's obligations to this market, arising from its participation in several recent issues of securities, the chief of which was the recent bond issue of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company.

Foreign exchange moved lower yesterday morning, demand sterling declining about 20 points, to 4.8535. A recovery occurred in the afternoon, however, and before the close 4.8560 was being bid for demand sterling bills for next Tuesday's steamship. It is expected, in some quarters, that the exchange market will recede during the coming week owing to higher interest rates at this centre due to preparations for the April 1 disbursements, which will reach a large total. It is believed that some New York bankers are counting on such a movement in the exchange market as offering an opportunity for the engagement abroad of a large amount of gold. The import of a substantial sum from the European markets would greatly strengthen the reserves of the New York City banks and result probably in much greater ease in the local money market.

The offer of gold from Paris in addition to promising the possibility of an early increase in the cash holdings of New York City banks is significant in other ways. It indicates apparently a willingness on the part of the Paris market to increase its advances to New York bankers, so that, even after a recovery in exchange which might prevent further gold imports, finance bills could be drawn on the Paris market. This would increase largely the credit available in this market and relieve the banks of this city of a portion of the loans now carried by them.

The arrival of a substantial amount of gold from abroad in the near future probably would be coincident with cash gains from the interior. The banks of this city usually increase their cash holdings substantially during the month of April owing to the return of funds from other parts of the country. This return movement from the interior is already in progress. Estimates of the cash gained by the banks within the last week varied yesterday from $500,000 to about $1,200,000.

On Sub-Treasury operations proper the banks have lost this week $1,680,600, but this was more than offset by the receipt of new gold amounting to $1,644,600 and the gain from the interior, estimates of which varied from $600,000 to about $1,200,000. The total transfers to the interior through the Sub-Treasury during the week amounted to $800,000, of which $600,000 was sent to San Francisco and $200,000 to Cincinnati. The loss of more than $1,600,000 on Sub-Treasury operations proper was due largely to transfers of internal revenue collections and payments made on account of the 5 per cent. National banknote redemption fund.

GREAT WESTERN PROSPECTS.

Dividends on "A" Preferred to be Maintained—Improvement Plans.

The Chicago Great Western Railway, which in the fiscal year resumed payment of a 2½ per cent. dividend on its "A" preferred stock, probably will continue this rate, according to the report of Howard Gilliat, Chairman of the Finance Committee. The report read at the recent stockholders' meeting in London has just reached the transfer office of the company by mail.

It shows an increase in net earnings last year of $367,658, notwithstanding a decrease of $118,998 in gross earnings. After payment of the "A" dividend there remains a surplus of $395,810, to which the addition of the earnings of the proprietary lines, $684,189, brings the total surplus up to $1,079,999.

The Directors have authorized the immediate purchase of 1,000 freight cars, and to pay for them and to redeem some outstanding notes which fall due in the year the Directors have authorized the issue of $1,000,000 five-year notes. The double-tracking of the line between Oelwein, Iowa, and Chicago was authorized, but no method of financing was provided, as the work is not to be started until 1907.

DAYTON NOTE DEPOSIT ENDS.

Protective Committee Refuses to Extend Time—A Majority Deposited.

The Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton Noteholders' Protective Committee yesterday decided not to extend time for deposit of notes. Yesterday was the last day of the extended time.

A majority of the $15,000,000 notes has been deposited with the Central Trust Company for the committee headed by James N. Wallace. Yesterday's meeting discussed other plans only informally.

IMPORTS OF DRY GOODS.

Imports of dry goods at the Port of New York for the week were valued at $3,476,534, as against $3,477,992 for the previous week and $2,905,913 for the corresponding week last year. The value of the amount marketed was $3,635,942, as against $3,396,158 for the previous week, and $2,919,493 for the corresponding week last year.

IRON AND STEEL NOTES.

The Coal Situation Blamed for Holding Up Pig Iron Trade.

The coal situation is blamed in trade reports for the lack of activity in pig iron, the theory being that sellers refuse concessions in the hope that the passing of danger will mean renewed buying and that consumers refuse to buy in the belief that the strike is bound to come. Rogers, Brown & Co. say of the iron trade generally:

"Orders are coming forward freely, especially in the heavier lines. A large tonnage of rails was placed during the week, and heavy orders for pipe are pending.

"Recent transactions in pig iron are confined in the main to lots of moderate size for early delivery or to fill special requirements. Leading furnaces are adhering closely to schedule prices, in view of the sharp advance in cost which will be felt when the season's shipments of ore arrive."

COPPER MARKET REPORTS.

London quotations on copper metal made further gains yesterday, and it is the opinion of trade authorities that sensational increases may be looked for. It is pointed out that there are only a few thousand tons of the metal in Europe available for immediate delivery, a condition which leaves the market at the mercy of manipulators who might put the price where they pleased until new supplies could be obtained from America.

The closing prices in London were as follows: Spot, £82 10s, a gain of 10s over Thursday's price, and £79 10s for futures, unchanged from the price of the previous day.

The closing prices of copper and other metals on the New York Metal Exchange yesterday compare as follows with those of the previous day:

WESTERN PACIFIC PURCHASE.

$4,500,000 Paid for Site for a Terminal in San Francisco.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 23.—The Western Pacific has concluded the purchase of extensive terminal facilities in this city, in the vicinity of Ninth and Folsom Streets, where it will erect a passenger and freight terminal for its branch line, which is to extend down to San José and other towns.

The price paid for the property is said to be $4,500,000. It is estimated it will cost an extra $3,000,000 to put the terminal in proper shape.

LONDON STOCK MARKET.

LONDON, March 23.—Money was in increased demand in the market to-day. Discounts inclined downward, owing to the more favorable foreign exchanges.

The tone on the Stock Exchange generally was cheerful, but business was inanimate. Consols were steady.

Americans opened firm, with Reading the feature. Later, prices were irregular and trading was inactive. The tone afterward improved on bear covering, and prices closed firm, with Southern Pacific the feature.

Foreigners were quiet. Japanese were firmer.

Kaffirs were dull, operators being occupied with the carry-over. The market closed with a better tendency.

Japanese imperial 6s of 1904 were quoted at 104.

Bar silver steady at 30d per ounce.

Gold premiums are quoted as follows: Madrid, 15; Lisbon, 4.50.

Money, 3¾@4 per cent.

Discount rates: Short bills, 3⅝ per cent.; three months' bills, 3½@3 9-16 per cent.

Trading on the Curb Steadier and More Active.

Manhattan Transit Sells 22,000 Shares —Coppers Make a Better Market.

Curb trading was in somewhat greater volume yesterday, and there was a firmer tone to the market. Mining shares practically monopolized attention, however, and the industrial list, except for Manhattan Transit, which continued the spurt begun early in the week, was extremely dull. Manhattan Transit sold 22,000 shares between 4¾ and 5. United Copper had another day of comparative inactivity, but showed greater steadiness under the light selling than has been seen in this stock in months. In transactions of 5,700 shares the price stayed between 66 and 66⅛, closing at the former figure.

FINANCIAL NOTES.

W. F. Dunspaugh has been elected to the Directorate of the American Caramel Company to succeed Frank Haviland. These officers have been elected: President—D. F. Lafean; Vice President—W. P. Rice; Secretary and Treasurer—Stewart B. Lafean.

The Mechanics' Bank of Brooklyn intends to open another branch, the fifth it has established, at 1,365 Broadway, Brooklyn.

The capital stock of the American Bank Note Company has been stricken from the unlisted department of the Stock Exchange.

Await Traction Decision's Text.

The text of the decision of the United States Supreme Court in the Chicago Union Traction case has not reached the attorneys for the company in this city and is not expected until the court reconvenes in April. Until the text is received plans for asking a rehearing are held in abeyance.

Morgan & Co. Buy $10,000,000 Bonds.

The New York, Chicago & St. Louis Railroad, one of the roads of the New York Central system, has sold to J. P. Morgan & Co. $10,000,000 4 per cent. debenture bonds due in 1931. The proceeds will be used for improvements, for new equipment, and general purposes.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

After having lost, piecemeal, in the bucket shop of his home town the surplus of many years' industry, a cattle raiser in the State of Illinois determined, if possible, to take the other end of the play. He desisted from speculation until, between seasons, he had three months of leisure for his experiment. Approaching the manager of a regular commission house in Chicago, he stated his plan. He desired the manager to pick out two average accounts, one in grain and one in stocks, the unit of trade not to exceed 10,000 bushels of grain in one nor 200 shares of stock in the other, and he proposed in his account to "copper" every transaction made for the other two. If wheat was bought for the unknown grain account, he would sell an equal amount at the same price and hold it open until the other trade was closed; if Union Pacific was bought for the unknown stock account, he would sell the same amount, &c. He tendered ample margin to cover the business, and the manager, his curiosity aroused, agreed to do it. All that the cattle raiser wanted to know after this was that the three acounts—his own and the other two—were active. At the end of three months he went back to Illinois with $17,000 clear profit.

Wall Street seems a good deal more anxious to avert a coal strike than the operators are. It is now a well-known trade secret that if the miners do not go out the output of coal will have to be checked in another way, which means, of course, that operations would have to be curtailed at the mines. The operators appear to take a very cheerful view of the prospect.

***

After the blizzard of 1888, which was the cause of much privation because it interfered seriously with the distribution of life's necessaries, men said that they would never be caught in such a trap again, and so each Winter for several years they stocked up with a surplus of foodstuff against a possible repetition of the 1888 experience. They boasted about it, telling each other how many hams, how much canned goods, flour, &c., they kept on hand, until it got to be an old story. There has not been such a blizzard since, and private insurance against the consequences of one is no longer thought of. After the coal strike of 1902 people said that they would never be caught again without a reserve supply of fuel, and last Autumn, when there was already some talk of a strike this year, they stocked up with it as they never did before. It seems that eight in every ten private consumers of coal laid in an extra supply at the beginning of last Winter, and the Winter season having been very mild they have now a greater surplus even than they were counting upon.

***

Bearish matter from Boston now comes printed in red. The difference in cost between red and black ink is very slight, if there is any difference at all, so it cannot be a question of economy. Perhaps red is the color that seems most appropriate to the text.

***

The leadership yesterday in stocks was calculated to appeal favorably to speculative sentiment, notably Reading, Amalgamated Copper, Union Pacific, and Southern Pacific, but it was generally supposed to be of a highly professional origin, and, for that reason, it was not convincing. The market opened very dull and rather heavy, at a fractional decline all around from Thursday's closing prices. Presently the aggressive buying of Reading was resumed, and the stock advanced 2½ per cent. very rapidly. Buying of a somewhat less aggressive nature advanced Union Pacific, Amalgamated Copper, and one or two other stocks an average of about 1 per cent. Wasserman gave out a bull interview on Canadian Pacific. Brokers reported from the Stock Exchange that the House of Twelve Partners seemed to be buying stocks openly all around the room. The highest prices and the maximum activity were reached before midday. The stocks upon which the buying had converged held their advances fairly well during the afternoon, but the volume of trading declined, and there was evience here and there of quiet profit taking.

***

London has been buying Steel common rather freely this week, presumably against call options held on this side.

***

Perhaps the most disappointing feature of the market yesterday was the failure of the United States Steel stocks to show improvement. With other stocks advancing sharply during the forenoon, Steel common struggled up ⅜ per cent., to 40⅛, and the preferred stock advanced ⅜ per cent., but the common stock fell back and closed unchanged, while the preferred closed at a fractional decline for the day. Trading in the preferred stock was only nominal. The common was fairly active. The backward behavior of Steel common in the last few weeks has invited a lot of professional short selling, and there is probably a good-sized short interest in the stock, but there is also a very large miscellaneous bull account scattered all over the country. There is such a large volume of Steel common that a tremendous amount of initiative is required to move it up 2 or 3 per cent. Four or five aggressive traders may get under Union Pacific or Reading or St. Paul and make a turn of several points in a day; that is, if they are not interfered with, but no such thing is possible in Steel common. Its bulk is greater than that of any other stock in the whole market. Option writers sell puts and calls on it, ½ per cent. from the market, for periods of one week, which shows in what regard they hold it.

***

Another "Anaconda strike" has been made at Boston.

***

You hear very little these days about the Heinze crowd in either Amalgamated Copper or Anaconda. Since Amalgamated touched par on the break from around 118 the Butte contingent has been less conspicuous in the market. After that break in Amalgamated it was asserted on behalf of the Heinze following that it had cleaned up in the stock between 118 and 115, but was very bullish still on United Copper. Strangely, however, the speculation in United Copper has subsided. The transactions amount to only a few thousand shares a day. In the meantime it is evident that the market for Amalgamated Copper is once more controlled by its friends, without the assistance of the Heinze crowd. Certain shrewd persons declare that the Heinze campaign in "coppers" fell far short of expectations and that the Butte crowd, while boasting that it beat the Street, is, in fact, somewhat disgruntled over the clean-up as a whole. A few go still further and assert that Heinze got the small end of the deal—that the enemy filed his teeth and clipped his claws while he was dazzled with the prospect of a much greater killing in the Street than it was possible for him to make.

***

The revival of a bull speculation in cotton is most welcome to Stock Exchange houses possessing facilities for transacting business in that staple. In the last two or three years the New York Stock Exchange membership in the Cotton Exchange has increased very rapidly, and the Wall Street interest in cotton speculation is proportionately greater. As an outlet for speculative activity the cotton market has many attractions. When it is moving either way it provides the maximum degree of what traders call "action." As the facilities for trading in cotton are enlarged and improved the speculation in it will increase. The Sully campaign educated stock market speculators up to the possibilities of cotton trading, and since then six or eight prominent Stock Exchange houses have added cotton departments, and the interest has been growing steadily. Mr. Price is the leader of the present bull movement.

***

Prominent banking authorities predict sharp money flurries between now and the end of the month, with call money at 10 per cent. or higher while preparations are being made for the quarterly disbursements. In the meantime they are not disposed to look with favor upon bullish activity in the stock market, which would have a tendency to aggravate the trouble. Beyond the end of this month, however, there is reasonable assurance, they believe, of a period of easy money with which to finance the traditional Spring rise. Immediate encouragement on the bull side of the market comes rather from speculative than banking quarters. Banking opinion is still conservative, and will doubtless continue so until money market conditions are more favorable to bullish speculation.

WORLD'S SUPPLY OF COTTON.

NEW ORLEANS, March 23.—Secretary Hester's statement of the world's visible supply of cotton, issued to-day, shows the total visible to be 4,788,974 bales. Of this the total American cotton is 3,901,974, and of all other kinds, including Egypt, Brazil, India, &c., 148,000. Of the world's visible supply of coton there is now afloat and held in Great Britain and continental Europe, 2,816,000; in Egypt, 181,000; in India, 967,000, and in the United States, 1,825,000.

UNITED RAILWAYS DIVIDEND.

Directors To-day May Put the Common on a 6 Per Cent. Basis.

The Directors of the United Railways Investment Company of San Francisco at a meeting to-day will consider the question of paying off the arrears of dividends on the preferred stock, and, in all probability, will declare an initial dividend on the common. No definite statement could be had from the Directors yesterday concerning a common dividend. It is probable, however, that the action will amount to putting the common on a 6 per cent. basis.

The accumulated dividends on the preferred of the United Railways Company, the operating concern, amounting to $720,000, were paid into the treasury of the United Railways Investment Company, the holding company, on March 5. The preferred stock of the operating company is entitled to 4 per cent. and the preferred of the investment company 3 per cent. The arrears on this stock amount to about $900,000.

The United Railways Investment Company recently acquired a majority of the stock of the Philadelphia Company of Pittsburg, so that it now controls the street railway systems of San Francisco and Pittsburg.

BOSTON STOCK MARKET.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, March 23.—The local money market is unchanged. The usual table of rates, &c., follows:

Call loans, 5¼@6 per cent. Time loans, collateral, 4¾@5¼ per cent. Time loans, mercantile paper, 5@5½ per cent. Clearing House loans, 5 per cent. New York funds, 8@10c. discount. Clearings, $25,193,319. Balances, $2,127,535. Sub-Treasury debit, $94,951.

The local market started this morning with quite a burst of bullish enthusiasm, but it did not last long. Prices moved up fractionally, but, as in preceding days, stock was met and the market became dull. United Copper was strong, gaining a fraction. Bingham also showed a small advance for the day on light trading. Balance of copper list shows but little change. Shoe Machinery issues were again in demand, the common advancing to 86. There was some realizing to be seen in American Pneumatic in the afternoon, the stock losing a point. Closing prices were quiet and irregular.

C. J. WITTENBERG TO RESIGN.

Will Leave Chesapeake & Ohio to Head a New Coal Concern.

C. J. Wittenberg, President of the Chesapeake & Ohio Coal and Coke Company, will leave that concern to become President of a company soon to be organized by J. S. Bache, S. R. Guggenheim, Newman Erb, and associates to take over a number of coal companies operating in the New River district of West Virginia.

The projected corporation, which is to be called the New River Collieries Company, will be capitalized at $8,000,000, and control about 30,000 acres of soft coal lands. The new concern plans to acquire terminal facilities at Newport News.

CONDITIONS OF TRADE.

Commenting on general business conditions Dun's Review says:

Retail distribution of Spring merchandise has received a check because of the heavy snowfall in many sections of the country, but some offset is noted in renewed inquiry for Winter goods, and there is no interruption to the activity of shipping departments. Confidence in the future is remarkably bright, and the outlook would be far better than ever before at this season if the fuel uncertainty were removed. Manufacturing plants operate close to maximum capacity in the leading industries, and many mills cannot undertake deliveries before 1907. While these are extreme cases, it is a common thing to find production engaged for several months in advance. Merchandise collections are also more prompt, except in certain parts of the South, where cotton is still held for better terms. Commodity prices are slightly higher, on the whole, and building materials continue very strong, structural work being abnormally heavy for the season. Railroad earnings for March thus far surpass last year's by 9.1 per cent., and foreign commerce at this port for the last week shows a gain of $2,697,032 in imports over the same period of 1905, while exports are practically unchanged.

Bradstreet's thus summarizes the condition of crops:

A heavy snow covers the entire country west of the Alleghanies and north of the Ohio and the southern boundaries of Missouri and Kansas, and severe weather is claimed to have done no damage to wheat. Planting operations are, however, delayed. Some damage to wheat is reported in Washington, but the storm did not hurt California grain or fruits. In the West and Southwest damage to fruit and truck is reported. In Oklahoma and Georgia the peach crop has been hurt, in the latter State from 30 to 50 per cent. No damage was done in Florida.

CHICAGO QUOTATIONS.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, March 23.—Dribbling liquidation in Diamond Match on the local Exchange to-day simply emphasized a bearish attitude that many people, both in the trade and in investments, have taken toward this well-distributed security. Ever since the annual report was issued, showing that proper depreciation was not being made and that a capital increase was to be asked to pay off debts contracted, while the company continued to pay excessive dividends, the stock has been coming on the market in small lots from investors.

To-day a few shares were sufficient to break the price from 136 to 132½. Gossip attributed the selling to the attitude of New York jobbers against Diamond Match methods in the trade. But La Salle Street has been somewhat exercised by a sentence in the latest market letter sent out by E. L. Lobdell & Co., suggesting that Match shareholders confer with the firm on Match prospects "at an early date."

In view of recent selling of Illinois Brick, some interest attaches to the reports that the National Brick Company, headed by Bernard Weber, formerly Vice President of the Illinois, will enter the local field aggressively next week with a cut in brick prices to $6 a thousand. This may or may not be a forerunner of active competition, to be followed even by a trade war, to put the independents at a disadvantage, while Illinois Brick has a big enough surplus to insure dividends for some time. The stock to-day went around 65½.

Other issues were quiet. Money, 5½@6 per cent. New York exchange, 20c discount.

Corporation Counsel, Borough Hall, Brooklyn,
New York City.

SUPREME COURT—First Judicial District.—In the matter of the application and petition of George B. McClellan, Herman A. Metz, Alexander E. Orr, Charles Stuart Smith, Morris K. Jesup, John H. Starin, Woodbury Langdon, and John Claflin, constituting the Board of Rapid Transit Railroad Commissioners of The City of New York, for and on behalf of said city, for the appointment of Commissioners of Appraisal, under Chapter 4 of the Laws of 1891 and the various statutes amendatory thereof and supplemental thereto, relative to acquiring the perpetual easements necessary for the construction, maintenance, and operation of an elevated railroad in Westchester Avenue, from Third Avenue to the Southern Boulevard, thence along the Southern Boulevard to the Boston Road, thence along the Boston Road to One Hundred and Eighty-first Street, in the Borough of The Bronx, wherever said easements have not been already acquired by purchase or otherwise.

Notice is hereby given that an application will be made at a Special Term of the Supreme Court of the State of New York, to be held at Part III. at the County Court House in the Borough of Manhattan, in The City of New York, on the 29th day of March, 1906, at the opening of the court on that day, for the appointment of three disinterested persons, being citizens of the United States and residents of the City of New York, to ascertain and appraise the compensation to be made to the owners and all persons interested in the real property, rights, franchises, easements, or privileges sought to be taken, affected, or extinguished for the construction, maintenance, and operation of an elevated railroad in Westchester Avenue, from Third Avenue to the Southern Boulevard; thence along the Southern Boulevard to Boston Road, thence along Boston Road to 181st Street, in the Borough of The Bronx, wherever the same have not been acquired by The City of New York by purchase or otherwise.

The real estate sought to be affected is located in the Borough of The Bronx, in The City of New York, abutting on Westchester Avenue, Southern Boulevard, and Boston Road, as above described, and the property is laid out and indicated on three similar or triplicate maps, one of which was filed in the office of the Board of Public Improvements on the 27th day of July, 1900, and another in the office of the Register of the County of New York on the 27th day of July, 1900, and one in the office of the Board of Rapid Transit Railroad Commissioners on the 27th day of July, 1900, each bearing the following certificate:

"Board of Rapid Transit Railroad Commissioners of The City of New York.

"Map, survey, and plan of lands and property necessary to be acquired or to which there may be appurtenant rights, terms, franchises, easements, or privileges necessary to be acquired or extinguished by The City of New York for the construction and operation of the Rapid Transit Railroad described in the routes and general plan thereof adopted by the said Board on the 14th day of January and the 4th day of February, 1897.

"Memorandum.

"There are to be acquired in relation to each and every parcel of property shown upon the sheets of this map, survey and plan, abutting upon Westchester Avenue, the Southern Boulevard, and Boston Road, and bounded in blue, the right, franchise, and easement to construct and operate the said Rapid Transit Railroad.

"Adopted and approved by the said Board the 21st day of June, 1900."

Dated February 10th, 1906.

MARCH 1906

CAN'T LEVY ON NEWCOMBE.

Deputy Sheriff Can't Find Any Property of the Suspended Broker.

Isaac B. Newcombe, who has been suspended from the Stock Exchange since the Spring of 1904, and now has a brokerage office at 41 Wall Street, had four executions, aggregating $40,653, entered against him yesterday in favor of Stewart Browne, formerly his partner.

Deputy Sheriff Murray, to whom the executions were given yesterday, has not discovered any property on which to levy. His Stock Exchange seat cannot be touched under the law, and the broker told the Sheriff that his office furniture belonged to his son, and his household furniture to his wife.

Newcombe has been a member of the Stock Exchange since 1869. His suspension was ordered on the charge of paying commissions to an employe for obtaining business, and is in effect for five years from May 2, 1904. Browne and Newcombe were partners from January, 1903, to the time of his suspension, doing a general banking and brokerage business at 170 Broadway under the firm name of Stewart Browne & Co. The executions were obtained on four demand notes made on Dec. 10, 1904.

Two other executions, amounting to $3,187, were obtained against the broker by Mr. Browne a few days ago, and were returned by the Sheriff unsatisfied.

PHILADELPHIA PRICES.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, March 23.—Reading common contributed nearly one-half of the transactions at the local Stock Exchange to-day. There was an active arbitrage in it throughout the session. Lehigh Valley sympathized with Reading's strength, advancing a substantial fraction. Philadelphia Rapid Transit continued to be steadily absorbed around 28, and near the close developed some strength.

Philadelphia Company receipts were also in active demand and advanced slightly. The tone of the general list was firm, but there was little disposition to trade outside of the stock named. The Street has a fever for dealing in stocks of Nevada gold mines, and hundreds of thousands of shares change hands on "curb" daily. None of them are issued at the local Stock Exchange, except Tonopah Mining.

Total sales, 36,658 shares.

LATEST CUSTOMS RULINGS.

Canadian Horses Lacked Proper Pedigree—Other Decisions.

In a decision by Judge Waite, the Board of United States General Appraisers overruled yesterday a claim filed by I. S. Wilson of Newport, Vt., regarding the admittance of Canadian horses into this country. It was maintained by the importer that the animals were imported for breeding purposes, and a certificate to this effect, giving the pedigree of the animals was submitted from the Clydesdale Horse Association of Canada. After reviewing the evidence, Judge Waite reached the conclusion that the pedigree certificates are insufficient to admit the horses free of duty, as the organization issuing the certificates is not recognized by the Treasury Department. The Collector's assessment of duty at the rate of 25 per cent. will therefore stand.

I. F. Fischer wrote a decision for the Customs Court sustaining a claim filed by Walter Meal and others of New York regarding the rate of duty applicable to so-called flat envelopes. It was decided that goods of this kind may be entered at 20 per cent. ad valorem, and not at 35 per cent., as contended by the Secretary of the Treasury.

General Appraiser Sharretts wrote a decision for the board in which it was held that electric scarf pins must pay duty as "jewelry," at the rate of 60 per cent. Austin Baldwin & Co., the importers, took the position that the merchandise should be admitted at only 45 per cent., on the plea that the pins were dutiable under the provision in the Tariff law for "manufactures of metal."

Weekly Failure Report.

Bradstreet's reports 170 failures in the United States during the week, against 187 for the previous week and 204, 215, 175, and 183 for the corresponding weeks of 1905 to 1902. The Middle States had 57, New England 18, Southern 21, Western 43, Northwestern 11, Pacific 15, and Territories 5. Canada had 29, against 33 for the preceding week. About 85 per cent. of the total number of concerns failing had capital of $5,000 or less, and 10 per cent. had from $5,000 to $20,000 capital.

BUSINESS TROUBLES.

Out of Town.

WATERVILLE, Me.—The stockholders of the Riverview Worsted Mills petitioned the Supreme Court for a receiver Thursday. The nominal assets of the mills are estimated at about $240,000 and the liabilities at $210,000. Differences are said to exist in the management.

Petitions in Bankruptcy.

STANDARD ELECTRICAL SUPPLY COMPANY.—A petition in bankruptcy has been filed against the Standard Electrical Supply Company of 37 Warren Street by these creditors: Gerald W. Hart, $858; William Taylor, $9, and Joseph T. Harris, $11. Judge Adams appointed Robert G. Benedict receiver under a $10,000 bond. The assets are estimated at $30,000 and liabilities $40,000.

JOSEPH CABUS, JR.—Joseph Cabus, Jr., of 343 West Thirtieth Street has filed a petition in bankruptcy; liabilities, $23,518; no assets.

GEORGE W. COWEN.—George W. Cowen of 2,076 Anthony Avenue, the Bronx, a clerk in a laundry at 52 Grove Street, has filed a petition in bankruptcy; liabilities, $2,017; no assets. He was formerly a partner of Cowen & Hopper, laundry, at 117 Macdougal Street.

SANDY R. PHILLIPS.—Sandy R. Phillips of Catskill, N. Y., has filed a petition in bankruptcy here; liabilities, $453; no assets.

NATIONAL AUTOMOBILE COMPANY.—Judge Adams has appointed Robert A. Inch receiver for the National Automobile Company, 205 to 209 East Eighty-sixth Street, and fixed his bond at $2,500. The assets are about $5,000.

THE COMMERCIAL WORLD

WHEAT.—Much of the strength that appeared in the wheat market yesterday was attributed to a hardening tendency in foreign markets. The announcement that a large proportion of the heavy Argentine shipments had been sold direct to the Continent put Liverpool up ⅝d. The Continent was quite as firm as Liverpool, Berlin closing 1@1¼ marks higher and Budapest 6 points up. Throughout the day the Northwest was a good buyer of wheat, and at times led in point of strength. Rumors of export business on a considerable scale lacked confirmation. No. 2 red at the close was quoted 96c elevator, and 89c free on board, afloat; No. 1 Northern, Duluth, 89c free on board, afloat.

CORN.—There was an unusually active trade in the local corn market, embracing a wide range of months. It was attended by considerable strength of undertone at times, with last prices partly ⅛c above the previous night. The opening showed a slight advance. Following this came sharp declines in response to unloading for local account and reports of some influential selling at the West through commission houses. In the afternoon rallies developed in line with the wheat advance, giving the market quite a firm tone at the close. Liverpool was ⅝d higher. Seaboard clearances reached 573,000 bushels, and the interior receipts were 438,000 bushels, compared with 605,000 bushels last year. The export trade amounted to 4 loads. No. 2 corn closed 54c elevator, and 51¼c free on board, afloat; No. 2 white, 52¼c, and No. 2 yellow, 52¼c, free on board, afloat.

COTTON.—The cotton market was less active than during the two previous days, but showed traces of continued excitement and was again in control of the bull party. The close was steady, at a net advance of from 7 to 13 points. Sales were estimated at 300,000 bales.

The opening was steady at an advance of from 3 to 8 points. There was a show of bull support on the call and bid prices up about 12 to 13 points above Thursday's finals. Realizing then became more of a feature, and the market sagged off, but after May reached 11 cents. the bulls turned more aggressive, and advanced prices quite sharply in the early afternoon, with July reaching a new high level for the movement and selling at 11.10, or 19 points net higher. The bulls were sellers at times during the day and probably reduced their lines by balance.

A Priceless Lifetime Advantage in the Mental Equipment of Every Man or Woman.

Upward of a million students, teachers, business men and others have availed themselves of the Rosenthal System with entire pleasure and satisfaction. Thousands have already used it with the wonderful Language-Phone, that tireless and precisely accurate up-to-date teacher.

Only 10 Minutes a Day for a Little While.

If you knew how easily you could acquire speaking, reading and writing familiarity with any or all of the four great living foreign languages, would you be content to remain longer ignorant of this delightful and important accomplishment? Only ten minutes a day for a little while in your leisure moments will give you speaking, reading and writing familiarity with a new language.

The Natural Method of Study

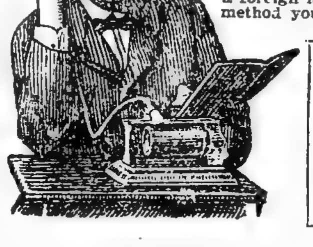
The keynote of the success of this system is that it is the natural way in which the mind acquires language. It is almost exactly as a child learns to talk. Almost unconsciously you glide into thinking in a new language. You learn to use sentences rather than isolated words, and you avoid all the old-time drudgery.

The Voices of Living Native Professors

The Language-Phone furnishes ready self-instruction for one or every member of the family, unceasingly ready for service, repeating the living voices of native professors with absolute accuracy of pronunciation. It talks at any speed you require. It is simplicity itself; a child can use it as easily as a grown person. It is always in order. It affords the acme of accuracy, celerity, convenience. It offers pleasant mental recreation and a delightful means toward self-culture. You can enjoy it at any time, and there is a certain fascination in its use.

Eye, Ear, Tongue and Mind

You learn the whole language. All functions of language taught by this method at the same time. Eye, ear, tongue and mind are all brought into play. It is no longer necessary to memorize lists of verbs, declensions and complicated grammatical rules. You hear the exact pronunciation of a native professor, whose accuracy and reliability we guarantee.



French, German, Spanish or Italian. To speak, to understand, to write there is but one best way. You must hear it spoken correctly, over and over, until your ear knows it. You must see it printed correctly till your eye knows it. You must talk it and write it. All this can be done best by the Language-Phone Method. With this method you buy a professor outright. You own him. He speaks slowly or quickly, when you choose, night or day, for a few minutes or hours at a time. Any one can learn a foreign language who hears it spoken often enough, and by this method you can hear it as often as you like.

SAVOY HOTEL

LONDON.

OVERLOOKING THE RIVER AND EMBANKMENT GARDENS.

Never has the Press of England shown greater unanimity than in its praise of the additions and improvements to the Savoy Hotel, London, upon which have been spent upwards of one million pounds sterling.

The new building is characterized by extreme luxuriousness.—The Times.

The magnificent buildings of the Savoy make a truly noble show.—Daily Telegraph.

The building is palatial—the greatest possible comfort combined with luxury.—Morning Post.

One of the most sumptuous and costly interiors in London.—Daily Graphic.

A remarkable addition to the architecture of the Strand.—Standard.

All is peace and refinement.—Pall Mall Gazette.

The last word in hotel luxury and magnificence.—Westminster Gazette.

One of the most luxurious and one of the most comfortable hotels in the world.—Referee.

The most striking innovation in building which London has seen of recent years.—World.

A scale of luxury hitherto unattempted in any hotel in London.—New York Tribune.

More beautiful than ever.—Morning Leader.

A delight to the eye—no lavishness seems to have been grudged.—Sportsman.

One of the handsomest of London edifices.—Globe.

Elegance and artistic character are everywhere. Nothing has been omitted that could conduce to the comfort and content of the visitor.—Ladies' Field.

The most beautiful hotel in Europe.—Outlook.

An ideal home for twentieth century London—Queen.

The great pile of buildings included in this latest addition to the architectural sites of London forms a combination of luxury and beauty which cannot be surpassed in the wide world. The New Savoy is a vast palace of a thousand splendours, of a thousand surprising and delightful innovations. Nothing that could contribute to the comfort, the smoothness, and the joy of life is wanting which the inventive genius of America and Europe could supply, or that the taste and skill of the world's schools of art in all its branches could furnish. The place is, in its way, a very triumph of genius. Its match is not to be found in London, nor in Paris, nor, indeed, in any capital of this little planet. To do it justice in a necessarily brief article is impossible. Having rambled through its glorious salons and galleries, and ante-chambers, up and down marble staircases of noble breadth, beneath panelled ceilings, adorned in relief with exquisite golden tracery, one feels that all this royal magnificence, this opulent beauty, might well inspire a volume which should be bound in white satin and gold.—Western Mail.

OWN YOUR OWN HOME DON'T PAY RENT

DON'T LOOK AT TO-DAY OR TO-MORROW;

LOOK AT YOUR FUTURE

WHAT is it—one of toil and slavery? Think of your old age and be prepared for it by taking advantage of our proposition while you have an earning capacity, and the old age and the future will take care of themselves. Do not delay, as delays are dangerous, for time and tide wait for no man. The most valuable asset you can have is your own home. Our system of home buying is simple, conservative and safe. The company is backed by reliable and responsible business men. Since our plan has been in operation in America it has been very successful. It is patterned after the CELEBRATED SYSTEM which has been operated successfully in England for over sixty years, where thousands of HAPPY HOME OWNERS have benefited by it. STATE BOARD CAN'T STOP BROOKLYN BRIDGE CRUSH Impossible, It Says, to Add to Service During Rush Hours.

LONGER TRAINS ARE FAVORED

Extra Cars on All Lines During Non-Rush Hours Urged—Board Powerless to Enforce Schedule.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 23.—Users of the Brooklyn elevated lines may have better service if the recommendations promulgated to-day by the State Railroad Commission are carried out. The recommendations call for a radical change of schedule, though the commission concedes the change is not all that it would like to bring about. It practically says if the terminal facilities were better the company would be requested to make even more changes in its schedule. Practically every line is more or less affected—Fifth Avenue, Fulton Street, Ridgewood, Culver, West End, Broadway, Sea Beach, Brighton Beach, and Lexington Avenue.

The commission says, among other things, relative to its order: "The commission finds that, owing to limited terminal facilities, it is unable to recommend any material increase in this service during the morning and evening rush hours, but finds that it is possible to increase the service during other hours of the day."

The recommendations, while not an order, will no doubt, it is said, be carried out. The commission is without power to compel the adoption of its recommendations This structural weakness in the body has been the subject of legislation for years, but the railroad companies have always been too strong to permit of laws being enacted giving the commission power to compel the companies to do as recommended. The recommendations follow:

Fulton Street Line—That all four-car trains operated from the Fulton Ferry during the evening rush hours be made five-car trains.

Fifth Avenue Line.—(A) That all three-car trains operated on this line between the hours of 1:07 P. M. and 3:53 P. M. on Saturdays be made four-car trains. (B) That all three-car trains operated on Sundays between the hours of 1:30 P. M. and 10:30 P. M. be made four-car trains. (C) That all three-car trains operated daily between the hours of 10:30 P. M. and 11:30 P. M. be made four-car trains.

Lexington Avenue Line—(A) That all three-car trains operated on this line on Saturdays between the hours of 2:30 P. M. and 3:02 P. M. made five-car trains. (C) That all four-car trains operated on this line on Sundays between the hours of 1:30 P. M. and 10:00 P. M. be made five-car trains. (C That all four-car trains operated on this line on Saturdays between the hours of 3:02 P. M. and 8:24 P. M. be made five-car trains.

Brighton Beach Line—(A) That the shelter stations formerly in use on this line between Manhattan Junction and Sheepshead Bay Junction be removed to the Long Island Railroad Company's right of way, or new stations erected instead. (B) That at the points where the trains of this line cross the Long Island Railroad Company's tracks the crossing be protected by derails and signals in the Long Island Railroad Company's tracks, and with signals on the Brighton Beach Line tracks, all interlocked with the switches. (C) That a separate short-line service be operated during the period of the improvement now in progress between Newkirk Avenue and the Brooklyn Bridge, and that a through-line service be operated between Culver Depot, Coney Island, and the Brooklyn Bridge without coupling up at Newkirk Avenue, as was done previously.

The combined headways of trains between Newkirk Avenue and the Brooklyn Bridge to be no greater than heretofore. The combined seating capacity of trains operated between Newkirk Avenue and the Brooklyn Bridge to be not less than heretofore. (D) That all three-car trains operated on this line on Sundays from 1 P. M. to 6 P. M. be made five-car trains.

Sea Beach Line.—That on Sundays between the hours of 1:30 P. M. and 6 P. M. three-car through trains be operated instead of the single car attached to the West End trains, as at present.

Broadway Line.—That the work of extending platforms on this line to accommodate six-car trains be completed as soon as possible.

West End Line.—That all four and three car trains operated on this line on Sundays between 1 P. M. and 10 P. M. be made five-car trains.

Culver Line.—That all two-car trains operated on this line on Sundays between 1:30 P. M. and 6 P. M. be made three-car trains.

Ridgewood Line.—(A) That all three-car trains operated on this line on Sundays from 1:30 P. M. to 10 P. M. be made four-car trains. (B) That the work of extending the platforms to accommodate six-car trains on this line be completed as soon as possible.

Capt. Daly Sent to Bronx Park.

Police Commissioner Bingham late yesterday afternoon announced the transfer of Capt. John Daly from West Forty-seventh Street to Bronx Park, and of Capt. John L. Zimmerman from Butler Street, Brooklyn, to West Forty-seventh Street. It was taken to mean at Police Headquarters that Daly's conduct in connection with the Mark Twain meeting at the Majestic Theatre on a recent Sunday afternoon did not have the Commissioner's approval.

SUBWAY PAY CAR IN A SMASH.

Four Hurt as It Strikes the Bumper at King's Bridge.

One man was seriously and three slightly injured yesterday morning in an accident to the pay car of the Interborough Rapid Transit Company at the King's Bridge (211th Street) station and terminal of the elevated structure of the Subway. There was a delay of an hour and thirty-three minutes in the payment of the company's employes on account of the damage to the car.

Workingmen at the buffers at the terminal had spilled oil on the new rails so that the motorman found that his car slipped over the rails like a sled. He stuck to his post. The rails are curved up to the bumpers. These were partly wrecked by the impact and the rails spread. The car was able after a new crew arrived to resume its journey, paying off the men along the line. Broken glass in the forward part of the car bore witness to the accident.

William D. Wools of 259 West 153d Street, the conductor, was thrown off the back platform, and taken to Fordham Hospital suffering from internal injuries. Michael Enright, the motorman, suffered many bruises and cuts from broken glass. F. W. Keegan, assistant paymaster, was bruised about the shoulder. Edward J. Pecound of 135 East Fiftieth Street, a guard, suffered a scalp wound. The three were sent to their homes after their injuries were dressed.

ERIE TO TEST MOTOR CARS.

A Ganz Steam and American Gasoline to Compete on Suburban Traffic.

The railroads are considering the inroads on the passenger receipts of branch lines by trolley competition, and experiments are being made with power cars which may be operated frequently and cheaply.

The Erie has arranged for a series of experiments, and has ordered a Ganz motor from Europe in addition to an American gasoline car. The American car has many good features, but the cost is problematical, owing to the gradual advance in the price of gasoline.

The Ganz car is propelled by steam and will carry about sixty passengers. It has an 80-horse power boiler, anthracite being used for fuel, and two 50-horse power steam motors.

The Erie's specifications call for a maximum speed of thirty-eight miles an hour on level track and twenty-five miles on a grade of 104 feet to the mile. It must be able to haul a trailer at thirty-four miles an hour, or eleven and one-half miles on grades. The car will weigh about three tons. The machinery will be constructed in Europe and the body built at the Erie shops. The first experiments will probably be made between New City and Nanuet Junction, N. Y.

NEW WALL STREET BUILDING.

Structure for Trust Company of America to Have 23 Stories.

The Lands Purchase Company will file plans to-day for a twenty-three-story office building at 37 to 41 Wall Street on an irregular plot fronting 61 feet on Wall Street and about 130 feet deep on the westerly line and 117 feet on the easterly line.

The structure, which has been designed by Francis H. Kimball, architect of the Trinity and Empire Buildings, will have a façade in the style of the Italian Renaissance, of granite and Indiana limestone. The building will contain six passenger elevators and will connect on each floor with the twenty-three-story Wall Street Exchange Building on Exchange Place, at the rear of the proposed structure.

The rentable area on each floor will be about 5,000 square feet. The entire basement and ground floor will be occupied by the Trust Company of America, which controls the Lands Purchase Company. The banking room will be one of the most elaborate in the world, with a ceiling 31 feet high and a mezzanine gallery along its easterly side. The general contract has been let to the George A. Fuller Company.

LAWYER GETS 20 YEARS.

"Clever Rascal," Said Judge Foster, in Sentencing H. Huffman Browne.

Twenty years in Sing Sing was the sentence pronounced by Judge Foster in General Sessions yesterday on H. Huffman Browne, the lawyer convicted of forgery in connection with a series of swindles which resulted in his obtaining possession of the large estate at Inwood left by Ebbe Peterson, a Norwegian.

Judge Foster referred to the prisoner as "a clever rascal," and said that however unpleasant might be the duty of sentencing a lawyer, it was to the interest of the community that a man like Browne be kept behind prison bars for a long period. It had been shown to the court, Judge Foster added, that Browne had swindled many other estates besides that of the Peterson family, and that he had been in the habit of selling property entrusted to him by clients without obtaining their authority.

CALLS IT A TRINITY GRAB.

E. C. Benedict Opposes Proposed Changes in Thames and Temple Sts.

Most of the time of the Board of Estimate's meeting yesterday was taken up with a discussion of the proposed plan to change the line of Thames Street and to close Temple Street, in order to permit the enlargement of the Trinity Building and the construction of a building of the same size of the old Boreel Building.

The plan is to move Thames Street a few feet further north, so that fifteen feet can be added to the present Trinity Building along its north side, then to close Temple Street and permit the construction of a new building right through from Broadway to Trinity Place. In return for the change of Thames Street and the closing of Temple Street, the Trinity Corporation has agreed to give up land to make Thames Street twenty-seven, instead of twenty-one, feet wide.

E. C. Benedict, representing the Citizens' Union, opposed the plan, saying it was a grab on the part of the Trinity Corporation, which wanted to get 2,200 square feet more land for nothing.

Mayor McClellan appointed Controller Metz, President McGowan, and Borough President Ahearn as a committee to report on the subject.

Controller Metz asked the board to recommend to the Aldermen a resolution giving the Board of Education $1,050,000 in special revenue bonds. Mr. Metz said he had found the accounts of the Board of Education in bad shape, the appropriation made to the board last year, nearly $25,000,000, had been exceeded, and the outstanding bills had to be paid. The board passed a resolution putting the matter up to the Board of Aldermen.

CREDITORS OVERLOOKED HIM.

File a Bankruptcy Petition Against ex-Gilsey House Lessee.

In a bankruptcy petition against Frederick S. Andrews, formerly of the Gilsey House, creditors yesterday declared that he had not been at his place of business for six weeks, nor at his usual residence. They asserted that on Nov. 29, 1905, he conveyed all his property at Findlay, Ohio, to his wife.

Andrews leased the Gilsey House Oct. 1, 1905, for five years, but resold the lease on Nov. 1 to Henry S. Duncan for $24,600. He said the climate of this city did not agree with him.

Special to The New York Times.

FINDLAY, Ohio, March 23.—Col. F. S. Andrews was at his hotel here to-night. He said:

"There is not a word of truth in the story that I have conveyed my property to my wife. This is the first intimation that has come to me of any bankruptcy proceedings."

APPELLATE DIVISION HEARS PLEA FOR DEUEL

Jerome Was Really Hapgood's Counsel, Says Lauterbach.

ATTACKS REMOVAL PETITION

And Questions the Constitutionality of the Law Barring Judges from Business.

Edward Lauterbach, representing Justice Joseph M. Deuel, made a spirited reply yesterday to the petition asking for the removal of the Justice from the Special Sessions bench. Howard S. Gans, attorney for the petitioners, William Travers Jerome, Edward M. Shepard, and James W. Osborne presented the petition yesterday afternoon to the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court, Justice Ingraham presiding.

"It is a matter of public notoriety," said Mr. Lauterbach, "that in the trial based on a charge of criminal libel three attorneys were engaged in the defense and not one in the prosecution. The District Attorney, who was supposed to be the prosecutor, lined himself up with the defense, so that there was no attorney present to represent the side of Justice Deuel. Why, when the defendant in the case, Mr. Hapgood, was on the stand, the counsel who was supposed to act for the prosecution asked:

"'Who furnished you with the information on which these articles were based?'

"'I got much of it from you yourself,' replied the defendant.

"'Then I am the defendant in the case?' said the man who was supposed to be the prosecutor. And on summing up, allegedly, the District Attorney said: 'I am astonished at the mildness of Mr. Hapgood's statement.'"

A new development of the case is that Justice Deuel, through his counsel, will question the constitutionality of the law forbidding a Judge to engage in business. Section 1,416 of the New York charter says that no Justice shall "carry on any business," but in the next sentence, that each Justice shall "devote his whole time and capacity, so far as the public interests require, to the duties of his office." This last qualification, Mr. Lauterbach holds, makes it evident that the law is really intended not to exclude Justices entirely from taking part in business ventures, but to keep such ventures from interfering with the duties they perform for the people.

"The petitioners have made no charge," Mr. Lauterbach said in the Appellate Division yesterday, "that Justice Deuel has not devoted his whole time and capacity, so far as the public interests demand, to the duties of his office, or that the discharge of his official duties has not been thorough and well performed, or that there has been any malfeasance, misfeasance, neglect, or indifference on his part in the performance of his duties.

"Again, the petitioners allege that it was Justice Deuel's function to read 'abusive, salacious, scurrilous, scandalous, and libelous matter.' To emphasize it? To make it more scurrilous or scandalous? No. But to modify it so that it would not be scandalous. If his function was to prevent the publishing of libelous matter, was that being engaged in the spreading of libels?"

If the Appellate Division decides that Justice Deuel must make an answer to the petition, the proceedings before the referee, says Justice Deuel's counsel, will be very different from those that recently took place in the Criminal Courts Building. One of the chief points made by Justice Deuel against the charge of conniving at blackmail is that none of the men and women who subscribed to "Fads and Fancies" ever had the slightest objection to the price, which the petition for removal characterizes as "exorbitant."

Mr. Lauterbach asked the court to order the petitioners to present an amended petition, eliminating all allegations with respect to the acts or omissions of Justice Deuel prior to Jan. 1, 1904, since it was on that date that the respondent became a Special Sessions Justice. Counsel also asked that the amended petitioners "specifically and definitely allege the acts which they claim to constitute carrying on business, and the occasion and time of the occurrence of such acts."

DEUEL'S CONSCIENCE CLEAR.

So He Told Bar Association Committee, Asking Postponement of Inquiry.

Justice Deuel made public yesterday the letter he sent to the Bar Association's Committee on Grievances, in which he asked suspension of the inquiry of the association until an adjudication of his case by the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court. In his letter Justice Deuel says:

"Under ordinary circumstances I should welcome an inquiry by this association. I am conscious of having given my full time and capacity to the public service. I am unconscious of a single duty shirked, neglected, or indifferently performed. No hint of that kind has ever been made. I have not been content with the performance of routine work, but have spent nearly all my time off the bench in efforts to be publicly useful.

"I am not conscious of having violated the charter in carrying on business. The mere fact that I am ready to answer before the Appellate Division ought to be a strong factor with experienced lawyers to induce, meanwhile, suspension of judgment and action. I know how baseless are the cruel innuendoes forming portions of each of the before-mentioned complaints, which is bound to appear in a judicial investigation conducted under ordinarily unbiased methods.

"To proceed with the pending inquiry under these circumstances will seriously embarrass me. I am satisfied the members of the Committee on Grievances would not willingly lend themselves to such an iniquity and that your association itself would refuse to aid in a matter so palpably oppressive."

NOT GUILTY, SAYS MANN.

His Counsel Asks an Early Trial on the Perjury Charge.

A plea of not guilty to the charge of perjury growing out of his testimony during the Hapgood criminal libel trial was entered by Col. d'Alton Mann, editor of Town Topics, before Judge O'Sullivan in General Sessions yesterday. Martin W. Littleton urged that a speedy trial be granted his client.

"The defendant will have his day in court, when he may vindicate himself if he can," rejoined Mr. Jerome, "but the District Attorney will try the case when he is ready. It is within the province of the Judge to fix a day for trial."

Mr. Littleton persisted: "Will the District Attorney promise me—and I know he is an adept at making promises—that he will set the trial down for an early date?"

"I will arrange it just as soon as I can," said Mr. Jerome.

Col. Mann laughed heartily at his counsel's sally against the District Attorney.

Strike On at Submarine Boat Works.

A strike of machinists and helpers is on at the Electro-Dynamic Company's works in Bayonne, N. J., which makes electric and submarine boats. About ninety men went out a week ago after the refusal to grant a demand to increase their pay 35 cents a day. General Supt. Buckley said last night that about twenty-five of the old men had returned to work and that he had 250 applications for jobs.

And Have Her Marriage to the Brooklyn Banker Annulled—Police Haven't Found Him.

Assistant District Attorney Clarke, after a careful study of the case of Thomas W. Kiley, the missing Brooklyn banker, with two wives, declared yesterday that New York had no jurisdiction in the case, the bigamy having been committed in Indiana. Although detectives from Brooklyn Headquarters are still hunting for Kiley, if they succeed in finding his hiding place they cannot arrest him without a warrant from Indiana. As no complaint has been made in that State, the banker has a good chance of never answering criminal charges in court.

To have a warrant issued for his arrest in Indiana one of his wives will have to submit affidavits and make the charge, and there is every probability that both wives will refrain from proceeding in criminal courts. Mrs. Colt, Wife No. 2, has already settled her case as far as her civil claims are concerned. Her suit for $250,000 against Kiley was withdrawn and settled out of court for $150,000, it is understood. Mrs. Kiley has also been well looked after financially.

Mrs. Colt's son says that proceedings will be started to annul the bigamous marriage of Mr. Kiley and his mother. This proceeding will be merely for the sake of establishing the blamelessness of Mrs. Colt, it is said.

Kiley did not appear at any of his places of business yesterday, and all knowledge of his whereabouts was denied at Mrs. Colt's home, Mrs. Kiley's home, and by his counsel, Scott, Upson & Newcomb.

Kiley will, in all probability, remain under cover until he is assured that neither wife will make charges against him, and will then close up his business affairs in Brooklyn and retire from active business life.

The Directors of the North Side Bank will meet this morning, accept his resignation, and authorize a statement. In the meanwhile Kiley's stepsons and nephews are conducting the big business of the Kiley Hardware Company in Williamsburg. Mrs. Kiley is still prostrated at her home, and Mrs. Colt is under a physician's care.

At the Colt home yesterday it was emphatically denied that Kiley was hiding there or that Mrs. Colt had left the city with him.

Fashion never sets up any bar against covert top-coats for boys.

The short top-coat is too obviously the best style for an active boy, and covert cloth is too certainly the most boy-resisting of all light overcoatings.

So this season — as last, boys' covert top-coats are on top.

Sizes 9 to 16 years.
$9.50 to $14.

Men's covert coats ready too —they always have their place no matter how popular other styles may be.

A FRENCH "LIFE."

Mathilde Shaw's Entertaining "Illustres et Inconnus," With a Preface by Jules Claretie.*

By EDWARD CARY.

IN his sympathetic and extremely clever preface to the "Souvenirs" of Mme. Mathilde Shaw M. Jules Claretie declares that "whoever opens these pages will find, from the first to the last, sincere and much troubled, what Maupassant would call 'a life.'" And he adds: "I seem to hear the elder Dumas, laughing, cry out: 'Diable! You are sometimes very frank, but you are so good.' 'And,' would be the reply of the writer, 'I tell only what I have seen.'" To which M. Claretie adds an unqualified certificate of the "good faith" of Mme. Shaw. Here is for the reader, fatigued perhaps by current fiction, the promise of reality, and the promise is loyally fulfilled. Indeed, nearly forty years ago Dumas senior wrote to the author: "Your young life has already been filled with so many trials and strange things that there is stuff in it for a romance, which it would be interesting to write. Shall we join in it?" The proposition came to nothing, but the strange old story-teller, at this late date, has so far been allowed the rôle of collaborator that his character, his conduct, his unconscionable sayings, and even more unconscionable doings supply a very considerable part of Mme. Shaw's reminiscences, and by no means the least interesting.

⁂

MME. SHAW was the daughter of Charles Schoebel, an Orientalist of great erudition, and highly appreciated talent and scholarship. While she was still a child her parents separated on account of the mother's jealousy of another woman, an inmate of the household, who united devoted care for the child to equally devoted assistance to the father, whom her unusual intellect and culture enabled her to meet on the same plane. The mother carried the child to Italy, where both underwent strange experiences, and on returning placed her in a convent, from which she was reclaimed by the father. But when Mathilde protested against life with her former caretaker, she was finally allowed again to join the mother. She was early married to a Russian, by whom she had one child, and then was separated because, apparently, of his uncontrollable temper. Dependent on the modest income of her mother, she sought to add to it by curious ventures in literature, and would have gone on the stage had not the mother pitilessly opposed. Finally she married an American journalist. She traveled much, going on a strange mission, with a benefactress of the mother, to New Zealand, and afterward, with her American husband, living in the Far West, where she had many adventures.

The story of the sad breaking up of her parents' life in common, the portrayal of the contrasted characters of the two, the candid and intimate descriptions of the men she met under her father's roof, her own queer experiences in her restless efforts at earning a living, and—this especially—her artless recital of what she saw and heard of the elder Dumas—in all this Mme. Shaw gives her readers clear and significant glimpses of varied types of life. They are the more interesting for the simple and confiding way in which they are told. What she has to say of Dumas is perhaps the most interesting. He was an intimate, though he could never have been a sympathetic, friend of her father, and he had a genuine affection for the daughter, which manifested itself in the most amazing confidences and in counsels which, however well-intended, were atrociously immoral. She seems to have been strongly attracted to him, despite her genuine and strong aversion from his often disgusting associates. She describes with a naïveté difficult for people of the English-speaking races even to understand, much more to approve, numerous visits in which she encountered several of his "ribambelle de bonnes amies." She is equally frank in condemning the ill and in praising the good in this barbarian of genius, and her "indiscretions" throw a flood of light not only on him and his entourage, but on the society of which he was a conspicuous member.

⁂

THERE are other figures that imprinted themselves distinctly on the memory of Mme. Shaw, whose portrait, sketched more lightly than that of Dumas, contributes considerably to the interest of her "Souvenirs." One is Dumas the younger, whom she met, apparently, but once, after which she confided to him the impulse she had felt toward the life of the convent, and, oddly enough (she was but 15) made the confidence in verse. He replied in a perfectly kind, ironic, characteristic tone. One readily recognizes the tone of the modern moralist in such passages as this: "Permit me to ask, Mademoiselle, what is to become of your beloved mother? Do you not dread to begin this career of universal love by a manifestation of egoism? In this flight from the world, where your mother will remain in solitude, I readily see the Christian loving her God, but I no longer see the daughter loving her mother." The letter seems to have quieted the fervor of both daughter and mother for the plan proposed.

A very different figure from that of either Dumas was that of Ernest Renan, who was an intimate friend and companion of Charles Schoebel, the father of Mme. Shaw, until a difference as to the interpretation of a cuneiform inscription brought a rupture that was never healed. The delineation of Renan is charming in its simplicity, directness, and sincerity. On the whole, it is very favorable to the writer of the "Life of Christ," who, however, left on the mind of his youthful friend an impression of his sentimentality—not unnaturally—stronger than that of his intellectuality. One point is especially worth noting. The child of M. Schoebel was convinced that in his heart Renan never was quite free from the superstitions ingrained in the Breton nature, and she gives some curious incidents to sustain her conviction.

Mme. Shaw contemplates the publication of a translation of her little volume; with possibly some expurgation, it is likely to be popular.

STEPHEN PHILLIPS.

The English Poetical Dramatist's New Play, "Nero"—His Place as a Poet.*

Written for THE NEW YORK TIMES SATURDAY REVIEW OF BOOKS by MONTGOMERY SCHUYLER.

MR. STEPHEN PHILLIPS is one of not more than three or four living poets of whom the student of English literature finds himself compelled, in the interest of his study, to take account. To know the best that has been thought and said in the world is Matthew Arnold's description of culture. It includes a knowledge of the best that is being thought and said, or, as that austere purist, Richard Grant White, used to assure us that we ought rather to say, the best that is thinking and saying. To be "charged with knowledge" of all the aspiring writers of his own time looks a dismal doom for the disinterested student. Such a student, having always enough literature of the quality of which he is assured to employ his leisure, does not, as a rule, find himself compelled to look for the possible classic needle in the contemporary haystack, or the "two grains of wheat hid in two bushels of chaff." But such a student has now for some years found himself bound, in his own intellectual interest, to take note of Mr. Stephen Phillips. And the appearance, just now, of the latest of Mr. Phillips's productions in dramatic form, the tragedy of "Nero," may put him upon a general consideration of the author's work.

When he undertakes that, he is brought up, in the first instance, just as Matthew Arnold was brought up in his consideration of Gray, by the poet's "scantiness of production." It seems a queer complaint in the case of Gray. Gray himself might have reminded his critic of the "mute, inglorious Milton." The critic's assumption seems to be that a man must and will produce, that it is "laid upon him" to produce what he can produce. But everyday experience is against that assumption. As a rule, a man does what he has to do, what he does for his living. The potential Milton may be mute and inglorious, not only like Gray's, because he is illiterate, but also because it does not pay him to be vocal and glorious. An artist remarked of another artist, so bent upon doing some altar pieces that he was only hesitating about whether he would get back the price of his pigments: "Why does he do it if it does not pay him? I can get along without painting saints. Can't you?" Evidently Gray could "get along" without writing more "Odes" or "Elegies." Apparently Mr. Phillips can get along without writing more poetic dramas. Really, the ordinary British explanation of "private means" is a good enough working hypothesis to account for his "scantiness of production." And yet the scantiness is noteworthy. Mr. Phillips is by no means an old man. And yet it is a documented fact that he began to publish sixteen years ago, and another that his total output up to date is half a dozen thin duodecimos which it required profuse "leading" and other resources of the publisher's art to extend each to the negotiable extent of 200 pages. It is quite absurd to suppose that the scantiness is because he has been using a file and consuming midnight oil, all this while in the intervals of these miniature publications, on the material thereof. Absurd in his case because it is so plain that he is a brilliant improvisatore, that his are "profuse strains of unpremeditated art." The plain fact is that he has been doing something else. We have, quite advisedly, described Mr. Phillips as a poetic dramatist rather than as a dramatic poet. What dramatic poet means we all have a sufficiently distinct notion, as to the moderns.

*NERO. By Stephen Phillips. New York: The Macmillan Company.

Browning is a dramatic poet. Swinburne is a dramatic poet. Tennyson, lovely lyrist that he is, fell between the two stools and is, in his dramas, so-called, neither dramatist nor poet. The drama was not his vocation. He was extraneously attracted to it, possibly, by the knowledge of its greater gainfulness, and produced plays not one of which would have been produced on any stage but for the immense and merited vogue of its author, attained in other fields. He sold his birthright for a mess of pottage, and did not get the pottage. Browning's dramas and Swinburne's are very plainly, as they used to say, "for the closet." Mr. Phillips has had the enormous advantage of an actual apprenticeship to the stage, such as Shakespeare had before him, having, as nobody who reads him will be disposed to deny, the additional advantage of a keen poetical sensibility. Those who believe in a revival of the stage as a serious form of art or a medium of reproducing for our generation the miracle of the Elizabethan drama, according to our talents and lights, might be easily forgiven for pinning their hopes on Mr. Phillips as a man of distinct and high poetical endowment, who yet knows, or may be presumed to know, what will "go" on the actual stage.

⁂

THIS present tragedy of "Nero" is the latest of the achievements by which Mr. Phillips has attained this position. It is not, to our thinking, the most important. In fact, it reminds one much more of the modern German dramatists than of the Elizabethans, or even of the classical German dramatists, of Goethe and Schiller; of the modern German dramatists who take heroic and historical themes. Of them the late Augustin Daly complained that their characters "talk a great deal about what they have been doing, but do nothing." Doubtless they talk very good German about it. And certainly Mr. Phillips's characters talk very good English about it, excellent English, poetic English. The "leit motif" of this present drama is, we will not say a rehabilitation, but a "historical synthesis," if that be the latest expression, of the character of Nero. Historically, Nero will take a great deal of rehabilitating. Dramatically, Mr. Phillips has reconstructed the accepted portraiture of him with great skill, and one doubts not with abundant knowledge. His Tacitus, his Suetonius, not to speak of such "secondary authorities" as his Gibbon, are always in the dramatist's possession and view. The conception of the burner of Christian torches, the murderer of his mother, the puppet of his Jewish mistress, Poppaea; the virtuoso who saw in burning Rome the opportunity for a violin solo, is the basis of this tragedy. Nero is here a degenerate aesthete, a late Roman Oscar Wilde, and the famous "Qualis artifex pereo" might be the motif of the tragedy. Oscar Wilde, "Imperator," or Augustus is, in fact, Mr. Phillips's Nero.

⁂

ONE must have his doubts. How any human community could at any time have accepted that variety of person as "serious," let alone as a "ruler," is one of the things which the drama omits to make plain. One may own that questions like this may be waived in the presence of a compelling scene. But one does not infer the compelling scene from the printed text, whether in the murder of Agrippina or in the burning of Rome. And those felicities of diction which so abound in "Paolo and Francesca" and in "Ulysses," which show that the poet has read his Tennyson to the utmost advantage, are by no means so frequent or so striking here. One cannot at all imagine "Nero" as "going" on the stage. One cannot help feeling that it does not quite go in the "closet." And yet it is by no means a waste of time to read it. Contrariwise, one is rather grateful to the urgent friends who have impelled him to that task. For Mr. Phillips has always, or almost always, a felicity and a dignity of diction which are worthy of studious consideration, and this possession does not fail him in "Nero." Neither does that sort and variety of imagination which presents a scene to the reader in the "closet," if not to the spectator of its presentation on the stage. "Nero," one judges, will not add to the author's claims as a regenerator of the contemporary English-speaking stage. But it will not deprive him of his laurels as one of the very few contemporary English-writing poets.

THE RUSSIAN NEMESIS.

MR. CARL JOUBERT made a name with his first two books on Russia which we think he will throw away with his third book, "The Fall of Tsardom." (Philadelphia: The J. B. Lippincott Company.) This volume consists of threatenings against the Russian Government, and reminiscences of what has happened in the past after similar threats had been made. Doubtless there is a basis for all Mr. Joubert's utterances; but certain statements regarding this country, for example, are so far from correct, and so wild in their carelessness, as to throw doubt on any of his statements that cannot be proved independently.

Mr. Joubert describes the Pilgrims of the Mayflower as "fanatics and murderers, one hundred and two in number, and when they landed * * * they instituted a reign of terror which has no parallel in history." He continues:

> The Russian moujik—ignorant, savage, drunken, as he is—cannot be compared with the Pilgrim Fathers, nor with their offshoots of to-day in the Southern States of America. When the Russian moujik gets his liberty * * * it will not be possible for one man to buy up the entire Legislature of a State, as J. Gould bought the State Congressmen of New York at Albany, and thereby saved himself from the fate of his partner, Ferdinand Ward, who went to prison. And I do not think that the system of registering voters, even if devised by the ignorant moujiks themselves, will make it possible for 18,000 votes to be cast in a place having only 3,000 inhabitants, as happened lately at Gravesend, N. Y.

If Mr. Joubert's earlier books contained equally interesting information about the United States it is easy to see why they are so popular in England, and why one should hesitate about accepting statements referring to Russia with entire confidence.

Yet the book is interesting, even if not convincing. Mr. Joubert's argument that the moujiks are ready and fit for freedom, even if not for the suffrage, will not be disputed by any one.

> I fail to see what reading and writing have to do with the rights of man. A man can exercise the freedom of the subject and of conscience without any klowledge of the letters of the alphabet. He can practice all the virtues of citizenship, though he be unable to sign his name. * * * The rose is totally illiterate yet she perfumes the garden and delights the eye. Nature has fashioned mankind by the same laws. Are we to deny to men the freedom which Nature has given to all living things, simply because they can neither read nor write?

It is proof of Mr. Joubert's earnestness, if not of his judgment, that he compares the Russian moujik to the rose.

The two chapters on "The Revolutionary Committee" are interesting in a certain way; their author is somewhat orphic—"I could say such things; What they are, yet I know not; but they shall be The terrors of the earth"—but one expects orphic utterances about revolutionary committees. Mr. Joubert ascribes all progress (assassination is a form of progress in Russia) to the Committee with as much solemnity as Mr. Lawson claims credit for all the exposures and changes of the last year. In this chapter he remarks:

> Nicholas Alexandrovitch need have no fear for his life. He can leave his palace with safety, for no hand will be raised against him. The Executive Committee is watching over him; had it been otherwise, no palace on earth would have been strong enough to preserve him. But, for the present, at least, no advantage is to be gained by taking his life—it is not of sufficient importance.

The Executive Committee of the Revolutionary Committee is preparing a Constitution for Russia. "They have the magnificent theories of the American Constitution and the sounder practice of the British to guide them. All should go well with them," continues Mr. Joubert, "so long as they do not consult Tammany Hall for practice and the National Liberal Club for theory." Mr. Joubert reveals a knowledge of British politics and a superficial knowledge of New York politics; it is possible that he knows as much about Russia as his book suggests.

STATESMEN.

C. W. Thompson's Sketches of the Contemporary Political Stage and the Players Thereon.

IN something of the spirit of the confirmed first-nighter who writes about the players on that stage which has grown to be the breath of life to him, Mr. Charles Willis Thompson, Washington correspondent of THE NEW YORK TIMES, has made a book about American politicians. The G. W. Dillingham Company publishes the volume under the title "Party Leaders of the Time." As the glamour of the footlights holds the first-nighter, so the fascination of the political game holds Mr. Thompson. He does not miss the humors of the "statesman," or, indeed, any trait or trick of his that an open-eyed critic would mark in an actor, but he sees all statesmen in a peculiar radiance. The critic does not let his calcium glorify all the players upon a glorified stage, but every one of Mr. Thompson's sketches, however picturesque the characterizations and original, the point of view, is an appreciation. To be sure, Mr. Thompson is not a critic. He is an observer, intent on making striking pen pictures at once original, broadly true, and—kind. In putting in the bold strokes and high lights of any one picture he has had in mind generally only the effectiveness of that one picture. Now that they are hung in a gallery together, the complete effectiveness of each single picture destroys more or less the total effect, and gives an impression of exaggeration. Everybody is painted large, and each much of the same bigness.

This is a consequence of the manner of making the book—the original drafts of the separate sketches, or most of them, were written from time to time as newspaper stories for THE NEW YORK TIMES—and is no part of the author's intention. For the rest, Mr. Thompson has provided at once the most original, instructive, and entertaining account of contemporary public men as the Washington correspondents know them which is anywhere to be found. Certain following extracts from his text will go some way to show that, as well as to exhibit the author's lively style, his dramatic sense, his sharp eye, his clear brain, and his enthusiasm.

MR. THOMPSON touches first upon Mr. Roosevelt, of course, but only lightly, insisting upon the President's impulsiveness as the key of his character and at once his strength and weakness, and then takes up those "bosses" of the Senate, who have latterly given Mr. Roosevelt so much trouble. Mr. Thompson reveals the workings of the Senate "ring," and the parts therein played by Senators Aldrich, Hale, Spooner, and Allison and the late Senator Platt of Connecticut. Aldrich is a "chess player with men." Hale is the floor leader, Spooner, the speechmaker, Allison, "the political forecaster, the compromiser, the weather prophet." Where these four are gathered together policies are made. Among these men, snugly closeted in Hale's little committee room, are the great debates of the Senate.

"The public debates to which the eager-eyed tourists listen so reverently are," declares Mr. Thompson, "in the nature of a dramatic performance. They have nothing to do with legislation to be enacted. Oftentimes the real debate is over and the whole question settled before the mock debate in the Senate begins." However, things do occur in these "mock" debates. Here is a passage from the chapter entitled "The Recreations of John C. Spooner":

> The Senate is droning along. Some prosy Senator has the floor; the chamber is half empty, and nobody is paying any attention to the speaker. The door opens and the mischievous Spooner drifts in. He stands in the aisle a moment with his hands behind his back, surveying the pastoral scene. He catches the last sentence of the droning Senator—the only one he has heard in the speech—and it supplies him with a text. In his suave and gentle manner he begs leave to interrupt. Instantly every Senatorial eye is fixed on Spooner and his victim, and a fearful joy fills every Senatorial face. In a moment the scene is transformed; the prosy Senator is talking four ways at once and with every sentence of his comes an interruption from Spooner barbed with sarcasm. The other Senator is perspiring and red-faced; he has forgotten what he wants to say, and is getting into deeper water every moment. Some other Senator rushes to his aid, and in a moment the mischief-maker from Wisconsin has them both tangled up and is juggling with them like a slight-of-hand man who is keeping a lot of glass balls in the air at once. When he has got the Senate thoroughly waked up and his victims desperate he grins a wide satisfied grin, and steps out again.

⁂

SO Mr. Thompson passes to other Senators, to the late Mr. Hoar, to the late Mr. Hanna, (and the vendetta of Hanna and Pettigrew,) to ancient Mr. Platt of New York, to Mr. Bailey, whose evolution into a statesman he traces with much cleverness and humor; to Benjamin R. Tillman, latest ally of an admired President. Mr. Thompson's sketch of Mr. Tillman is one of the very best things in the book. "Why," says the correspondent, "does he spread abroad the idea that he is a wild man politically; that he drinks blood and eats raw meat, when he is as level-headed and sane a man as the world ever saw?" And he has no answer. Another entertaining sketch, and one of the few calculated to give the subject real pain, is that of Mr. Beveridge, "the grand young man of Indiana," the perennial "boy orator," the man "with what Dickens described in Mr. Podsnap as a 'fatal freshness'"—especially that part of the sketch which describes the suppression of the "or-a-tor" by the venerable Pettus of Alabama. "While the old man was doing this dreadful deed," says Mr. Thompson, "the President of the Senate, gavel in hand, lay back in his chair, howling like a hyena."

⁂

FROM the Senate we pass to the House, and the plain lay citizen gets for the first time something like an understanding of what the famous Committee on Rules is and does—which involves sketches of those celebrated "stand-patters," Mr. Dalzell of Pennsylvania and Mr. Grosvenor of Ohio, (lately so curiously snuffed out,) with expositions of the parliamentary methods of each and illustrative anecdotes. Thus: Representative Vandiver of Missouri, speaking of Grosvenor as the gentleman from Ohio, was asked to specify which one: "Being prohibited by the rules," replied he, "from mentioning the name of the gentleman from Ohio, and yet desiring to answer the question, I will designate him as the gentleman from Ohio who looks like Santa Claus and talks like Satan." Of Sereno E. Payne, Chairman of Ways and Means, it is said that his "kindly smile is something he cannot help—he would if he could." Then the talk passes to Speaker Cannon, and the efforts of photographers to "give him a stern and statesmanlike look"; also the explosion of the popular notion that the Speaker's business is to preside over the debates of the House. "As a matter of fact, when the big bills are being debated, the Speaker is not in the chair more than half an hour a day." Next, this picture of "Uncle Joe" on the floor as official watchdog of the Treasury:

> He was a sight worth seeing when a debate was on. His delivery was slashing, sledge-hammery, full of fire and fury. When he got thoroughly interested in his subject, the fact was made known in an infallible way. On such occasions he would take off his coat and throw it on his desk. Provoked by opposition, and getting warmed to his subject, his waistcoat would follow his coat; and if the occasion was of sufficient moment to warrant it, off would come collar and necktie.

⁂

MR. THOMPSON is an admirer of the minority leader, John Sharp Williams, a sketch of whom follows that of Cannon, and is succeeded by a chapter entitled "The Rebellions of Tawney." This sets forth how James A. Tawney of Minnesota, "the incorrigible, untamable wild Indian," has at divers times got off the Republican reservation and defied the almighty Committee on Rules—and lived. So in 1902 Mr. Tawney gathered a band of insurgents and defeated Cuban reciprocity, and again very lately he was near doing things to the celebrated Statehood bill—the President's favorite. However, he left that for the Senate. Other House sketches are those of Bourke Cockran—the latest grown-up Bourke Cockran, as Mr. Thompson conceives him; of Littlefield of Maine, and that most remarkable of all Congressmen, Mr. Hearst of New York, with an essay on the machine of Sidney E. Mudd of Maryland. Whereof the secret:

> If a constituent of Mudd wants a job he is pretty sure to get it. If there is no place in the Government service Mudd finds him one somewhere. When you ride on a Washington street car the conductor who rings up your fare is a Mudd constituent; the motorman who stops to let you on is from Mudd's district, and the inspector who comes in to look at the register is a subject, too. The guides in the Capitol are largely Mudd men. The indignation of Congressmen has been aroused because when they go into the House restaurant they cannot get waited on, while every waiter in the place flies to Mudd. "Marse Sidney" got them all their jobs.

⁂

LEAVING Congress Mr. Thompson provides sketches of other men—of the late John Hay and his place in American diplomacy, of Elihu Root and the humors of interviewing the Secretary of War, when Mr. Root and the Secretary of War were one; of William H. Taft, "spokesman of the Administration," a "mighty hustler," but one who hustles calmly, who "goes riding and wears a riding costume more wonderful than his chief's, the spectacle of his immense legs athwart a heroically resigned horse really more worthy of preservation than the black slouch hat and combination of statesman's coat and weird breeches which distinguish the President."

After Taft, Mr. Thompson writes of Philander C. Knox, of Robert J. Wynne, who discovered and smashed the Post Office Department ring, of Mr. Ware, the poet Pension Commissioner, who was so cruel as to insist on making his clerks work full time, and of one diplomat—Count Cassini, so long dean of the corps in Washington. He goes outside of Washington for sketches of Bryan, Mayor Weaver of Philadelphia, Gov. Higgins of New York, and Timothy Woodruff of Brooklyn. In the first sketch particularly there is a most remarkably dramatic account of what the Nebraskan did at the last Democratic National Convention in St. Louis.

Not the least interesting chapter in the whole book, however, is that which deals briefly with the life and character of the late Elbridge Gerry Dunnell, for twenty years correspondent of THE NEW YORK TIMES in Washington and for many years head of the official Press Committee there. From it the reader may learn something of a little understood institution whose power in these days it is hard to overrate, as well as something of the value of force of character in that institution. This sketch includes, too, some singularly eloquent and illuminating anecdotes.

ENGLAND AND AMERICA

"With John Bull and Jonathan," the Record of the Experiences of John Morgan Richards.*

WHETHER on pleasure or on business bent, the American sojourner in London does not pass many weeks in the metropolis without meeting John Morgan Richards, the worthy doyen of the American colony and incidentally the father of the well-known novelist John Oliver Hobbes.

Mr. Richards landed in England in 1867, and has resided there ever since, save for rare visits made to this country, sometimes, as last Fall, with his talented daughter for company. In London Mr. Richards is known as a very successful business man. There he has met many famous personages, arising in part from his family position in America, and further from his ever-ready sympathy with his own countrymen in times both prosperous and adverse, and from his intimate intercourse with the growing American colony from the day of his arrival. He was President of the American Society in London from 1901 to 1902, and is now a Church Warden at the City Temple, which was so many years presided over by the famous Dr. Parker. In the meantime he has seen his daughter, Pearl Richards, grow up and make a distinguished name for herself among the novelists of the day. Naturally, a man so placed must have observed interesting things, and what is more natural than that he should make a book of them?

This is what Mr. Richards has done. He calls his book "With John Bull and Jonathan." Mr. Richards has, fortunately, not attempted to do those things which others with a more confined horizon and more conscious of a mission have done. He gives no advice to "pilgrims" from either land, while scenery and vital statistics and political comment are all eschewed. To use his own words, his "wish has been to give, in pleasant outlines, sketches of those with whom I have had social or business relations, how we fared together and apart." Naturally, contrasts—social, commercial, personal—are made, questions are answered, but the real value and interest of the book lie in the weight of the author's personal opinions, impressions, and judgments. That will be found sufficient for most readers.

MR. RICHARDS'S chief training in the United States was the preparation of advertisements and the issue of advertising literature as belonged to the publication department of such a business. Following out this experience he began to "post up London" and to attempt to induce the great London and provincial newspapers to drop the obstacles they had hitherto placed against "display advertising." How he succeeded and finally introduced the illustrated "ad" and gradually developed it into an "art" form early topics of the book, which may be read with profit by all students of publicity. Next he introduced the cheap American cigarette and the American patent medicine, and the pathway to fame and fortune was open to him. Tobacco and nostrums were ever dear to the great heart of the British lower middle class.

As the son and grandson of Presbyterian ministers it was natural that Mr. Richards could not remain long in London without coming under the influence of some eloquent divine. With American influences still dominant, he sought for a Henry Ward Beecher, a Dr. John Hall, a T. De Witt Talmage all in one, and he found them, too, all in the Rev. Dr. Joseph Parker, who was then conducting services temporarily at the Cannon Street Hotel. From that time until his death, in 1902, Dr. Parker saw or heard from the American enthusiast every week. In 1886 Mr. Beecher and his wife visited England and met the Parkers, "and," continues Mr. Richards, "I have often heard Dr. and Mrs. Parker say how greatly cheered they were by Mr. Beecher's visit and astonished at his wonderful powers and vitality, and that his amusing companionship had greatly delighted them, and they were very reluctant to part when the time came for Mr. Beecher and his wife to return to New York. They remained in England three months, and during the first month of the lecture tour Dr. and Mrs. Parker accompanied them to every important place where Mr. Beecher had to lecture. Dr. Parker was with him on the platform of every place where he lectured in London."

Concerning the famous London preacher of the City Temple, Mr. Richards has much to say—the quarrel with Major Pond, the lecture manager; Dr. Parker's tour of America, his apt phrases, habits, and idiosyncrasies. All is set off with a fine sympathetic touch of personal esteem and admiration.

⁂

FROM the beginning of the acquaintance Dr. Parker took a deep interest in Mr. Richards's eldest daughter, Pearl. Later the clergyman wrote of her: "How did she begin the world of letters? I can tell you. She has always been a devotee of the family ink-horn, and early she went in even for printers' ink. Probably I was the first editor who received and printed the writings of Pearl Richards. Do you wonder, then, that I feel upon my face a sheen of reflected glory?"

Dr. Parker delighted to show his friends the copy of her first book of any size—"A Study in Temptations," which she inscribed: "To my first reviewer, Dr. Joseph Parker, the first also to encourage my childish attempts at literary composition; the first to prize work which was only remarkable for its gigantic intentions."

At school the later-to-be "John Oliver Hobbes" trotted about with a copy of Thackeray in her bag. Her first compositions in fiction took a singular turn:

> She wrote for the maidservants letters to their sweethearts, which she embellished with stories of their having been seen walking out with other young women. These drew out indignant denials from some, coupled with the advice to look better after her mistress's children, and not go spying after them; while others made penitent admissions of their guilt, and promised never more to go out with the rival again. The dramatic genius was so strong that she entreated me to buy a theatre for her, with pasteboard figures representing the characters; and she would invent the story to fit the drama, making little speeches for each character as she pushed them on to the stage. In this way she gave us "The Story of Angelina and Her Cruel Lover," and "The Murderer and the Ghosts of His Victims." This dramatic enthusiasm, I should confess, she must have inherited from me.

Mr. Richards had known Joseph Jefferson and Edwin Forrest in America, and the theatre as it was here before the civil war is among his earliest recollections. His acquaintance with the people of the London stage, as he found it in 1867, soon broadened. We have a picture of the London theatres as they were in that and the following year. He has ever since enjoyed a large acquaintance among theatrical people.

Mr. Richards compares the cost of living in England with that in the United States. Both are cheap enough, if you know how to manage. The greater privacy of English hotels early impressed him, as did also the numerous "extras." "In the matter of housekeeping expenses I am bound to say that there are ways of living very cheaply in London; but if you were to consider the cost as a whole, with a house and one or two servants, the expense would equal that of any important city in the United States." And the information that follows is likely to be of more value to British readers of "With John Bull and Jonathan" than it is to American.

⁂

FROM the promotion of "artistic advertising" by American methods to the publicity of literary wares à la Américaine was but a step, and Mr. Richards took it. In 1894 he became proprietor of The Academy, a literary weekly which reckoned some distinguished names among its post contributors—Prof. Huxley, William Morris, Walter Pater, R. L. Stevenson, Andrew Lang.

> In order to increase the interest in this paper I offered in 1897, 1898, and 1899 prizes of 100 guineas and 50 guineas for the two best books of the season, the scheme being termed "Academy Crowning," and the readers of the journal voting the awards. Thus in 1897 Mr. Stephen Phillips was awarded the 100 guineas for his volume of poems, including "Marpessa," and Mr. William Ernest Henley received 50 guineas for his "Essay on the Life, Genius, and Achievement of Burns." In 1898 Mr. Sidney Lee received 50 guineas for his Life of Shakespeare, Mr. Maurice Hewlett 50 guineas for "The Forest Lovers," and Mr. Joseph Conrad a similar sum for "Tales of Unrest." For 1899 there were so many competitors selected that six sums of 25 guineas were awarded, and these were taken by Mr. W. B. Yeats for "The Wind Among the Reeds," by Miss Gwendoline Keats for "On Trial," Mr. Hilaire Belloc for "Danton: A Study," and Mr. G. M. Trevelyan for "England in the Age of Wycliffe."

Mr. Richards's experiences with English social country life were gained through renting and owning property. In 1899 he took Norris Castle, in East Cowes; in 1900, "Old Park," the estate of the late William Spindler, Esq., and in 1903 he purchased Steephill Castle. Americans desiring to settle in rural England will find much valuable advice in these pages.

IN THE WEST OF ENGLAND.

THE camera is the real author of Mr. Fletcher Moss's book, "Pilgrimages to Old Homes," (New York: The John Lane Company.) Without it, Mr. Moss would never have written the book; he doesn't say so, but, looking at the pictures and reading what he has written about them, it is easy to decide for one's self.

There are some 230 illustrations, and all seem to be good, though some are more interesting than others. They show a small portion of the most beautiful and less-known part of England—the old manor houses and halls and castles, where history, our history, has been made. The series of pictures begins with Wells Cathedral—the see is united with that of Bath, and one Bishop rules both, and wisely lives at Wells—and Glastonbury, where Joseph of Arimathea died, having planted his staff, which always blossomed at Christmas; where Arthur, "flos regum," is buried; where St. Dunstan tweaked the devil's nose with his red-hot tongs, and it continues through Lytes Cary, Norton St. Philip, Wrexham, (where Elihu Yale is buried,) Warwick, Worcester, Tewksbury, Huddington Court—one of the places where the gunpowder plot was hatched—and The Ridings; west of England places, most of them of the second degree of importance, but not the less interesting.

Mr. Moss's literary contribution to the volume may be ignored. But for his ability as a photographer, one may in justice have only praise.

A Story of Surprises.

THE GOLDEN GREYHOUND. By Dwight Tilton. Illustrated by E. Pollak. Boston: Lothrop, Lee & Shepard Company. $1.50.

Two negatives make a positive, the grammarians tell us. Similarly, perhaps, two improbabilities make a possibility, and several such possibilities make a modern novel.

The improbability of a man in his senses, but without a cent in his pocket, following a pretty face seen "in a snowstorm outside Tiffany's" even to the jaws of the Golden Greyhound, which turns out to be not a dog but an ocean liner, is followed up in its turn by other improbabilities of varied and amusing as well as amazing sort.

When at length the whole plot is unraveled, when the last surprise of all comes in the shape of the rightful captain's release and the happy disposing of the two scoundrels, (one of whom chances to be the twin brother of that captain) in soundless ocean, then the apparently impossible is the only possible denouement and nobody is aghast at hearing that the impetuous hero and Marion Dennison hold a conversation that is completed by "an adorable smile."

"Old Washington."

There are five stories in Mrs. Harriet Prescott Spofford's new book, "Old Washington," which Little, Brown & Co. are publishing to-day. The tales are of a Thanksgiving breakfast, a "guardian angel," a conspiracy, a "little old woman," and a "Colonel's Christmas" in the City of Washington just after the close of the civil war. The stories are akin in interest and theme, some of the characters appearing in all. A frontispiece has been provided by George A. Williams.

TEN YEARS MORE OF ENGLISH HISTORY.

The Fourth Volume of Herbert Paul's History of England Since 1840 Not So Good as Its Predecessors.*

Written for THE NEW YORK TIMES SATURDAY REVIEW OF BOOKS by CHRISTIAN GAUSS.

IF it were possible to give an adequate account of the character and environment of Mr. Herbert Paul, a large part of his historical writing, and he seems lately to have veered strongly to that side, would be acceptably explained. He has no sympathy with Bury's method, and Freeman, who said "that history is a science, nothing more, nothing less," is to Mr. Paul a particular and favorite aversion. It is fair to say "favorite," for he is of those who in a paradoxical sort of way seem to cherish their enemies and return to the charge with delight. So it is that the name of that splenitive regius professor, who was bold enough to register the murderous wish that he might one day live "to disembowel James Anthony Froude" is often impaled on the pen of Mr. Paul, and of the definition quoted above he would very probably say that when Freeman wrote it, in his fumbling way, history was certainly nothing more than a science—it was very often something less. For Mr. Paul takes time for such statement even in mid-history, and his discourse is often salt. To show his preferences yet more clearly, it is only necessary to call attention to his late biography of Froude, in which he has played the rôle of the impassioned advocate for the now somewhat discredited apostle of the dramatic in history. In short, Mr. Paul does not even follow that happy via media of those who believe that history should be both a science and an art. For him it is entirely the latter, an amalgam of fact and personal opinion, relieved occasionally by a brilliant obituary. Although he does not go so far as Mr. Chesterton, with whom, by the way, he has much in common, and declare that the facts misrepresent, his practice everywhere shows that he believes that the historian's highest function is to vivify and interpret fact, and not impartially to record. He exemplifies his belief with remarkable success.

Mr. Paul has recently been styled the most brilliant of contemporary journalists; there are very few who could without effrontery dispute him that title. He has all that is best in the too often disprized craft of journalism. Alertness of mind and the ability to visualize and present pointedly are his to an extraordinary degree. They give his work all the sprightliness of a contemporary record. A Home Ruler, and for a time a member of the House of Commons, he has been initiated into the secrets of parliamentary procedure and is rarely blinded by party manoeuvre. He has had personal acquaintance with many of the leaders who have shaped the later history of the Island Empire, and since, on so late a period, biographical works are necessarily rare, in the matter of sources he has not disdained to make use of the newspaper file, and has occasionally garnered information from conversations held with the more recent makers of England's history. His book is therefore somewhat unique.

⁂

THE completed history will count five volumes. He begins with the Repeal of the Corn Laws, and the last volume will bring us down to the immediate present. Volume IV., now before us, deals with the rather uneventful decade 1875-1885. It saw the abandonment of Disraeli's imperialistic policy, brought about, in large measure, Mr. Paul thinks, by the failure of Lord Lytton's aggressive measures in India. In the course of the narrative Disraeli is in the main treated as the somewhat theatrical dilettante, which in one sense and at one time he was, and the author repeatedly accuses him of his failure to take Egypt in 1878, forgetting England's obligations and the very serious international disputes to which at that time such a seizure would undoubtedly have given rise. Disraeli's official conduct is certainly not always above criticism, yet here he was acting for England's honor and England's good. Though Mr. Paul criticises his actors sharply while they are still upon the stage, once they make their final exits, to such as are worthy he consecrates elaborate and occasionally flattering eulogies. Thus his estimate of Beaconsfield at the time of his death is fairer than his account of his career. It will serve, also, as a fair example of his brilliant and here and there careless style.

He had both the sense of perspective and largeness of mind. Although he was not wholly exempt from that insolence born of prosperity which the Greeks regarded as an unpardonable sin, his reason was unaffected by the fumes even of royal flattery, and he did not feel when he had been turned out of office that the world was coming to an end. He could play upon the House, as he said of Peel, like an old fiddle, and rarely indeed did he mistake its temper or clash with its tone. His early eccentricities of costume were dropped when they had served their purpose by attracting attention, and he relied upon the more legitimate method of elaborately careless epigram. Justly proud as he was to be thought a man of letters, Disraeli was before all things a politician. In politics he lived and moved and had his being. They led him in course of time from Westminster to Windsor, and there he became an incomparable courtier. After the royal titles act, if not before, his Sovereign was really his subject. It was one of the few misfortunes in a long career of dazzling success that when Disraeli achieved real power he was past the age when mental effort is a pleasure. Nothing became him better than the method of his leaving power. If he was not always moderate in prosperity he was always dignified in adversity, and could live in the recollections of the past without repining at the necessities of the present.

⁂

THE Irish question naturally forces itself upon the historian of this decade, and it was to be expected that with his political sympathies Mr. Paul would give it due attention. This in fact he does. It was the time when Parnell first came prominently before the public, and in this case the author does not swerve from the path of historical accuracy to grant that Irish agitator any indulgence. The agrarian outrages of 1881-2 are treated at length under the rather portentous caption "The Irish Revolution." India, Africa, Gordon and the Soudan, and the Franchise bill of 1884 occupy the bulk of the writer's space, and almost everywhere they are treated from the point of view of the Parliament. A chapter on Church and State gathers up many loose strands touching religious and literary activity, as well as gives a rather brief account of the gradual change taking place in the personnel of the House. Mr. Paul laments the increasing power of money in a way not unheard on this side of the Atlantic. Under the guise of democratic forms, he says, England was passing from aristocracy to plutocracy, from the control of a class to the control of a purse. If there had been no Egyptian bondholders in the country there would have been no interference with Arabi, no campaign in the Soudan, no fall of Khartoum, no loss of Gordon; and politics, we are told, became less of a taste and more of a trade.

> Reasonable expectation of office keeps up a high level among a limited class. The rank and file have tended to become the nominees of the caucus, often brilliant and capable men, but devoted to their party rather than to the House of Commons. It is not the intellectual average of the House which has thus been lowered, but its independence and corporate spirit. If a Minister has a majority he can do what he likes.

It is strange to hear one who begins his history with the forties speaking thus of the England of the eighties. That the caucus had come in and that the sense of party affiliations had grown stronger, is, of course, true, and to the student of constitutional government it shows merely that such evils as are inherent in party government cannot forever be avoided. It is hardly true, however, that later Parliaments were less devoted to England's interests or less efficient, nor will this fact explain all the difficulties that Mr. Paul counts up to its score. So much emphasis does he lay upon this condition that when he turns his attention to other very important economic and sociological questions he occasionally shows a lack of patience or profundity. This, indeed, is the main defect in his history.

⁂

IT would be unfair to say that anything Mr. Paul does is a disappointment. He has too many qualities that are rare—dash, brilliancy, keen understanding of men and motives—to justify such statement. Yet after the brave beginnings of his earlier volumes we are not quite satisfied with this one. The large stream of history seems to be losing itself in sands. To be sure one can hardly expect posterity's perspective at an interval of twenty years. Yet much that seems patent has here been overlooked or ignored. The author is like the dramatist who, forgetting that the play's the thing and tired of his action, rushes feverishly on to his fifth act: he seems continually hurrying to a dénouement, and unfortunately in history we are painfully aware that there never can be any. For Mr. Paul conceivably there might be one if the Houses of Parliament should by some dire event be suddenly swept away. For him history is made within four walls; these are the mills of the gods. Yet there have been momentous changes in England, and in the England of this decade, with which Parliament had nothing to do, but with which present historians and future Parliaments must reckon—in fact, are even now reckoning. Industrial, and in particular agricultural, conditions have been rapidly changing.

In England the factory was bidding for the farmhand, and England was being forced to change her kind of production. Immensely fertile and as yet unexploited grain fields were being made accessible in distant quarters, and the old English farmer was forced into a kind of competition he had never yet met, and was perhaps destined not to meet in kind. In the consequent readjustment much hardship was necessarily caused. The disturbances between tenant and landlord then so prevalent might have served Mr. Paul as a valuable index. Instead he consigns the English farmer to the limbo of his disregard, and seems to think that he has done his duty when he curtly says: "The British farmers were not an enterprising class, and many of them were ruined because they did not conduct their business on commercial principles." The day has passed when the serious historian could have taken that attitude. C. G.

LABOR.

LABOUR LEGISLATION, LABOUR MOVEMENTS, AND LABOUR LEADERS. By George Howell, F. S. S., ex-M. P. Portrait. In two volumes. Pp. 499. New York: E. P. Dutton & Co. $2.50.

IT is easy to understand the British approval which carried these volumes into a second edition, for they are an excellent epitome of the amelioration of British statutes regarding labor. There has been a similar emancipation on this side of the ocean, but the destination has been reached by such different routes that American interest in the details of which Mr. Howell's book is composed is not very great, except for specialists. There is nothing of praise of the good old times in these volumes. Their burden is not "the world went very well then," but "the world goes much better now." Perhaps it is not strange that the start was made earlier in the younger country. It is surprising to read that so late as 1868 only an inconsiderable proportion of British workingmen were voters, and that the majority of them were unenfranchised in 1884. Not until 1874 were there any laborite Commoners, and in 1880 there was only a total of three. In less than a generation they have come to be a recognized force, with numbers adequate to hold a balance of power in some contingencies, and with a Minister in the Cabinet. The Saturday half-holiday movement dates from the erection of the Houses of Parliament, the workmen striking for that purpose. The shorter hours movement followed. Twelve to fourteen hours were no unusual stint, and they meant hours of work, with no allowance for frequent overtime and without allowance for walking miles to and from the shop.

Now there is an eight or nine hour day, with cheap trains especially for workmen. Attempts to unite for remedying the disabilities of labor were obstructed by the statute against conspiracies, which were enforced against laborers, but not against employers. Quite possibly capital might have preserved its privileges some generations longer had it not been for the change wrought by invention and the introduction of machinery. With the invention of the loom and the establishment of factories, the old relations between master and man were revolutionized. Collective bargaining became a necessity when employer and employe no longer worked at the same bench, but operatives were dealt with by hundreds and thousands, and oftentimes with little distinction between the hands and the machines they tended. In 1833 there were convictions for simple membership in a trades union, no other crime being alleged. The progress made is best measured by the contrast between the three pages of fine print epitomizing anti-labor laws about that time and the three pages merely epitomizing subsequent statutes promoted by labor members under the disadvantages already indicated. Mr. Howell writes with sympathy, but without passion. He was never a member of any union, and as a member of Parliament was an actor in much of what he describes. He chronicles a great deal not to be found in other histories, and his book fills a gap for England which needs filling for ourselves.

Books in Demand.

The circulating department of the New York Public Library reports the following books most in demand during the week ended March 21: Adult Fiction—Ellen Glasgow's "The Wheel of Life," Bertha Runkle's "The Truth About Tolna," Mrs. Wharton's "The House of Mirth." Juvenile Fiction—Miles's "Fifty-two Stories of School Life," Ellis's "Adrift in the Wilds," Barbour's "Four in Camp." Miscellaneous—Spargo's "The Bitter Cry of the Children," and "The Long Day," Crawford's "Salve Venetia."

A New Political Novel.

A novel dealing with present-day political and financial life is announced for April publication by Little, Brown & Co. It is "The District Attorney," by William Sage. It is the story of a son with high ideals and a modern "financial" father. Both have differences, with the usual bad result. Mr. Sage is also the author of "Robert Tournay," "The Claybornes," "Frenchy, the Story of a Gentleman," &c.

Saints in Society

By Margaret Baillie-Saunders

Crown 8vo. $1.50

This novel won the prize offered by Mr. T. Fisher Unwin for the best novel by an author who had never before had a work of fiction published. It is a story of the effect upon a young printer and upon his wife of sudden accession to wealth, title, and social success. In their changed circumstances each meets a "kindred soul," and the perilous relations of the four characters result in an absorbing entanglement of plot.

The Sacred Cup

By Vincent Brown, Author of "A Magdalen's Husband," etc.

Crown 8vo. $1.50.

The story of a refined and good woman brought face to face with the fact that the man to whom she is engaged is guilty of unfaithfulness to her. This difficult situation is handled delicately and at the same time frankly. An ingeniously contrived plot piques the curiosity of the reader and leads him on eagerly to the denouement.

BOSTON NOTES.

Mr. Hains's Bashful Sailor—"The Little Colonel" to Appear Again—Biographies and Novels.

ASHY sailor is an extraordinary wild fowl, but it is in that character that Mr. T. Jenkins Hains chooses to write "The Voyage of the Arrow," the next novel to be added to the Spring list of Messrs. L. C. Page & Co.; and Mr. William Gore, first mate, tells as good a tale as most of the "sweet scented sea lawyers," concerning whom, while deprecating his own possible shortcomings, he makes disparaging remarks. He tells of a ship which falls into the hands of a company of convicts, and of the devices by which her company escapes absolute extermination before rescue comes; and very strange those devices are. Also, he gives a plausible reason for the economy of truth in the sailor's after supper yarn. "Perhaps," he says, "good hard all-around lying promotes the digestion of salt food, by getting the system so thoroughly saturated with deception that the stomach believes the junk fresh." After that there is nothing to be said: an American excuses any crime committed in the name of hygiene, and Mr. Gore's yarn is good, true or false.

⁂

Miss Alice MacGowan, the author of "Return," will be represented on the Autumn list of Messrs. Page by a Southern novel as yet unnamed, and a new "Little Colonel" is promised to children, which may be entitled "The Little Colonel at Locusts" or "The Little Colonel's Maid of Honor." The holiday volume of this series for 1906 will be "The Giant Scissors." The gate of the giant scissors which figures in the story is a real gate, and may still be seen on the road near the little village of St. Symphorien, not far from Tours. "Keeping Tryst," the story told in "The Little Colonel's Christmas Vacation," is to appear separately, as a companion volume to "The Three Weavers."

⁂

Francis Miltoun and Miss Blanche McManus are busily engaged in preparing a work dealing with Provence and the Riviera, treating them in the manner made familiar by their books on Normandy and Brittany, and, like them, to be called "Rambles." It is to have colored plates among its illustrations, and will, like the other two books, be decorated with suggestive headings and tail pieces.

⁂

The pretty rubricated catalogue which the head of the C. M. Clark Publishing Company justly entitles "A List of Successful Books," has some added pages. One of them deals with "Four Girls," the story, by Mary Rodney, of a quartet of graduates from the time of leaving school until their marriage. Another page speaks of "Out of the Ashes," by Mr. Harney Rennolds, the story of a man who divorces in haste and has a genuine repentance at leisure. Last comes "The Great Triumvirate," by Charles Felton Pidgin, a series of ten volumes treating of Jefferson, Hamilton, and Burr. Each of these books will contain between three and four hundred pages, and will be illustrated partly in color. The series will begin with "Theodosia, the First Gentlewoman of Her Time," and the solution of certain mysteries is said to be found in its pages.

⁂

The Lothrop, Lee & Shepard Company is preparing a holiday edition of "Five Little Peppers and How They Grew," by way of closing its half million copies with something memorable. Dr. Hermann Heyer has made eight colored drawings for the story.

⁂

Among the pleasant announcements for late Spring is "Blind Alleys," a New York novel by Mr. George Cary Eggleston, who regards it as superior to his former work.

⁂

Messrs. Little, Brown & Co. have taken over the editions of Balzac and Molière formerly published by Messrs. Hardy, Pratt & Co., part of the huge mass of translations performed by Miss Katharine Prescott Wormeley, author of "The Other Side of War," reprinted in 1898 as "The Cruel Side of War." She is still working busily with wide views of new fields in the French historical classics.

⁂

During the past week Bostonians have been enjoying the novel sensation of reading a paper on Boston containing none of the stock jokes about Boston ways and clothes. The paper appeared in The London Chronicle about a fortnight ago, and was written by Mr. John A. Hobson, University Extension Lecturer and author of many books on economical subjects and a volume on the South African war. He is an Oxford graduate and married Miss Florence Edgar of New York in 1886. He chooses Prof. Royce, Prof. James, and Prof. Munsterberg as subjects for special comment, saying that they are engaged in the work of "preparing a cultured substitute for outworn Christian orthodoxies," and "easing the skeptic's path by carefully planned planks from the older theological formulae." Boston has fondly supposed these books to be palliatives, if not antidotes, for skepticism.

⁂

Father Sheehan's "My New Curate," which was published in Boston by a Catholic firm, since dissolved, has been dramatized by Representative John J. Douglass, and is to be presented by Boston College undergraduates at a performance to which some fifteen hundred ministers and priests living in and near Boston will be invited. It will be remembered that this novel was originally written for priests, and was published in The American Ecclesiastical Review.

⁂

A tiny straw indicating the direction of the wind in the matter of Biblical knowledge comes from England in Mr. Douglas Sladen's acknowledgment that until he read Miss Alice Brown's "Paradise" he did not know of the plan of reading the Bible annually by taking three chapters daily. Three every secular day and five every Sunday is the true formula. The New Testament exactly suffices for Sundays; the Old lacks but ten of the nine hundred and thirty-nine chapters necessary for week days. That a man, not of heathen race, but once a happy English child, should not know it!

⁂

The Directors of the Old South work, sensitively aware of every possibly useful ripple in passing events, have made the Franklin bi-centenary the occasion for issuing three "Franklin" leaflets, the first containing his description of his boyhood in Boston, the second his utterances against war, and the third three papers written between 1754 and 1772, but containing matter applicable to modern affairs, especially to manufactures and protection. THE MUSICIAN.

AT the precocious age of 24 Margaret Potter (in private life Mrs. Donald Black) has achieved no less than seven novels. Chiefly they have dealt with the passionate, the ecstatic, the mystic—in short, with those high abandonments to temperament which the East counts heavenly wisdom and the West hysterics. Mrs. Black's newest story, "The Genius," (Harpers,) one may best call perhaps a clinic of the musical temperament. It is founded upon the life of Peter Illich Tchaikowsky, and shows no little industry and considerable interpretive and narrative power. There is no reason to suppose that our industrious and imaginative young woman really knows anything about Russian life, except what she has absorbed from those tense Russian novelists, yet she undoubtedly manages to reproduce much of their barbaric atmosphere—to get much of the effect produced by the Russians themselves upon the English-speaking races. One doesn't know, of course, how false the thing might seem to the Russian, but the American fiction consumer will find in "The Genius" all he wants of the strange color which to him spells Russia, while at the same time he is saved the annoyance of encountering what in a real Russian work is for lack of common measures incomprehensible and by consequence dull.

In spite of a wretchedly inadequate ending, (from the viewpoint of art or romance;) in spite of a deal of matter absolutely false and inconclusive from any viewpoint, the story has had too much of the author's own human interest welded into it, too much of the glow of her own white-hot imagination shed over it, not to possess considerable holding power, even when the reader has distinct prejudices against the emotional fantastics of musical monomania. Doubtless enthusiasts of music and musicians, and particularly those upon whose minds the tragedy of Tchaikowsky's life has cast its spell, will find more to interest and attract than others. Yet the best of the book is the picture of the childhood of Ivan Gregoriev, (the hero,) of his pale, browbeaten mother and grim brute of a father, of the cruel existence the three led in a lone, great palace in a socially impossible quarter of Moscow. The story of Gregoriev's after life, of his love for a girl, his passionate undoing of his social career, his tortured climb up the ladder of musical fame—from the lowest rung—all this, whether because of too close following of the facts in Tchaikowsky's case or not, is rather a jumble than a drama. The book contains, of course, much thinly disguised musical gossip of the period, and deals—with especial harshness—with Anton Rubinstein. The parts are greater than the whole.

Consumption.

"Consumption: Its Relation to Man and His Civilization," by John B. Huber, M. D., is in active preparation by the J. B. Lippincott Company of Philadelphia. The object of the book is to provide an exposition of the effect of consumption upon civilization and its relation to human affairs.

STUDY OF A SOUL.

Metaphysic Sometimes Obscures the Story in Miss Sedgwick's New Novel.*

THIS new novel, "The Shadow of Life," demands more than one reading in order to grasp its very unusual depth of thought. It tells a story, and a story of much interest, yet the novel is but the background for a profound and subtle psychological study.

We begin with a boy and girl in a fine old Scotch mansion; the girl, of ten years, a blithe creature, orphaned for half her little life, but warm and happy in the "safe universe of love" built about her by uncle and aunts. To this home comes for a Spring and Summer a sad, sensitive 14-year-old boy from India, the only son of an unhappy marriage. Silently and intensely he pines for the mother left behind in her cheerless lot. He is exquisitely tender, deeply religious, too manly to be afraid of comradeship with the little Eppie, or to wince at the elders' amusement when he joins her in her imaginative plays with her beloved dolls. The childish friendship is a poem. In the talk between the two one perceives the dawn of the mysticism which is afterward to pervade the book—the conflict between sunshine and shadow.

⁂

THEN the boy Gavan goes to England to a guardian uncle, and the curtain does not rise until, after sixteen years, he is speeding northward to visit for the first time since that golden Summer the home and the playmate that received the lonely lad in his early exile.

The reader is permitted to share his retrospect in the railway carriage, and the story of the sixteen years is unrolled. During these years "the skeptical crash of his religious faith" has come upon him. More and more clearly he had seen through all forms of thought "that the finite self dissolved in mist in the one all-embracing, all-transcending subject. Science, philosophy, religion, seemed in their final development to merge in a monism that conceived reality as spirit, but as impersonal spirit, a conception that, if in Western thought it did not reduce to illusion every phase of experience, yet reduced the finite self to a contradiction and its sense of moral freedom, upon which were built all the valuations of life and all its sanctions, to a self-deception." More and more "an awful peace" came to him, whispering that "all pain, all evil, all life were dreams, and that the dreams were made by the strife and restlessness of the fragmentary self in its endless discord." Life became an illusion; "that with which he found himself one was far from any human thoughts or emotions; rather it was the negation of them, the infinite negation of finite restlessness." He believed that human identity "is unreal, an appearance, * * * that the illusion of a separate identity, self-directing and permanent, is the deepest and most tenacious of all illusions—the illusion that makes the wheels go round, the common illusion that makes the common mirage. The abolishing of the identity, of the self, is the final word of science, and of philosophy and of religion, too. The determinism of science, the ecstatic immediacy of the mystic consciousness, the monistic systems of the Absolutists all tend toward the final discovery that under all the transitory appearance is a unity in which, for which, diversity vanishes." Such is the man, the Buddhist already in Nirvana—or nearly—who is speeding to the tryst with his child friend of sixteen years before; and the rest of the story belongs to those two.

⁂

IN the interval Eppie had become Miss Gifford—a beauty, a social success, a marked personality. For both Gavan Palairet and for her the years had held an unhappy love affair. Neither romance has at all an air of reality. As we say nowadays, they are not "convincing." Eppie, when she reappears, bears no scar; and as for Gavan's tragedy, recounted tout au long, while Eppie's is briefly disposed of, it is one of those malodorous episodes without which no modern novel feels itself quite what it should be. It was the "last convulsive effort of life to seize and keep" Gavan, but it is a manufactured sort of thing, unpleasant and needless, and the book would have been better without it.

The relation between Gavan, just a "shadow of life," though full of a strange charm, and Eppie, strong, vital, to her very finger tips an incarnation of the joy of living, is charged with electric power. She understands his position; she interprets his unspoken thought; she drags his living death from its recesses; she dashes her warm life against it. She is a creation wonderfully alive, "full of fight" and full of love, living in the middle of her world, the absolute opposite of the vague, gentle, selfless Gavan.

In regard to these two the author's methods are wholly unlike. We are in Gavan's confidence, his thoughts are ours. But we approach Eppie from the outside. What she says herself and what others tell us is all we know of her. We are within Gavan's consciousness in the supreme moments of his life; from Eppie's emotions we are shut out. All the analysis is bestowed upon Gavan; Eppie is left to reveal herself in her own way, with the result that she is by far the more real of the two. Gavan is the victim of too many pages of metaphysics. After all the fine-drawn subtleties in regard to him, we are fain to come to splendid, sane Jim Grainger's opinion, and exclaim, "The coward! The mean, bloodless coward!" We do most sincerely hope that his "illusion of life" was snuffed out as he expected, and as it richly deserved and that in "the world which sets this world right." Eppie found herself at last, and the man to whom she of right belonged.

⁂

IN truth, we read of Gavan with a haunting sense of recognition; and, by and by, an illumined recollection leads us to brush the dust from our "Robert Elsmere" and renew our acquaintance with Edward Langham—well worth the doing, by-the-bye. Next of kin are those two, though of widely differing experience and thought. Readers of "The Shadow of Life" will find the comparison interesting.

It is impossible for Miss Sedgwick to write a trivial or a dull book. Impressed by her own wide knowledge of philosophies, she has, however, overweighted the present novel. There are pages of which we say, "Magnificent, but not fiction"; descriptions and analyses to which we give an impatient "Yes, yes; we know, but let us get on." We are ready to accept Gavan at his face value, with more than half the elucidations thrown out. If it was needful that he should unfold his views to Eppie, we might have been spared much of the tedium of that retrospective night en route to Scotland. Miss Sedgwick sometimes forgets that, after all, "the play's the thing." We fancy her first saturated with her theories, then incarnating them. We think, with the highest order of creative minds it is the other way about; the character first springs into life. Its beliefs or negations are by-products.

"The Shadow of Life" is a book of great power and significance, one to be measured by a standard altogether different from the one we apply to the daily output of well-written mediocrity. The author's grasp of her material and her instinct for what is vital have kept her characters thoroughly alive—even Gavan, in spite of himself—but the novel would have gained in every way had not the drama been so often obscured under the study of a soul.

THE GIRL FROM TIM'S PLACE. By Charles Clark Munn. Illustrated by Frank T. Merrill. Boston: Lothrop, Lee & Shepard Company. $1.50.

The art of running away: That art consists in the knowing how, when, and where to run, and of that, little Chip, the waif from Tim's place, was past master.

"The more I see o' the world the better I like the woods." That was old Cy Walker's saying, but it seemed to be Chip's sentiment.

"There's a heap o' comfort in lookin' on the dark side o' life cheerfully," was another of Cy's sayings, but just how much darkness brought him to such an odd forest philosophy, and just how Chip fell among the cheeriest of folk when she did her first running away from the darkness, must be had from the story itself.

Her development, despite her bad parentage, into a delightful character, the timely death of both the troublesome villains, and the fact that all takes place in the lumber regions of New Hampshire, is anything but monotonous, and to quote old Cy once more, "the biggest fool thing—an' we all do it—is shaking hands with trouble 'fore you meet it." To tell the details of this development before you have a chance to read them would be to do just that very "fool thing."

ARCHBISHOP TEMPLE.

MEMOIRS OF ARCHBISHOP TEMPLE. By Seven Friends. Edited by E. G. Sandford, Archdeacon of Exeter. Photogravure and other illustrations. Two volumes. Volume I., pp. xx.-611. Volume II., pp. xiv.-743. 8vo, cloth. New York: The Macmillan Company. $9.

IN two sturdy volumes of more than 1,300 pages seven friends have contributed to make a memoir of the late Frederick Temple, Archbishop of Canterbury. Because of its make-up the work is peculiar; but on the whole it is well done—there was an editor in chief of the whole—and perhaps may be an example to be followed by other biographers. The book, however, is not likely to have much circulation in this country, where Temple was almost unknown, where the only thing known of him practically is the schoolboy's description: "Temple is a beast, but he is a just beast." Yet those who knew him, who got beneath the shell of brusqueness, loved him dearly. Says one quoted in these volumes: "I do not know a man to whom it was easier to go and tell out what was in one's mind. It always seemed to me he was better pleased the more directly and simply one could express one's opinion on any matter."

Temple was a great administrator; his biographers discuss his work in the Education Office, as headmaster of Rugby, as Bishop of Exeter, and then of London, and then as Archbishop; all dwell on the work he did, and how he did it, all on his ability to get good work out of his assistants. Some of the stories told of him by these assistants are pertinent—this, for example, by the present Bishop of London:

> When I was head of Oxford House he offered me the living of St. Matthew's. I went to see him and told him that * * * the responsibilities and labors of a parish of ten thousand souls, in addition to the work of the house, might injure my health and strength. "Oh, but we don't think of that, do we?" was his response.

The letters to his son, contained in the editor's supplement, and the short collection of pat remarks in the same place, show what manner of man Temple was really, as a man with a mordant and yet not unkindly wit, and as a very affectionate father. He reached the highest rank that an Englishman can hope to attain, so certainly cannot be called unsuccessful; yet he has left behind him a very different reputation in all ways from that of Tait, or even Benson, his two immediate predecessors. He did as much as they, possibly more, but his manner of doing it was ungracious—as the saying is, "It ain't so much wot 'e said as 'urts, as it is the nasty way 'e said it."

This remark of Temple's is applicable to so many things that it must be quoted here:

> At a public luncheon a volunteer waiter addressed him: "May I give your Grace some of this cold chicken?" "No, you may not," replied the Archbishop; "Wherever I go they give me cold chicken and the 'Church's one foundation,' and I hate them both."
>
> "My aunt was suddenly prevented from going on a voyage in a ship that went down," said a questioner. "Would you call that a case of providential interference?"
>
> "I can't tell; didn't know your aunt," was the Archbishop's answer.

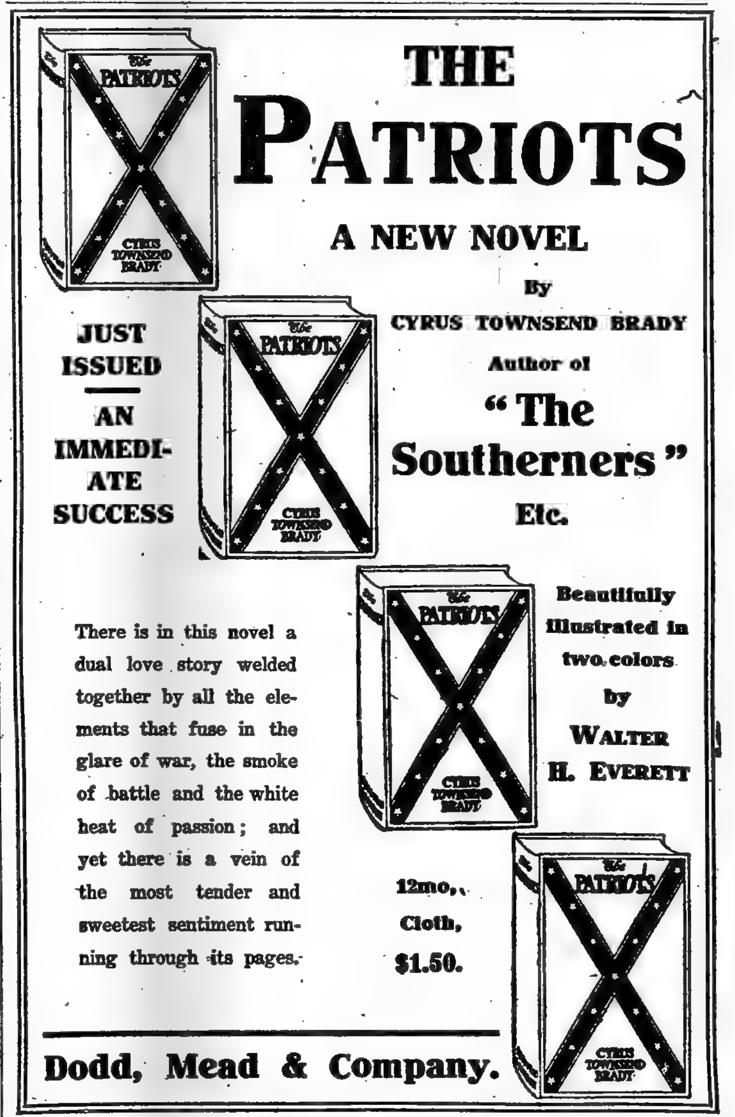
A man who gained the places that Temple did, in spite of his lack of tact, must have been of much more than ordinary calibre, and that Temple certainly was.

UTOPIA.

DISPLAY. By R. E. S. Spender. 12mo. Pp. 301. New York: The John Lane Company.

MR. BRAKESPEARE, editor of The World's News, an English example of the yellow journal, found sensational events failing and circulation threatening to drop off. Thereupon he sent Horace Garson, a contributor of daily articles on the simple life, to hunt up something exciting in Africa. Garson sent a message six months later, stating that "he had discovered what he had the best reason for believing was the original Utopia of which Sir Thomas More had written." Thereupon great discussion ensued, and "the paper's circulation showed a prodigious and continuous rise."

Many pages of conversations ensue, largely as to the possibility of a real Utopia—whether the derivation is "ou topos"—"the not," or "nowhere land," or "eu topos," the "beautiful land." Many other things, however, in politics, literature, and life are thrashed out, the author using his dialogue for the compendious expression of opinions. These conversations are by and by transferred to sea, the resourceful editor sending out an expedition to verify the Utopian discovery. Just what it was when found, and for what earthly reason the book is called "Display," let readers discover for themselves.



THE PATRIOTS

A NEW NOVEL

JUST ISSUED

AN IMMEDIATE SUCCESS

There is in this novel a dual love story welded together by all the elements that fuse in the glare of war, the smoke of battle and the white heat of passion; and yet there is a vein of the most tender and sweetest sentiment running through its pages.

THE AGE OF PEWTER.

MR. MALCOLM BELL'S book on "Old Pewter" (imported by Charles Scribner's Sons) treats its subject very successfully. The author disclaims originality in discussing pewter, but the publications and papers which he names as the basis for his book are practically unattainable, so that his work is the first to treat of pewter popularly.

The book is purely a history, for, though the Pewterers' Company of London still exists, the last "touch," or maker's mark, is dated 1824, and the last pewterer's shop known to the author, that of James Moyes, in Edinburgh, was closed more than twenty-five years ago. Pewter dishes—apparently part of a communion service—have been found in Roman ruins in England, dating certainly not later than 411 A. D. There is Japanese pewter dating from the eighth century, and Anglo-Saxon pewter dating from the tenth century, but the pewter age did not begin until near the end of the thirteenth, when it is recorded that the meat for the coronation banquet of Edward I. of England was boiled ("seethed," the modern historical novelist would say) in pewter caldrons. Abroad—in Paris—there was a pewterers' guild by that time, however, but the best pewter made was English, and from the time of Edward I. to almost our own, it was English pewter that set the standard. There is nothing out of the way, then in beginning the age of pewter with King Edward's coronation.

Mr. Bell follows the development of the trade in Great Britain, France, Belgium, and Germany, from the end of the thirteenth century down to our own time, with sufficient, though not "meticulous" particularity. His book contains fewer than 200 pages of reading matter, but it is illustrated with more than 100 plates, showing, perhaps, three times as many examples of pewter. These plates admirably illustrate the story of pewter, and permit of the author restricting his work to reasonable limits. There is no padding in the book, though there is plenty to interest the reader.

Mr. Bell's English is not of the best; we must protest against the system used in numbering the pages, which puts the number at the lower outside corner of each page, so close to the reading matter that one has to keep on the watch to avoid running the number into the type page. This is a new and unpleasant fad of the English publisher, which has not even the excuse of some persons in this city for omitting the numbers from expensive houses.

"Karl Grier."

A new edition of "Karl Grier," Louis Tracy's new romance, has just been ordered. It is said that the popularity of this story has not been confined to fiction lovers; there is a growing demand for the book from all serious-minded persons. Even scientists have begun to discuss the possibilities of "telegnomy"—the sense of knowing afar.

G. W. DILLINGHAM CO. PUBLISH TO-DAY

Below the Dead Line

By SCOTT CAMPBELL

When Inspector Byrnes commanded the New York police force he found it necessary to issue an order calling for the instant arrest of every crook found day or night in that part of the metropolis lying south of Fulton Street. This stringent order quickly gained for the district the title "Below the Dead Line." For several years a number of crooks succeeded in operating in the district despite the police, and Mr. Scott Campbell has chronicled their doings. Illustrated, 12mo, cloth, $1.50.

Party Leaders of the Time

By CHARLES WILLIS THOMPSON

Not dull biographies, but pen portraits of the great figures in the nation by the Washington correspondent of the New York Times. Character studies at close range which make clear and vivid the personalities of men you have read about. Includes the President and Cabinet, leaders in Congress, Diplomats and other men of mark. Illustrated with 32 portraits of the most prominent characters mentioned. 12mo, cloth, $1.75 net.

Lady Jim of Curzon Street

By FERGUS HUME

A new novel. Strong character delineation and an excellent story depicting frivolity and its deadening effects on the devotees of fashion. Lady Jim herself, the chief character in the book, has been drawn with the skill of a master hand. 12mo, cloth, $1.50.

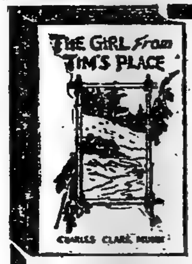
A Common Sense Hell

By ARTHUR RICHARD ROSE

Being the practical thoughts of a business man about the future fate of the wicked, contained in letters to his son. Does Hell Fire insult your reason and arouse your anger? Do you dread Hell Fire? Does your sense of justice revolt against eternal Hell Fire for the sinner? Are you going to the Devil? Anyhow get acquainted with his home, what Mr. Rose thinks it may be. 12mo, cloth, $1.00 net.

Skiddoo

BY THE AUTHOR OF "JOHN HENRY," ETC. Fully up to the standard of the nine preceding volumes, which now reach a sale of nearly 600,000 copies. Nowhere in all the history of literature can there be found any set or series of humorous books which will compare with "John Henry" in popularity. Stop and think what a task it must be to write one successfully funny book and then consider what it means to follow that up with nine others just as good and just as successful. Cloth bound, illustrated, 75 cts.



THE GIRL from TIM'S PLACE
CHARLES CLARK MUNN

The Latest and Best New England Romance

THE GIRL FROM TIM'S PLACE

By Charles Clark Munn, author of "Uncle Terry"

Illustrated by Frank T. Merrill. Price, $1.50

An intensely fascinating love story of the Maine wilderness, weird and exciting, yet sweet and tender.

A prominent character is Mr. Munn's masterpiece, "Old Cy Walker," the finest and drollest woodsman in fiction. Here are a few of his many bright and quaint sayings:

"The man that won't bear watchin' needs it."
"The more I see o' the world, the better I like the woods."
"A girl with a new ring allus hez trouble with her hair."

A Thrilling Story of Love and Mystery

THE GOLDEN GREYHOUND

By Dwight Tilton, author of "Miss Petticoats," etc.

Illustrated by E. Pollak. Price, $1.50

An up-to-date story of love, adventure, and mystery, with wireless telegraphy and all the modern improvements, that will not let you rest until you see how it is coming out. The hero is a rich young New Yorker and former Yale athlete. He is so attracted by a lovely face as to follow its possessor on board an Atlantic liner, called "The Golden Greyhound," from a vast shipment of gold, where he helps solve a baffling mystery, and his rash journey brings great happiness to all but a set of unsuccessful plotters. The book is as rich in humor as it is fertile in invention, and is strikingly handsome in make-up.

LITERARY SECTION OF THE NEW YORK TIMES

NEW YORK, MARCH 24, 1906.

TOPICS OF THE WEEK.

DR. BEVERLEY WARNER, who twelve years ago published his lectures on "English History in Shakespeare's Plays," a book more interesting in its conception than useful in its result, has done a greater service to his fellow Shakespeare students in his new book, "Famous Introductions to Shakespeare's Plays, by the Notable Editors of the Eighteenth Century" (Dodd, Mead & Co.) In this handsome volume Dr. Warner has collected the first folio introduction of Heminge and Condell, and the introductory essays to later editions of Shakespeare by Rowe, Pope, Theobald, Hanmer, Warburton, Dr. Johnson, Steevens, Capel, Reed, and Malone. The collection of these various manifestations of scholarship and the lack of it, of wisdom, sympathy, whim, and prejudice in one volume was a capital idea. Such a comprehensive summary of the development of the study of and comprehension of Shakespeare is nowhere else accessible in a form so convenient. Without Dr. Warner's own lucid and learned introductions, and his invaluable footnotes, the new book would have been esteemed a veritable treasure. Dr. Warner's editorial work makes it only the more valuable. The book is handsomely illustrated with portraits of the great editors, Hogarth's picture of The Distrest Poet serving, in the absence of an authentic likeness of Theobald, as the counterfeit presentment of the best of them before Malone. There is no index, which is a pity, for the book needs one.

◆

DR. WARNER has written a biographical sketch of each of the editors, and these sketches are particularly well informed and sensible. They seem to us to represent the best of Dr. Warner's editorial work. His introductory essay is able, candid, and interesting, but it must inevitably arouse some measure of hostile comment. For instance, exactly what does Dr. Warner mean when he commends Dr. Johnson's idea that one "that is yet unacquainted with the powers of Shakespeare" should read every play "with utter negligence of all his commentators?" Before Dr. Johnson expressed this idea, or undertook an edition of the plays, he had availed himself of the learning of Pope, Theobald, and Warburton. When Dr. Warner declares that "every reader should be his own commentator" he surely cannot mean that "every reader" should possess himself of fac similes of the first folio and the early quartos and, at this late day, discarding all the results of centuries of laboriously developed scholarship, rack his poor brain with eccentricities of Elizabethan printers and the historic ignorance of scribes and amanuenses. The text for "every reader," in this twentieth century, is the latest Globe or Cambridge text, which represents the full flower of ripe Shakespearean scholarship, and which one cannot read without indebtedness to the commentators. This, however, is but a slight blemish in Dr. Warner's book, if it be a blemish at all, while his remarks on Shakespeare's school learning, or his lack of it, are eminently sensible and well-expressed.

IN "The Opal Sea," (Scribners,) John C. Van Dyke is at once poet, historian, naturalist, artist and dreamer. Incidentally, also, he is a writer of admirable prose. His book is a study of the sea, as it has been in literature, from the days of the Phoenicians, as it is in fact, and his point of view shifts from the scientific to the poetical with no loss of balance. "The Opal Sea" is, indeed, a fascinating book. Here are all the facts and fancies about the sea, accumulations of the ages, harmoniously blended, not set down in the cyclopaedic manner; the fear of the sea, and the love of it, its terror and its beauty, the creatures that dwell in it, and the other creatures that float upon it in boats; its mystery, its never failing charm. The history of navigation and discovery, the development of theories as to ocean currents, as to the place of the sea in the great unknowable scheme of life, as to the sea as the home of protoplasm, all have a place in this book. It is not a sailor's book, but a sailor may read it with enjoyment. It is not a scientific treatise, but the most unimpressible scientist will find no fault with it.

◆

A CAPITAL book for the classroom or the library is "American Literary Masters," by Leon H. Vincent (Boston: Houghton, Mifflin). It treats, succinctly, entertainingly, and with good critical judgment, of the writings of nineteen Americans of note, namely, Irving, Bryant, Cooper, Bancroft, Prescott, Emerson, Poe, Longfellow, Whittier, Hawthorne, Thoreau, Holmes, Motley, Parkman, Bayard Taylor, G. W. Curtis, Donald G. Mitchell, Lowell, and Whitman. There is a biographical sketch of each, followed by a critical consideration of each of his writings, or each group of his writings, with some account of the conditions under which the works were produced, and their reception by the author's contemporaies. Some of the criticism is admirable, and Mr. Vincent is well equipped to indicate to the young student each author's relation to his times, and the influence of other authors upon his work. Among recent books of its kind, we have seen none likely to be more useful. There is a copious index.

◆

SPEAKING of American authors, Mr. W. C. Brownell's essay on James Fenimore Cooper, in the April Scribner's, does not turn out to be quite so much of glowing eulogy of the first great American novelist as might have been inferred from the extracts from it sent out in advance of publication. It is, to be sure, a just appreciation, highly original and suggestive, and it undoubtedly, in the end, gives Cooper his full due. But Mr. Brownell is quite sure Cooper could not help being prolix and tedious, that he was fond of bores, and that even Natty Bumpo is something of a bore. But, adds Mr. Brownell, there is no character in Cooper's novels so tiresome as Bailie Nicol Jarvie in "Rob Roy." Here's a chance for controversy. Awake, to arms, ye loyal Scots! But Mr. Brownell does defend Cooper against the charge of sentimentalizing the Indian. The traditional noble savage, he declares, actually does not exist in Cooper's books. His Indians are natural types. So are his women—of whom so much fun has been made in these degenerate days. Mr. Brownell is sure they existed, in all their helpless innocence, in Cooper's day.

WE fear that the news of the death on Wednesday of Mrs. A. D. T. Whitney did not bring to the youth of the present generation the sense of personal loss which many of their elders must have felt. There was a time when "The Gayworthys," "Faith Gartney's Girlhood," and "A Summer in Leslie Goldthwaite's Life" were pre-eminently the books for youngsters with refined surroundings to read, books for girls, to be sure, but books the boys read, too, for what boy who reads at all does not like to read about the nicest kind of girls. They were not moralizing little prigs, those heroines of Mrs. Whitney, nor were they, thank heaven, "bachelor maids." They were just wholesome, merry, well-bred girls. Mrs. Whitney wrote many books in prose and verse, but those books for girls were the best of them.

ONE of the many socialistic "documents" of the hour, and one that promises to be quite as influential in reforming society as the best of them, is a new yarn by H. G. Wells, called "In the Days of the Comet." It is running serially in The Cosmopolitan Magazine, and the two instalments published thus far indicate the large measure of skill Mr. Wells has acquired in spinning yarns for publication month by month. He can hold the attention of a reader breathlessly down to the "to be continued in our next" with as little expenditure of material as any contemporary writer we know of. The new tale is told by a person who before the terrible comet struck the world and swept the wretched old twentieth century "civilization" to oblivion, was a shabby, dirty, evil-hearted, dishonest ne'er-do-well. He writes as one who has been transformed and done great deeds in a world free from such evil influences as religion, home, marriage, and individual rights. Mr. Wells is a very clever fellow, and we like him much better as a story teller than as an out-and-out philosopher and "sociologist." But he does spin his yarns fine.

ALFRED NOYES is described by The Bookman of London as "The most brilliant of our young poets." He has not yet secured fame on this side of the Atlantic, certainly, and "Who's Who" knows him not—though the omission of his name from that book of reference counts for little. He is a young poet, however, who has lately received a larger share of encouragement from an influential source, than any other young poet in recent years. Blackwood's Magazine is to publish, as a serial in twelve numbers, his new epic poem on English naval history. This is unprecedented in these times. The memory of living man recalls no such venture of a magazine publisher and editor. Mr. Noyes's poetry, thus far, has been largely concerned with the sea, and some of it has been of a martial character. Blackwood's Magazine has been his principal medium, but his poetry has been widely copied. The "Readers' Guide to Periodical Literature" records the publication of fourteen of his poems in 1903 and 1904. Among these were "From the Heart of the Deep," "In the Great Waters," "In Time of War," "The Phantom Fleet," and "A Song of England." The Blackwoods published a volume of his collected poems in October, 1904.

ELIZABETH CARTER was a famous and learned spinster of the eighteenth century, and of her Dr. Samuel Johnson (who, as of old, is always getting "lugged in,") once said: "She can make a pudding as well as she can translate Epictetus out of the original Greek." She had been a very stupid girl, it is a pleasure to recall, and her father, a worthy country clergyman, had urged her to give up trying to learn things. She took snuff and chewed green tea to keep awake over her books. But in time she knew the Greek, Latin, Hebrew, Arabic, French, German, Spanish, Italian, and Portuguese languages. She could also do needlework and play tunes on the German flute. She was the "Eliza" of The Gentleman's Magazine. Miss (or Mrs.) Carter lived to a great age, and died just 100 years ago. Our cable dispatches have already announced the forthcoming publication of a new biography of this famous literary Englishwoman of the eighteenth century. The author is Miss Alice C. C. Gaussen, who will make use of Mrs. Carter's letters and journals, and permit her to tell the story of her career, as far as possible, in her own words.

MR. GEORGE R. SIMS, who lately published a novel, after a long silence, so far as the book world is concerned, (Mr. Sims is always a hard worker in the field of journalism,) has now nearly ready for publication some chapters of personal reminiscences, which are to appear serially in Cassell's Saturday Journal, and thereafter to be published in book form. In a long London career Mr. Sims has made the acquaintance of many men and women of consequence. With many of the foremost actors and dramatists of his time he has been on terms of intimacy. He has known publishers and authors, statesmen and financiers. And he is always an intersting writer.

SOME curious statistics in the London Academy, the compilation of which grew out of a question as to which of the English Universities produced the greater number of poets, show that Oxford leads in poets and novelists as well. The lead is slight, however, in both cases, and it seems slighter when we observe both Samuel Johnson and Walter Pater classed as novelists in the Oxford list. But the Cambridge list puts Horace Walpole, whose "Castle of Otranto" was one of his least achievements, and our own "Ruby" Lehmann, of these later years, oarsman, editor, man of the world, among the novelists, simply because they wrote novels. So the balance remains the same. The interesting fact most clearly emphasized is that most of the foremost English novelists have not been university bred. Charles Reade, the Kingsleys, Blackmore, Thomas Hughes, Sterne, Bulwer, Thackeray, Besant, and some of the more recent writers of fiction were of the universities. But Richardson, Fielding, Smollett, Scott, Dickens, Disraeli, and Anthony Trollope were not, nor are Meredith, Hardy, Zangwill, and Kipling university men. Add to these the names of Jane Austen, George Eliot and Charlotte Brontë and it is easy to see that, though two of the great novelists were at Cambridge, the English novel has not been a university product.

The Garden Magazine.

A special number is that of The Garden Magazine for April—a "Spring Planting Number." The illustrations are as charming and pertinent as they always are in this magazine, and besides them and its usual departments it contains a Spring planting table, showing when to plant, how to plant, how to grow, and when to gather pot herbs, salads, vegetables, and fruits, and a list of varieties of vegetables that will follow one another, so that if one likes beans, for example, he may have them all Summer, and not turn to the canned bean when the early variety is ended. Any one with a garden ought to be interested in this magazine.

◆

Kate Douglas Wiggin's Spring.

Mr. and Mrs. George C. Riggs (Kate Douglas Wiggin) sail for Italy on the Cretic, April 3. After a month in Rome and Florence, and a month in England, they will return in June and open their house in Hollis, Me. Mrs. Riggs's literary work during the Summer will be the writing of some New England stories, the central figure in each being little "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm," the other characters being drawn from the same book. Lord Tennyson has asked Mrs. Riggs to serve—with Mrs. Humphry Ward, Mrs. Cragie, and Mrs. Alice Meynel—as one of the Honorary Stewards of the Anniversary Dinner of the Royal Literary Fund in London, May 10.

The Bell Boy.

S. E. Kiser, author of the popular "Love Sonnets of an Office Boy," has put another youth into verse in "Thrills of a Bell Boy," which Forbes & Co. will publish in April. J. T. McCutcheon has made the drawings for the book.

ENGLISH BOOKMEN WAKING UP.

An Interesting Array of New Spring Books—Alfred Austin's Poem—Napoleon and the Italian Renaissance—New Novels.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES. [Copyright, 1906.]

LONDON, March 23.—Mr. Alfred Austin's new long poem, "The Door of Humility," which the Macmillans expect to publish here next month, is said to be written in a somewhat new narrative form. The principal figures are personifications of Love, Faith, Doubt, and Trial.

⁂

MESSRS. HUTCHINSON & CO. will have ready soon a new historical work by H. Noel Williams entitled "Five Fair Sisters." It tells the story of the five celebrated nieces of Cardinal Mazarin, who were taken into the French Court in the early days of King Louis XIV., and all made brilliant marriages.

⁂

MESSRS. ARCHIBALD CONSTABLE & CO. will publish April 1 the first volume of a new series of technical dictionaries in six languages, English, French, German, Russian, Spanish, and Italian. Each volume deals with a special branch of technical industry, and the first relates to the tools and machinery used in working with wood and metal. The Constables will publish in May H. C. Moffatt's book on "Old Oxford Plate," which is designed to be a companion to Foster and Atkinson's book on "Old Cambridge Plate."

⁂

ANOTHER volume of the late Lord Acton's monumental Cambridge Modern History will be ready next month. The subject is Napoleon, and some of the best-known authorities on the great Corsican's career and the history of his epoch have contributed to the volume. The study of Napoleon and his times thus presented is said to be comprehensive.

EDMUND GARDNER is writing a book on "The Later Renaissance in Italy." It centres around Ludovico Ariosto, and deals fully with his poetry and his relation to his times. Mrs. Clayton Glyn has written a new novel called "Beyond the Rocks," which the Duckworths will publish. John Lane will publish next week "Love's Testament," a sonnet sequence by G. C. Lounsbery, and a novel by a new author, Mansfield Brooks, entitled "Newell Fortune."

TWO RESURRECTIONS AND A DREAM.

"The Clammer" is Eden Without the Serpent—"The Day Dreamer" Arises Phoenixlike—The Resuscitated Motor Pirate is Conan Out-Doyled.

By STEPHEN CHALMERS.

HERE is a little book—"The Clammer"—by William John Hopkins, (Houghton, Mifflin & Co.,) which, like a liqueur or an exquisite cigar, should be taken after a heavy day or a heavy dinner to be properly appreciated.

Mr. Hopkins's chapters on the people of the clam flats, which first appeared in The Atlantic Monthly, contain the essentials of leisure-hour reading. One reads the simple but beautiful love story with that sense of lazy content which the principals in it are supposed to have derived from the clam beds; but that lazy content will come to the mind of the readers from Mr. Hopkins's quaintly picturesque style of narrative. His is a diction which, one is tempted to believe, is born of William John Hopkins, Robert Louis Stevenson, and the various authors of the Bible. It is correct without being prim, well-bred, but not distant, and injected with the whimsical humor which never laughs, but has eyes that twinkle.

It has been charged against this book that there is too much sweet in the love story, so that one becomes surfeited; or, the night being still, one fails to hear the ticking of the clock. Well, many loves go down to eternity that never know the course which seldom runs smoothly. Mr. Hopkins's love story is one of that many, and no doubt such was the story he meant to tell us. There are no sharp corners here. The man meets the maid. She is Eve, so he, in the spirit of Summer, calls himself Adam. They dig clams; bid good night to the sun; watch the dawn, the changing colors of sea and sky; and the evening and the morning are the first day.

The intimacy of the man and the maid humanly progresses. Why, in the name of all that is logical, should there be a serpent?

⁂

WHAT'S in a name? "The Day Dreamer," "News and the Man," "The Stolen Story"—or whatever else Mr. Jesse Lynch Williams pleases in future to call this much-told narrative—is a good yarn. We have to do now directly with "The Day Dreamer" (Charles Scribner's Sons.)

Most people have read the same yarn before and many people have said the same thing before. If a story by any name will sell as well, far be it from any one to criticise Mr. Williams, or question the patience of the reading public.

To those who did not read the essential part of this work in "The Stolen Story," or the fuller narrative as "News and the Man," in the February Smart Set, it is due to say that "The Day Dreamer" is an unabridged rendering of "News and the Man," an amplified version of "The Stolen Story," and as it was in the beginning, is now, &c., a very plausible story and a splendid picture of newspaper life and newspaper men.

⁂

THE commercial temptation of the author in these days to resurrect a popular character who has died a violent death in Vol. I., creeps on apace. Holmes, Moriarty and the seething caldron are completely out-Doyled in Mr. G. Sidney Paternoster's revival of Randolph Mannering, the motor pirate, who, after terrorizing all England, shot over the edge of a precipice at Land's End, Cornwall, to certain (?) death.

Unfortunately for the story of the further adventures of the motor pirate, "The Cruise of the Conqueror," (Boston: L. C. Page & Co.,) the hero and heroine of the first novel are now married. The love interest, still centring around the hero and heroine, since not a matter for the divorce court, simply becomes a situation requiring the arrest of the villain for disorderly conduct.

Aside from the glamourless love interest, the further adventures of the motor pirate form, as they should, exciting reading. This time the pirate keeps to the sea, as all good pirates did and should, in a case where a petrol Kidd could not very well come to life on land. In fact, the pirate skips about the sea—three seas—in his 300 horse power motor boat with such Vanderdecken-like rapidity that one is tempted to believe the motor pirate is really the motor pirate's ghost.

But when one is convinced that the pirate is himself and no whit less wicked than in other days, the reader can congratulate Mr. Paternoster on the fact that what his pirate does on the high seas is possible. In the last few years we have had pirate books ad nauseam, wherein the pirates, by sheer nerve, put to sea, hoist the black flag, hold up liners, bury treasure—or spend it in ease—regardless of the impossibility of such a course in such an age.

The motor pirate, however, has nerve behind method. A crack gunner, a pneumatic gun, and forty knots an hour are quite plausible in extenuation of defying torpedo destroyers and holding up liners full of bullion and "married men with umbrellas."

But even the motor pirate comes to an end. But does he? It is to be observed that the author himself is not quite sure about this. Mr. Paternoster does not care to issue a certificate of death again. In the ending of the story one may find fault in this connection.

When a pirate's treasure is one of the stakes in a game, the reader invariably feels as disappointed as the searcher who doesn't find it. Perhaps the pirate who vanished took the treasure that vanished from the place where it should have been found, to enable him next season to build a—a piratical flying machine.

OLD TRINITY.

WITH the appearance of the fourth volume, the Rev. Dr. Morgan Dix's "History of Trinity Parish" is ended. It covers the period from 1827 to 1862, when the author succeeded to the rectorship, during which time Bishop Hobart died and the Bishopric of New York was separated from the rectorship of Trinity. While, as its author says, the work now finished is rather the collection of material for history than history itself, there is in it something of actual history that makes it more valuable to the community than the ordinary ecclesiastical history is apt to be. In this volume, for example, reference is made to the destruction of St. John's Park and to the so-called Anneke Jans claims.

St. John's Park—a name now borne in mockery by the Central's huge freight station—was a park in front of St. John's Chapel, owned by the Trinity corporation—Dr. Dix does not say how large it was—in which was "a greater variety of trees than any other plot of ground of its size in the world" possessed. Years ago it was the fashionable residential centre of the city, but as time went on and the character of the surroundings changed, the vestry of the church proposed to sell it. Dr. Berrian, rector from 1830 to 1862, "plainly told the applicants that the Park should not be sold while he lived," but Dr. Dix gave his consent—and it is practically to him that the city owes the passing of one of its breathing spaces. He tries to make an avoidance of his share in the destruction of the park; he was "not yet resident in the rectory," "it seemed unwise and selfish to oppose the general wish" of the vestry—and so the church sold the park; and, poetical justice after all, has grievously repented ever since.

The Anneke Jans claims, which have, and perhaps then had, been used to swindle poor people out of their money on the ground that Trinity Church owned property legally theirs, were investigated by an impartial outsider, who decided in favor of the ownership by the church of the farm given to it 150 years earlier,—and his decision has been sustained by the courts.

To the average reader, however, the best part of the book is the appendix, wherein are lists of all the clergy connected with the parish since it was formed, of the vestry, of the gifts made from 1745 to 1855, showing that many churches and missionaries were aided. The book is in appearance worthy of its subject. It is published, in a limited edition, by G. P. Putnam's Sons.

Living Organisms.

Prof. Jacques Loeb's volume on "The Dynamics of Living Matter," forms Volume VIII. of the Biological Series, which the Macmillan Company publishes for the Columbia University Press. The volume is based on a series of eight lectures delivered at Columbia by Prof. Loeb in 1902, the aim of which was to give a presentation of his researches on the subject and the conclusions he arrived at. The author considers "living organisms as chemical machines, consisting essentially of colloidal material, which possess the peculiarities of automatically developing, preserving, and reproducing themselves."

The chapters are devoted, in order, to the general chemistry of life phenomena, the general physical constitution of living matter, some physical manifestations of life, electrolytes, the effects of heat and radiant energy, heliotropism, fertilization, heredity, and the dynamics of regenerative processes. The book contains many illustrations, diagrams, and tables, and numerous notes of reference.

Holt "Foreign" Issues.

Henry Holt & Co. will bring out immediately an abridged edition of Blochmann's "Luft, Wasser, Licht, und Warme," edited by Dr. F. W. Meisnest of the University of Wisconsin; new printings of G. T. Dippold's "Wagner's Ring of the Nibelung," a treatise and description of the tetrology; and Scheffel's poem, "Der Trompeter von Sakkingen," in the German text, with English notes and introduction and many illustrations. They are also reprinting the four conversation books: "Parlez-vous Française?" "Habla v. Español?" "Sprechen Sie Deutsch?" and "Parlate Italiana?"

Mr. Edwin Markham and Mr. M. M. Miller Reply Blithely to Father Tabb.

I.

New York Times Saturday Review of Books:

ABOUT six months ago Father Tabb, the poet, wrote to you saying that I had edited the Cameo Edition of Poe's works, and that he had found two or three errors in the text. I wrote you in reply, saying that I had never edited an edition of Poe, and that my name nowhere appears as an editor of Poe. I explained that I had no connection with the Cameo Poe, save only as the writer of the introduction to the volumes. I explained that the editing was done by a well-known New York writer, a careful worker and an accurate scholar. I also pointed out the fact that the errors Father Tabb claims to find may be merely variants in the Poe text, a text that, as every Poe scholar knows, underwent many alterations. Is it possible that Father Tabb has himself stumbled into error—that he knows less of Poe than of Polycarp?

I made this explanation before in your columns. But it appears that Father Tabb writes for THE TIMES, but does not read it! Does he ignore THE TIMES, being too busy with the Eternities? For in your last Saturday's BOOK REVIEW he discharges another shaft, trying to spear me with this pointless limerick:

There once was "a man with a hoe,"
Who worked in the garden of Poe;
But alas it was found
That in digging the ground
He had cut up the roots by the row.

By the way, the boy who rinses out my ink bottles hands me the following skit as his contribution to this tablet:

There's an excellent poet named Tabb,
Who is using his pen for a jab.
In the garden of Poe
He stepped on a hoe,
And now he is limping—poor Tabb.

EDWIN MARKHAM.

West New Brighton, S. I., March 22, 1906.

II.

New York Times Saturday Review of Books:

About two years ago The Literary Digest offered as a premium an edition of the chief writings of Poe, to which Mr. Edwin Markham had written an introduction in the shape of an essay on the "Art and Genius of Poe." The Rev. John B. Tabb about that time wrote a letter which appeared in THE NEW YORK TIMES BOOK REVIEW, in which he pointed out certain errors in the text the responsibility of which he laid at the door of Mr. Markham, as "editor" of the work. In a very kindly letter appearing soon after Mr. Markham stated that his sole connection with the work was as writer of the introduction. Now after considerably more than a year Father Tabb repeats his accusation that Mr. Markham was the "editor" of the "mutilated edition of Poe" as a prefatory explanation of an epigrammatic limerick that he has evidently been carefully incubating all these months as though it were to be perpetuated in the anthologies along with his laboriously polished quatrains.

Under these circumstances it seems necessary for me to come forward and declare that I was the editor of the Poe edition in question, if "following a book through the press" can be dignified by the name of editing. I accept sole responsibility for the "omission of a comma on Page —" and the other mistakes of which Father Tabb complains, and which, I would explain to him, are almost unavoidable in cheap reprints.

Father Tabb's refusal to accept Mr. Markham's explanation and his evident desire to display his epigrammatic wit at an innocent man's expense seem to me to justify the following limerick:

Said an amateur fencer named Tabb,
Who had given a stranger a stab,
"Oh, please don't explain,
Let me try it again;
I've practiced a year at that jab!"

Martin Van Buren.

New York Times Saturday Review of Books:

In dealing with "Five American Politicians," your reviewer (whether following Dr. Orth I do not know) does far less than justice to the career of Martin Van Buren. No one who traces his course during the financial disorders which fell upon the early part of his Administration, through no fault of his own, can fail to find in the steady hand and head at the helm qualities which the mere politician does not possess, and would lack the courage to display even if he had them. More than by any other cause, his chances for further political preferment were cut short by his firmness for sound principles of financial administration at a time when popular excitement called for some spectacular attempt at unwarrantable Government interference. The mere politician would have rushed at the bait of temporary popularity. Politician Van Buren was, but fortunately for the country there was sound statesmanship underneath the politician, and this crisis called it out. No one can read the careful study of Van Buren's life contributed to the American Statesmen series by Edward M. Shepard and any longer accept the classification of him as nothing more than a wily political trickster. No one ever came nearer than he to giving the Democratic Party a really consistent platform, based on intelligible views of the United States Constitution. If at any time within the past twenty years the party had put itself squarely on that platform, with the proper application of its principles to current problems, of course, it would have been invincible at the polls.

The Revived Byron Scandal.

New York Times Saturday Review of Books:

One of your correspondents calls attention to the condemnation with which the press greeted Mrs. Stowe's calumny of Byron and the silence with which it met the recent reiteration of the charge by his grandson, Lord Lovelace, and deduces the conclusion that the press was either unfair to Mrs. Stowe or too lenient toward a sinful man, as he considers this reaffirmation to have proven Byron.

Lord Lovelace's volume—for private circulation at £15 a copy—has not been intrusted to the American press, whose silence, therefore, proves nothing; but if it were it would almost certainly meet with the same fate as that of Mrs. Stowe, as the book has been received with disgust and indignation even in England.

The inference that Mrs. Stowe was warranted in the truthfulnes of her assertion from its having been reaffirmed by Lord Lovelace will hardly bear analysis. By such reasoning any falsehood might be established if only it were repeated as truth. Both Mrs. Stowe and Lord Lovelace report at second hand the distorted imaginings of Lady Byron at a time when her mind was irresponsible, uncorroborated testimony which would not be admitted in any court and which her own acts annulled, as she was on friendly relations with Byron's sister, Mrs. Leigh, for some years after the separation, and communicated with Byron upon various matters through her. The fact, too, that she made no such charge during the lifetime of Byron, but waited until no refutation or defense was possible, would alone invalidate the charge and bring upon her the contempt of any fair-minded person, as it not only did, but also upon Harriet Beecher Stowe, who sullied her own high reputation by giving publicity to so ill-advised a calumny.

That Lord Lovelace has seen fit to reiterate the malignant suspicion of Lady Byron, whose vindictiveness followed Byron to the grave, only proves the cheapness and vulgarity of his own nature and his lack of all fine sensibilities and family dignity. Even if the charge were true, which no right-minded person has ever believed, it would be as odious in Lord Lovelace to drag it forth to the further dishonor of his name and blood.

The fact that Ada Byron, the mother of Lord Lovelace, who had never been allowed to see her father's picture, to read his poems, nor to hear his name spoken except in disparagement, not only studied eagerly all his works as soon as she was free to act for herself, but developed an ardent affection for him and loyalty to his memory, insisting, at her own early death, that she should lie by his side, rather than in the tomb of her husband's or mother's family, is perhaps the strongest testimony to be brought against the accusations of Lady Byron. If Ada Byron, who had heard nothing but ill of her father, repudiated these accusations, it is very good evidence that she knew in how far they were to be trusted.

Was Byron a "sinful man," as your correspondent infers? Unquestionably he was, but not the monster of iniquity which he has been painted by his own countrymen since the hour of his ill-advised marriage to the present one; for if ever the bloodhounds of slander were loosed upon a human track it has been upon Byron's, and the effort has been hopeless to recall them to the leash.

For illustration, it has counted for nothing that Shelley, that pure and exquisite spirit, was almost constantly with Byron in Switzerland and in Italy the latter years of both their lives, and had not only the highest admiration of his genius, but the warmest friendship for him, a thing impossible had Byron been the man he was reputed to have been.

If the world had not persistently shut its eyes and ears to the nobler side of Byron such testimonials of his generosity, sympathy, courtesy, loyalty, consideration to his dependents, and other fine traits as are given by Shelley, Trelawney, Scott, Medwin, and others who knew him intimately would long ago have redeemed the irregularities of his life, which were in themselves grossly exaggerated. To cite one book alone which every person before attempting to judge Byron ought to read, Medwin's "Conversations" with him during several years of intimacy in Italy, shows a wholly different order of man from the voluptuary whose reputed adventures spiced the conferences of the scandal-mongers of England.

Byron had certainly enough in his life to be deplored, but no man in the history of literature has been so maligned, his vices so magnified, his virtues so ignored, and now the vampire of modern fiction has fastened upon him, and from Mrs. Humphry Ward to Hallie Erminie Rives and Lafayette McLaws they drain his blood. To be sure, Miss Rives meant to rehabilitate Byron, but the mawkish sentimentality and turgid sensationalism of her method must have made all Byron lovers weep. But distort and mutilate as they may, Byron has vitality enough to withstand it, for though all else were accomplished, they could not quench the fire in his brain.

Translations of Zola.

New York Times Saturday Review of Books:

Will you permit me a word or two in reply to Mr. Louis Kerpen's letter concerning my brother's translations of M. Zola's novels?

As one familiar with the translations that were issued in the United States thirty years ago, when Mrs. Grundy was abroad, I think I am justified in saying that Ernest Vizetelly's work, taken as a whole, is a vast improvement. His translations may be verbose—Zola himself was verbose. They may not reflect everything that is to be found in Zola. In fact, I should be very much surprised if they did, for you will remember that when true translations were placed on the market in England, in the eighties, they were considered too outspoken, pornographic in fact, and as such were suppressed. In view of past experience, my brother's discretion in committing sins of omission is perhaps better than the valorous championship of some of the matter which M. Zola put into his books.

To be in a position to judge of the merits of Mr. Kerpen's claim it is necessary to compare the passage complained of with the original French. It would be only fair to the assailed to put the original and the translation side by side.

The Sage Brush Parson.

New York Times Saturday Review of Books:

In your review of "The Sage Brush Parson," by A. B. Ward, in your issue of March 17, you term the novel "one of those improbable, mostly impossible, and yet always entertaining stories of the West and Westerners that * * * have little or no connection with the sober realities that exist out between the Mississippi River and the Pacific Ocean." According to the first page of the book, the story opens in the year 1881, when conditions in the Nevada mining camps were far different from the present day. It is now an open secret that the Rev. Clement Vaughan, the chief character of "The Sage Brush Parson," is largely drawn from life, the real "parson" of the early eighties being George Wharton James, the well-known author and lecturer. Neither Mr. James, who is now exploring the Colorado River in Southern California, nor the author, who originated the plot and wrote the story, and whose real name is Alice Ward Bailey of Amherst, Mass., will deny this statement. Mr. James, like the Rev. Clement Vaughan, came from England in 1881, and went to Nevada as a missionary preacher, and there still live many old Nevada miners who will recognize the truthful description in the third chapter of the book, giving the picturesque story of his first service, held at Lou Pugh's saloon, in the Lewis mining camp.

Those who are acquainted with Mr. James can very well believe that the author's emphasis upon his slenderness of physique, his refined and ascetic nature, &c., is warranted, and that this description must have applied to him twenty-five years ago, while her portrayal of him knocking out a skilled boxer, his influence over drunkards and gamblers in the saloons, &c., are facts—if we are to believe Mr. James's statements. Jack Perry, the local saloon keeper, and the ruler of the town of Eureka in the story, as well as Père Hyacinthe and Mat Kyle, who appear in the story, are well-known characters who lived in Eureka, Nevada, twenty-five years ago, and it will not be at all difficult for people who lived there at that time to recognize the original of Haverford, the Episcopalian minister of the place—the very antithesis of Vaughan. Mr. James vouches for the statement that the story told in Chapter VI., of gathering a congregation, is literally true, as well as the story of Jack Perry and Ned Wilkins taking up the collection. The story of the funeral of Charlie Davenport, the gambler, and that of the parson's red-hot funeral oration, are also true pictures.

The actual result of this event was that the saloon element could not do enough for the parson. Two of them came and offered to hold a social in the church and give him all the proceeds, guaranteeing the minister $400, they to supply the whisky and the dance music—everything. The minister balked at this, saying he could do without the $400 better than have anything of the sort occur in the church. Not at all offended, the two men—one Jack Perry, the other Mat Kyle, Sheriff—promptly subscribed $10 a month toward the church's expenses. To this statement of fact Mr. James has permitted to be incorporated in the book the story of Lawyer Barker and the "D. P. I.," into which organization he was initiated. When Barker called on the minister and told him the honor that his fellow-citizens were about to confer on him, the parson innocently replied:

"I was not aware that any one had proposed my name for membership. I have not done anything here. In England I was an F. R. H. S., F. R. A. S., F. R. M. S., F. G. S., and M. V. I." He paused before the glint of impish delight in Barker's eyes.

"I don't know that the D. P. I. has any member quite so distinguished," he said, as he held out the membership certificate. Taking it, the young Englishman actually read:

"George Wharton James, elected a member of the D— Phool Infirmary."

The sportive element of the town seized with delight upon the story of the new minister's scientific titles, which Barker quickly circulated. It was promptly decided that the young man was a prevaricator of the highest order. So the S. L. C. held a meeting, and decided to present to him a leather medal, inscribed as follows:

"To the Rev. George Wharton James, F. R. H. S., F. R. A. S., F. R. M. S., F. G. S., M. V. I., Champion Liar, from the Sazerac Lying Club."

Mr James still preserves this medal, as a memento of his early days in the West.

Many other incidents of this sort which are related in "The Sage Brush Parson" are literally true. After several years of missionary work, Mr. James retired, to devote himself to geological, geographical, ethnological, and archaeological researches in California, Nevada, Utah, Colorado, Arizona, and New Mexico, especially in the regions of the Grand Canyon of the Colorado River, among the Wallapai, Navajo, Apache, Havasupai, (of which tribe he is a member in good standing,) Zuni, Hopi, and other tribes of Pueblo Indians, and the various tribes of California. It was during one of his lecturing trips East, while stopping in Amherst, that he told Mrs. Bailey the incidents in his career as a Nevada sky pilot, and she utilized the material in her novel, although the plot is her own invention, and is therefore pure fiction.

Some Blundering Latin.

New York Times Saturday Review of Books:

Your daily contemporary The World has been amusing itself with constructing a coat of arms for the District Attorney and appending thereto a motto out of Juvenal. A correspondent who signs himself "A. M." and describes himself as "the scholarly," undertakes to correct what he calls The World's mistakes in Latin, and falls into a dreadful abyss himself. The line from Juvenal, he says, should read:

Veniam dat corvis, vexat censura columbas.

It is inconceivable that anybody who ever scanned a Latin hexameter should imagine that one could possibly begin with "Veniam dat," which sets the teeth on edge. Juvenal was not the most mellifluous of the Latin poets, but he knew his own language too well for that. Of course, the line should read:

Dat veniam corvis, vexat censura columbas.

By the way, that very untrustworthy compilation, Bohn's "Dictionary of Classical Quotations" falls into a blunder about the very line, not quite so awful as "A. M.'s," but proceeding from the same cause, inattention to the metre. It gives the line accurately, but translates it: "He" * * * "visits the doves with heavy censure." If the compiler had scanned the line he would have seen that "censura" must be the nominative and subject, and that there is no "he" in the sentence at all.

New York Times Saturday Review of Books:

In your issue of March 17 a literary note refers to Miss McLaws's "Maid of Athens" and says that "she asserts" that the book was written before any other novel has made Byron its hero. I wish to say that I, as a publisher's reader, read the "Maid of Athens" in November, 1903. To my knowledge also various other people read it at that time. Except as to one scene, the published book is identical with the manuscript I saw then.

SPELLING REFORM.

Letters from a Philologist, an Enthusiast and a Reformer on the Subject.

I.

New York Times Saturday Review of Books:

THE discussion which has arisen in your paper concerning English spelling brings up a question which can be decided only by English scholars of the highest ability, certainly not by the obiter dictum of the first passer-by. As far, at least, as regards the Romance and the Gothic languages, philology is now an exact science, and has taken its place as a necessary part of the larger science of grammar; therefore any spelling, "reformed" or "phonetic," or other, must be based upon the ascertained results of philology, and should plainly show to the learned the derivation and history of each word in the language, unless it be an indigenous word or an onomatopoeia. For instance, most words from classical languages have come into our tongue not through the nominative, but through some oblique, case, generally the accusative; therefore such a spelling as "centre" and "theatre" are more grammatical than "theater" and "center," because the former exhibits their philology while the latter obscures it. And as the pronunciation is precisely alike in each case, it is surely better to preserve that spelling which displays correctly the derivation and history of the word, than to reduce each sound to a similar spelling, hiding the grammar and spoiling a magnificent weapon of the intellect, the English tongue, for the mere pleasure of the ignorant and careless. A similar caveat may be entered with regard to such spelling as "color," "honor," "favor," in place of the English colour, honour, favour, and other words of this class, which have come to us from Latin certainly, but from Latin through old French. The former spelling discards history, the latter preserves it, and is therefore more grammatical, because philological. If these u-less words have, however, a sort of crude Fourth-form scholarship in their favour, what shall be said of such monstrosities as "endeavor," "neighbor," "Savior," concerning which nothing can be said, nor reason given, but the reason of the typesetter of The Pokevil Record, "All our u's has petered out"? Or can any grammatical, or even phonetic, reason be advanced for "worshiped" for worshipped, or "kidnaped" for kidnapped? Surely the ordinary pronunciation might be preserved, even in a reformed spelling. There is no doubt that the spelling of the language needs attention, and perhaps reform, but an attention, and if needful, reform, by scholars from each country where it is spoken, with due respect given to those who represent the only place in the world where English is the mother tongue, my own dearly loved country, England. As France rules the French language, so ought England the English. This important question of language and its grammar must not be decided for the lazy convenience of the commercial traveler or the Chicago butcher, or the uneducated reporter of a third-rate paper, but in accordance with its own genius and history, of which such men as Prof. Skeat must be the final judges. Most decidedly a writer who seeks to decide such a question by his childish "I hate the English" can settle nothing except one's opinion of his mental incapacity to decide anything requiring intellect.

AN ENGLISHMAN.

II.

New York Times Saturday Review of Books:

This country has this week been stirred as it has never been before on simplified spelling. March 12, 1906, will be a red-letter day in the history of the English language. Of all men, Mr. Carnegie is the best one to head the procession. Many think that the simplification of orthography will destroy the usefulness of the books already printed. But for Mr. Carnegie to espouse the cause, after he has given many millions to libraries, will exert a powerful influence.

According to the papers, the Simplified Spelling Board will in its first list put forth no spelling but what has been seen many a time in print. Nearly all of this list of 300 words will consist of those that are spelled in two or more ways. In this case the board will select the simplest forms that already have an authority, and ask the people to use these instead of the more complicated ones.

So far as the simplification will go in this list there will be no reasonable ground for objection by any one who favors any change at all. So the best thing we can do when the list appears will be to accept it and put it into immediate practice, and then call for more.

Some hate to accept anything less than phonetic spelling. But let us reason a little. When these same persons go to their shops and their offices they do not pass over the entire distance at one stride, but take many steps, one after another, until the journey is completed. So it will be if the English language attains phonetic spelling.

The people would be appalled at the immense leap that they would have to take to render the spelling phonetic. But they could be induced to cast out some useless letters. When they do this they will be surprised that the work is so easy when the great majority unite. Then they will be much more easily induced to take the next step, and then another, and so on, until the movement is carried as far as the people desire.

If we wait for the Simplified Spelling Board to coax and pull us along very little will be done. But if we muster up the courage and go to work like men, and create a public sentiment, I have no doubt that we can induce Mr. Carnegie and his board to go any distance that is practicable.

All who believe in a better spelling should unite at once and persuade the people throughout the English-speaking world to organize for the purpose of discussing the subject and of doing what they can to promote this noble cause. The young people especially like to have some place to go of evenings, and could be easily led to attend the meetings if there be arousing speeches, stirring debates, and enthusiastic performances, interspersed with good music. The cause is so full of merit that many will thereby be converted and become efficient workers. Along this line lies the greatest hope. Let us keep matters moving.

Which, being translated, reads as follows:

"To the Editor of THE NEW YORK TIMES SATURDAY REVIEW: Dear Sir—By agitation, in your columns in favor of a new alphabet, you will, it seems to me, accomplish more in the way of reform and render a much greater service to those using the English language, than Mr. Carnegie and his committee, with their present plans."

In the foregoing I have used numerals and signs to represent such sounds as are not now represented in our alphabet, and for which characters should be designed. As a step in advance of our now very inadequate alphabet I offer the following:

"a, long a; 1, a as in air; 2, a as in cat; 3, a as in far; 4, a as in ball; b, phonetic; c, Italian; d, phonetic; e, long e; 5, e as in bet; 6, e as in her; f, phonetic; g, always hard; h, phonetic; i, long; 7, i as in pin; j, soft g; k, phonetic; l, phonetic; m, phonetic; n, phonetic; o, long o; 8, o as in pot; 9, double o as in boot; (, double o as in good; p, phonetic; q, phonetic, but never followed by u; r, phonetic; s, phonetic; t, phonetic; *, th soft; %, th hard; u, long u; $, u as in but and the obscure sounds; v, phonetic; w, phonetic; x, as in box, but never as z; y, phonetic; z, phonetic."

Here we have thirty-nine characters, their name and their sound the same; the sound never to vary. It would take but a very short time to accustom ourselves to the thirteen additional characters, and when they were once well in use we would all talk and spell alike, making some allowance for accent. There would be here and there some question as to what was correct, but if the pronunciation of the great number was accepted instead of that of the purist, the latter being too inconsistent to be accepted, the cases would be few and far between.

I hope you will think this worthy of being published. I believe it will set machines to clicking, pens to scratching, tongues to wagging, and brains to thinking, and that out of it great and lasting good will come.

An All-Essay Magazine.

New York Times Saturday Review of Books:

I should like to add my voice to help on a little, if may be, the plea for the essay which has lately been raised in your columns. I believe an "All-Essay Magazine" would pay. Our present surfeit of short stories must bring about a reaction in time, and it seems to me that already readers are beginning to turn with unsatisfied weariness from the too facile pages of most of our magazines. The popular mind does want, after all, something on which to whet itself. In the world of books the essay is certainly growing in favor. Witness the sale of such productions as "The Gentle Reader," Woodberry's "Torch," and the work of Mrs. Meynell, Henderson, Miss Repplier, and Vernon Lee. The Atlantic Monthly furnishes an honorable platform for such thoughtful, genial presences as these, but the crowd of them is growing and they need another stage.

It is indeed, as one of your readers has remarked, a most hopeful sign that this essay agitation has arisen. In its very birth is manifest the need for it. Let those of us who have at heart the deepening and strengthening of American life and literature help the good cause along.

Michelet's "L'Amour."

New York Times Saturday Review of Books:

"In the interests of accuracy," as Mr. Richard Burton neatly phrases it, I would like to state that my translation of Michelet's book, "L'Amour," bears the following imprint: "New York: Carlton, Publisher, Madison Square. Paris: W. Hachette et Cie, MDCCCLXXIV." While Mr. Burton does not specifically state that the Appletons were the publishers, he leaves the reader to infer as much, as the "only copy in this country" belonged to them. As to its being the only copy in this country, sent surreptitiously by mail, or otherwise, to the Appletons, the fact that it bears the imprint of the Paris house deserves an interrogation point, to say the least.

The CRUISE of the CONQUEROR
Being the Further Adventures of the Motor Pirate
Sydney Paternoster

Being the Further Adventures of the Motor Pirate.

Frontispiece in colors by FRANK T. MERRILL. $1.50

All who read of The Motor Pirate's career on land will wish to read of his exploits at sea. How, by means of the fastest and most wonderful Motor Boat in the world, he holds up a mail steamer in mid-ocean, abducts the Prince of Monte Carlo and performs other no less wonderful feats of criminal daring, will prove absorbingly interesting to all who are fond of tales of adventure and of the best detective fiction.

No Motor Enthusiast Can Afford NOT to Read "The Cruise of the Conquerer."

Second Edition Now Ready of

CAROLINA LEE

By LILIAN BELL, Author of "Hope Loring," etc., with frontispiece in colors, from an oil painting by DORA WHEELER KEITH. $1.50.

Caroline Lee is the most lovable and interesting of all the author's fascinating creations. The solution of the problems involved in her career is the author's best effort, and the story is brilliant with the truths of life and sentiment.

HARPERS BOOKS

SILAS STRONG
Emperor of the Woods

Irving Bacheller's new novel has all the freshness of his first great success—"EBEN HOLDEN." Its bearing on a great problem, its humanity and simplicity suggest Uncle Tom's Cabin. Silas Strong, the "one-word-man," is among the most unique and lovable characters in fiction. Some of the maxims in his diary ought to be pasted in every man's hat. He is a droll, amusing and heroic figure, Equally irresistible are:

Smith, his sister.
Socky and Sue } two quaint children and
Zeb, the bear-dog with a cross-eye and a serious countenance, but a most cheerful disposition.

Chatwit
The Man-talk Bird

Philip Verrill Mighels, author of "Bruvver Jim's Baby," has written another story of the West, wholly out of the rut of conventional fiction. Chatwit is a magpie who learns "man-talk" while in captivity and escapes to the wilds to astonish birds and beasts alike with his weird accomplishment. There are exciting scenes in the plots and counterplots of the animals who take sides with or against Chatwit.

The Rise Of American Nationality

Volume 13 of the American Nation (the Harper's great 27-volume history) is now published. It is by Dr. Kendric Charles Babcock, President of the University of Arizona. The War of 1812 is the chief topic treated.

The Genius

This novel, by Margaret Potter, of the life of a famous Russian composer, is a strange and deeply moving tale of shifting fortunes, dramatic episodes and final artistic triumphs.

"The rise of genius to the heights of world-fame is tellingly traced. A notable novel."—N. Y. Evening Mail.

Miss Primrose

The romance of Miss Primrose, as told by the little boy living next door, is naive and charming in the extreme and full of irresistible humor. Roy Rolfe Gilson is unequalled in his interpretation of child life.

Crime and Mystery.

THE PRISONER OF ORNITH FARM. By Frances Powell, author of "The House on the Hudson." New York: Charles Scribner's Sons.

"What next?" That is the state of mind, bidding fair to become chronic, you will be in if you read "The Prisoner of Ornith Farm."

The startling abduction of Hope Carmichael from her own wealthy family and luxurious surroundings to the mysterious farm in Connecticut where she is held a prisoner in a barred room on the plea of insanity, her numberless wild and futile attempts at escape and the power over every one with whom he comes in contact of the villainous counterfeiter Lannion—these things combine to make a more than thrilling narrative.

One time it is the heroine's skill in horseback riding that saves her from a tragic death. Another time it is her ability to sing quaint ballads under the most trying of circumstances that keeps the two fierce bloodhounds from tearing her to bits.

At last, when suspense has been carried to the very verge of despair and one of the characters indeed has died of heart failure, the right hero comes galloping up with a Sheriff and his men behind him and Hope, in more senses than one, leaves the counterfeiting band.

There is no doubt this is sensationalism of a successful sort. It is exciting enough to make one forget even the toothache, and that you will admit is to grant it has enough excuse for being.

◆

Biology.

"The Breeding Industry: Its Value to the Country and Its Needs" is the subject of the volume by Walter Heape, M. A., of Trinity College, which is appearing here through the Macmillan Company. An attempt has been made to draw closer together the two classes of workers in biology, the "practical breeder" and the "scientific biologist." The breeding of poultry, cattle, sheep, horses, &c., is discussed, figures are given of results on different farms, and the experiences of breeders related.

◆

Concerning Polar Investigation.

"The Phantom of the Poles" is the title of a volume, by William Reed, which deals with the question of arctic and antarctic exploration from a new point of view. The author gives the opinions set down by Peary, Nansen, Melville, Greely, and other investigators, and also tells what he thinks of the "problem" of the poles. He has supplied his book with many pictures, and it will appear next month with the imprint of the Walter S. Rockey Company of this city.

No very Poor
No very Rich

In Switzerland the government owns the railroads, telephones, street-cars, post-offices and telegraphs, and the people own the government.

There is no emigration from Switzerland. The poor are not oppressed; the rich are satisfied with normal life.

THE COMPLETE WORKS OF ABRAHAM LINCOLN.
The Celebrated Gettysburg Edition.
EDITED BY JOHN G. NICOLAY AND JOHN HAY
With Numerous Important Additions.

"With the additional matter we have everything that Lincoln wrote that is of consequence. * * * The edition, therefore, may be regarded as definitive, and in the handsome form in which it is presented, should have a place in every American home."—The Sun, New York.

"The contents of these volumes (I. & II.) are obviously sufficient to justify the new publication; though they do not change * * * the estimate of Lincoln, they add to our knowledge of him."—N. Y. Times Book Review.

"The publishers * * * have harmonized the bookmaking with the character of the subject. Simplicity, dignity, and excellence have been sought and dignify these volumes."—Detroit Free Press.

QUERIES.

To secure attention in this department every communication must be signed with the full name and address of the inquirer, which will not be published unless the inquirer so desires. Trivial questions will not be heeded. Queries will be answered in the order of their receipt, and as the number received weekly is very large, and the pressure upon our columns is always very great, inquirers must always be prepared to await their turn.

M. G. C., Grass Lake, Mich.—H. P. Main asks for information regarding Sydney M. Grannis, the song writer. Mr. Grannis was born in Geneseo, Livingston County, N. Y., Sept. 23, 1829, but four years later his father removed to Le Roy, N. Y., where the celebrated vocalist and composer lived for half a century. About five years ago he found his way to Los Angeles, Cal., where some of his admirers gave him a cottage and grounds, which doubtless he still occupies if alive. His first song, "Do They Miss Me At Home?" gave him a National reputation. His later compositions, "Only Waiting," "Cling to the Union," "O Tell Me Not of Brighter Lands," "We All Wear Cloaks," "People Will Talk," and "Your Mission," were all popular in their day, and had large sales. Mr. Grannis was the tenor of "The Amphions," and after that troupe disbanded because of the death of some of its members, he and John H. Pixley, another member of the Amphions, traveled together for years, giving over 5,000 concerts. Mr. Grannis's voice was of marvelous flexibility, sweet as a flute, and had a range of three octaves. I have always understood that he never learned to read written music, but his ear was exquisite and accurate, and he readily mastered a melody upon hearing it rendered once or twice.

S. T. P., Amesbury, Mass.—"A. L. R.," New York, asks the address of Anna Boynton Averill, author of the poem "Birch Stream." It is Dover, Piscataquis County, Me.

G. H. SASS, Charleston, S. C.—The lines inquired about by George H. Evans are from a poem by William Alexander, Archbishop of Armagh, Ireland, entitled "The Icebound Ship." The correct form of the lines is as follows:

"The white sail of his soul has rounded
The promontory—death."

The whole poem can be found in the Archbishop's volume of poems entitled "St. Augustine's Holiday and Other Poems."

M. E. P.—"My Own Dolly" was published by E. P. Dutton & Co., New York, in 1882. It is by a popular author of books for girls, Miss Amy E. Blanchard.

B. H., Flushing, N. Y.—The initials "D. I. O." are the slang abbreviation of a "Wellerism," current many years ago: "As the fly said to the mustard pot, 'Dam'me I'm off.'" It was an equivalent of the "so long" of our day.

E. F. PALMER—(1) Will you tell me something about the French writer, Paul de Kock? In the two or three reference books at my command he is not mentioned even by name. In what estimation are his writings held to-day? (2) Where will I find this quotation: "A fool and his money are soon parted"?

(1.) Paul de Kock was born at Passy, 1794, and died in Paris in 1871. He began to write in 1813, and produced novels and plays until he died. He described an element of Parisian life no longer in existence—the life of the grisettes and the cheap Bohemians. His works are supposed to be very wicked, and certainly were not intended for "young persons." But "there is a good deal of human nature" in them, "a good deal of accurate observation, and an almost total absence of the revolting and the preposterous." (2.) It is ascribed to George Buchanan, tutor to James VI. of Scotland (James I. of England.) According to the story, he made a wager with a courtier that he (Buchanan) could tell a viler story than the other. Buchanan won, and picking up the stakes remarked: "A fool and his money are soon parted." The winner, by the way, was one of the wisest and most learned men of his time.

P. T. L., Branford, Conn.—Can you let me know about a very old book called the "Book of Hours"—small plush binding, clasps hand illumined, and very rare?

A "Book of Hours" is one which contains the prayers of the Catholic Church, the order of the mass; it is about the same as the Book of Common Prayer is in the Anglican Church. It is essentially a book for the laity. During a period of about three centuries beginning about 400 years ago, it was the custom for wealthy ladies to have very beautiful copies of the Book of Hours made for them; the Books of Hours of the Queens and Princesses of France are especially noted. Your copy may be of value; it may not be; an expert must pass upon it.

L. S. B., New York—(1) Can you find the meaning of the Indian name Kenesaw? (2) Where can the quotation be found, "The hand that rocks the cradle rules the world"? It is not in Bartlett.

(1.) An expert writes: "If I had a clue to which one of over 300 Indian languages the word might belong I would know in what direction to look it up." (2.) In William Ross Wallace's poem of the same name, which you will find in his collected poems, at a library.

WARWICK J. P., Philadelphia—Can you advise me of the source of the line, "Dance light, for my heart it lies under your feet, love"? I find it quoted as the final line in a four-stanza Irish ballad, to which the title is this same line, though in that case not quoted. The ballad appears over the signature "John Francis Waller," in a volume of "Poets and Poetry of Ireland," edited by one Williams, and published some twenty-five years ago—I have not the exact date of publication.

The ballad is Waller's "Kitty Neal," and the line is quoted simply and solely because Felix, Kitty's lover, speaks the words.

ANXIOUS INQUIRER—Can you tell me who is the author of the words "Great minds run in the same channel"?

The authorship of a proverb cannot be placed, as a rule. In the matter of "minds" you will find proverbs contradicting themselves: "Many men of many minds," "great minds think alike," "so many men, so many minds," and so on.

H. W. L.—Can you name a few periodicals devoted to essays which are likely to give a hearing to an unknown writer?

The Atlantic, The Critic, the Independent, The Outlook, come to mind.

J. L. PETERS, Columbiana, Ala.—Where can I find the poem beginning, "I dreamed that I dwelt in marble halls," and the name of the author?

The song was written by Alfred Bunn, an English theatre manager and writer, and was used in Balfe's opera "The Bohemian Girl" in 1843.

K. F. COLEMAN—Will you explain to me Mr. Kipling's meaning in his short story "They" in "Traffics and Discoveries"?

There was an excited discussion over this piece when it appeared; we think the conclusion reached was that no one but Kipling knew exactly what he meant—and he did not tell.

A. W. H.—Can you tell me who Frederick Langbridge is, and if his sonnets are published in a volume?

He is rector of St. John's (Anglican) Church, Limerick, Ireland, and is just 57 years old. His sonnets seem not to have been collected, but are to be found among the nine or ten volumes of poems which he has published. Mr. Langbridge has written several plays, "The Only Way," written with Freeman Wills, being the best known.

GEORGE W. EMERSON—Can you give me any idea as to the value of the following Stamp Act pamphlet? The title page is as follows: "Anno Regni — Georgii III.—Regis—Magnae Brittanniae, Franciae & Hiberniae—Quinto—At the Parliament begun and holden at Westminster, the Nineteenth Day of May Anno. Dom. 1761 in the First Year of the Reign of our Sovereign Lord—George the Third—By the Grace of God of Great Britain, France & Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith, etc.—And from thence continued by several Prorogations to the Tenth Day of Jan., 1765, being the Fourth Session of the Twelfth Parliament of Great Britain.—London Printed:—Boston, N. E.—Reprinted and Sold by Edes & Gill, Queen St., 1765."

A copy of the Stamp act has been sold at $18; a New Jersey copy has brought from $7.75 to $20. We cannot price yours.

L. M. WOOD—The poem for which E. Heath asked is by William Herbert Carruth, and is called "Each in His Own Tongue." I inclose a copy.

Several other friends send the same answer. If E. Heath will send his address, with a stamp, we will send him the copy.

J. H. W.—Who wrote "Bonnie Dundee"? I know it is universally ascribed to Robert Burns, but it cannot be found in any edition of his complete works; also, by inference, he claims it in "Nancy Stair."

Sir Walter Scott; it is in Act II., Scene ii., of his drama "The Doom of Devorgoil."

L. C. W., New York—"E. M. A." will find the lines he seeks in Mrs. Browning's "Rhyme of the Duchess May," the concluding stanza.

Many other readers have sent the same answer. One friend places the lines in Mrs. Browning's "Aurora Leigh," but wrongly.

McNOX, Plainfield, N. J.—The quotation placed by you in answer to "R. O.," March 10, can, as you surmised, be traced much further back in idea, if not in exact form. In substance it forms one of the "Quatrains" of Pibrac, which have been translated into almost all languages, even Persian and Arabic. Guy de Faur, Lord of Pibrac, (1528-1584,) was a writer of some note, and among other works published his "Quatrains; or Moral Stanzas of Four Lines." An English translation was made by the Joshua Sylvester who translated the "Divine Weekes and Workes" of Du Bartas. One of Pibrac's quatrains, in Sylvester's English, is:

"Cease not to learn until thou cease to live;
Think that day lost wherein thou drawest no letter
Nor gain'st no lesson that new grace may give
To make thyself learneder, wiser, better."

M. C. L., Plainfield, N. J.—I am not sure, but I think I have seen the phrase "to know one's own parish" in connection with a naturalist's fitness, asked for by W. L. Sherwood, in a preface or review of some recent edition of White's "Selborne." It would fit there appropriately.

No Name.—The song "Fontenoy," for which M. P. S. asked on March 10, is not by Thomas Osborne Davis, whose poem is not singable. The song referred to by M. P. S. begins—

"By our camp fire rose a murmur,
At the dawning of the day,
And the tread of many footsteps
Spoke the coming of the fray." &c.

The song was written by Bartholomew Dowling, who died in California many years ago.

G. M. CROSBY: In reply to "A. J. Brown, Somers, N. J.," in your Queries of March 10, relative to a certain poem about the flag at half mast, the author is Mrs. Helen M. Cooke. It is in one of her books of poems, "Pine Needles," published in 1886 by E. B. Treat, and is entitled "A Woman's Question."

J. B. KIMBER: On March 10 May Ellis asked for a poem in which this line occurs: "It opens the gates of heaven." The 136-139 lines of "Paradise and the Peri" read as follows:

"But see—alas!—the crystal bar
Of Eden moves not—holier far
Than e'en this drop the boon must be
That opes the gates of heaven for me."

Appeals to Readers.

JOHN TRAYNOR—Where can I get the poems of Oofty Gooft, otherwise Gus Phillips, a German dialect comedian?

Mrs. A. E. STORY, Clay Centre, Kan.—Will you kindly tell me who wrote the following and where it may be found: "Slumber not in the tents of your fathers, the world is advancing, advance with it"?

F. E. GEN, Rochester, N. Y.—I am very anxious to secure a copy of the poem entitled "In a Rose Garden," the work of John Bennett. Kindly advise me where and how I may obtain it.

"F. A. D."—Can you tell me where I can procure a copy of "Roura Pass," and the name of the author of same? It is a very old book and was brought from Scotland many years ago.

THE PUBLISHERS.

A Complete Edition of Theodore Roosevelt's Writings—Mr. Lancaster's First Novel—Notes and News.

A COUPLE of important editorial announcements come from Charles Scribner's Sons this week—the "complete" Roosevelt and the biographical Meredith. Although there are many editions of Theodore Roosevelt's works, none includes all his books, as the forthcoming edition purposes to do. It has been named "The Elkhorn," after the Wyoming ranch where the author received his cowboy instruction. The biographical Meredith will be similar to the recently published Biographical Stevenson—that is, in 16mo volumes, each introduced with prefatory material dealing with the circumstances in which the pages following were written.

Ernest Poole, the well-known contributor of short stories to the American magazines, has sent his first novel to A. S. Barnes & Co. It is entitled "The Voice of the Street." The story deals with life in the New York tenements, already familiar to readers of Mr. Poole's tales. The novel will appear probably at the end of April or the early part of May.

The Scribners are bringing out an English version of "My Little Boy," a new story by the well-known Danish writer Carl Ewald, author of schoolbooks, literary essays, fairy tales, novels, &c. The translation is by A. T. de Mattos, who has done Maeterlinck into English. It deals with the development of the mind of a boy and his relations to his father.

A "Practice Book in English Composition," shortly to come from Henry Holt & Co., will present the results of long experience in teaching English composition to high school boys and girls by Alfred M. Hitchcock of Hartford, Conn. Every exercise, it is pointed out, has been tested in the schoolroom, and the book has been adapted to the needs of a first-year high school pupil.

Houghton, Mifflin & Co. are about to bring out Volume I. of a new series of monographs, to be known as the "Harvard Economic Studies," and published by this firm for the Department of Economics of Harvard University. The first issue, "English Patents of Monopoly, 1560-1640," by W. H. Price, got the David A. Wells Prize of the current year. It will be followed by a study of "The Lodging House Problem in Boston," by A. B. Wolfe.

Doubleday, Page & Co. announce that they will send out at once "The Spur," the first novel by G. B. Lancaster, the mysterious author of the New Zealand tales, "Sons o' Men," instead of waiting until the Autumn. The novel is also of Australia, but the scene shifts for a time to Samoa, where the love story of the hero begins. He is a New Zealand sheep shearer with literary ability, and sells himself to a villain to prove himself.

McClure, Phillips & Co. are bringing out the fifth revised edition of A. B. Filson Young's "The Complete Motorist," to which some new chapters and illustrations have been added. They also issue here, in conjunction with Hodder & Stoughton in London, "Plays and Lyrics," by Cale Young Rice, author of "David," &c. This book contains some new poems by Mr. Rice, the best of his recent lyrical work, and a new poetic drama, "Yolanda of Cyprus."

The Macmillan Company will issue soon an "Anthology of French Poetry: From the Time of Froissart up to the Beginning of the Present Century," by Frederick Lawton.

The Baker & Taylor Company is sending to press the fifth edition of Henry R. Poore's "Pictorial Composition and the Critical Judgment of Pictures," the demand for which in England, it is reported, is also good.

Isaac Pitman & Sons will publish March 30 "A Short Course in Shorthand," being a new exposition of the system of phonography arranged in forty lessons.

The middle of the next month will see the publication by James Pott & Co. of "Undistinguished Americans," the series of articles that appeared in The Independent, dealing with people of various races who left the Old World for the New; "Robert Louis Stevenson," by G. K. Chesterton, and "Cathedrals of England and Wales," by T. Francis Bumpus.

Next Saturday Little, Brown & Co. expect to publish "The Heart of the Railroad Problem," by Prof. Frank Parsons, author of "The City for the People," &c. This is, according to the sub-title, a "history of railway discrimination in the United States, with efforts at control, remedies proposed, and hints from other countries." The author writes from many years of study and investigation, and is said here to [illegible] the facts in reference to railway "favoritism," or unjust discrimination.

James Pott & Co. will bring out in April "A Sicilian Marriage," by Douglas Sladen. The scenes of this love story, as indicated by the title, are laid in Sicily, a place familiar to readers of the author's other books. Much of the forthcoming volume is devoted to descriptions of the life, scenery, and antiquities of the Sicilians.

Dodd, Mead & Co. are publishing this Spring Trollope's "The Vicar of Bulhampton" in the new edition of his works. The book was written in 1868, and attracted much attention upon its appearance. The publishers also report the sixth edition of Elizabeth Ellis's lively tale, "Barbara Winslow, Rebel."

The Macmillan Company is isuing a second edition of "The Theory of Determinants in the Historical Order of Development," by Thomas Muir, M. A., LL. D., F. R. S., Superintendent General of Education in Cape Colony.

Charles Morris's new book in the series of American life stories, "Heroes of Discovery in America," published by the J. B. Lippincott Company of Philadelphia, deals with the adventures of Pizarro, Cortez, Balboa, De Soto, Champlain, La Salle, Boone, Frémont, Lewis and Clark, and others.

The May issue of the Garden Magazine will contain suggestions and advice for the late planting of flower borders. Examples will be given of flowers to be cut in November and October. There will also be an article on the management of large chrysanthemums for exhibition, while there will be suggestive matter for the vegetable gardener in "Quaint Tomatoes for Pickling and Preserving."

Miss Ida M. Tarbell, the well-known magazine writer and historian, and Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Phillips have returned from the West, where they have been sightseeing. They spent part of the time with Mr. and Mrs. William Allen White.

The two addresses delivered by Dr. Edward Everett Hale before the Brooklyn Institute on "The Foundations of the Republic" will appear in book form next month, through James Pott & Co.

Doubleday, Page & Co. will publish April 12 Henry Demarest Lloyd's "Man and the Social Creator," when it will also be brought out in England. They report the fifth English edition of Andrew Carnegie's "The Empire of Business," and announce that "New Games and Amusements" will be issued in Australia the beginning of April.

The Macmillan Company is bringing out a volume of "Practical Exercises in Chemistry," by G. C. Donington, M. A. of Leeds, England. With illustrations, diagrams, tables, plans, etc., the author makes an "attempt to secure the advantages of modern 'research' methods of study, and yet to recognize the actual conditions of class teaching in school laboratories." The directions in the book have been made "explicit."

"Called to the Field," the new story by Lucy M. Thurston, author of "Misstress Brent," etc., is published this week by Little, Brown & Co. The story is told by the heroine, a young Virginian who, just married, and very happy, is confronted by the civil war, which changes the current of her life. There are numerous sketches of negro life and character in the book.

A selfish man is the principal character in A. M. Barbour's new story, "Breakers Ahead," which the Lippincotts will send from the press shortly. It is said to be better than the author's "That Mainwaring Affair" and "At the Time Appointed." The tale is that of Americans who love and plot.

The J. S. Barcus Company of this city is bringing out "The Prophet of Martinique," by Lydia Whitaker. Besides a love story, the book also gives an account of the historic destruction of Mt. Pelée An interesting feature of the volume is the frontispiece. It consists of three pages upon which are sketches of the characters in the story. The other illustrations include photographs of Martinique after the eruption which devastated the island.

A "romance without bloodshed" is announced for early publication by the J. B. Lippincott Company of Philadelphia. It is "The Colonel of the Red Huzzars," the first novel by John Reed Scott, a native of Pennsylvania and now connected with a well-known law firm of Pittsburg. From 1887 to 1896 he was correspondent for many newspapers. The heroine is a Princess and drawn from a lady known to the author.

In a few weeks the Putnams will issue "Practical Rifle Shooting," the long-awaited book by Walter Winans. It has been designed for the beginner with a series of "hints" which will help him not only "to put himself through a course of continuous and graduated training, but may also keep him free of the tricks which impede progress, and which, if persisted in, will destroy his ability for any but the most artificial forms of shooting."

With Foreword by
The Rev. WILLIAM R. HUNTINGTON, D.D.
12mo, XVI-179 pages. Printed on extra quality deckle edge paper. Net, $1.00; by mail, $1.06.

Ohio State Journal: "One of the most interesting treatments of the subject that has appeared for many years. The style is delightfully lucid and has a fascinating quality arising from its very directness. The veriest skeptic would believe in prayer if he could have the understanding of it revealed in this little volume."
The Hartford Daily Times: "In itself the book is distinctly original and what the author has to say is admirably expressed."
Democrat and Chronicle, Rochester: "It is pervaded by a firmness of conviction, combined with a gentleness of spirit, that appeals most forcibly to the reader."

PAGES IN WAITING.

AMERICA must take part in solving the "Far Eastern Question," says Thomas F. Millard in his new book on "The New Far East," which Charles Scribner's Sons publish to-day. He writes from many years of study of the people and country and politics of China, Korea, and Japan. Some of the material has already been used for articles which appeared in Scribner's Magazine, and relates the experiences in four journeys to the Far East during the last half dozen years. Mr. Millard warns the world against the acceptance of the statements of the Japanese in regard to their position in the Far East, and shows how the genius of the Island Kingdom was displayed during the recent conflict with Russia through the help of England in making public what it wished the world to know and in concealing what it wished the world to be ignorant.

Real Meaning of the Far Eastern Question.

There are chapters in the book on "Japan in Korea and Manchuria," the Anglo-Japanese alliance, the Russo-Japanese treaty of peace, and so forth, as well as a sketch and forecast of the "new China." In his closing chapter Mr. Millard gives his definition of the existing "Far Eastern Question."

> The possibilities of the Orient, in a commercial and industrial sense, have not yet been scratched, and that the present century will witness a tremendous evolution there cannot be doubted. That the tendency of material discovery and its application * * * is to eliminate those conditions which for so long kept large segments of the human race in comparative isolation from each other * * * is now generally recognized.

⁂

Moral Ideas in Development.

The results of many years of study are embodied in the two volumes on "The Origin and Development of the Moral Ideas," which the Macmillan Company issues for Edward Westermarck of the Universities of Hulsingfors, Finland, and London, author of "History of Human Marriage." He endeavors to answer such questions as, Why do the moral ideas in general differ so greatly? Why is there in many cases such a wide agreement? Why are there any moral ideas at all? &c.

The first few chapters in the book comprise a study of the moral "concepts"—right, wrong, duty, justice, virtue, merit, &c. Here are examined the moral emotions, their nature and origin, and also the relations between these emotions and the various moral "concepts." Further will be found discussions of the phenomena to which such "concepts" are applied. Then is scrutinized the general character of these phenomena, and an answer is sought to the question, Why are facts of a certain type matters of moral concern while others are not? And, finally, the most important of the phenomena have been classified, the moral ideas relating to each class given, and, as far as possible, also explained.

The numerous references to customs and ideas prevailing among the natives of Morocco are some of the fruits of four years spent by Mr. Westermarck in that country, living among the people in the rural districts. His experiences in Morocco will shortly be embodied in a special monograph on the popular religion and magics of the Moors.

⁂

Vernon Lee's Tales About Ghosts.

"Hauntings: Fantastic Stories," by Vernon Lee, author of "Hortus Vitae," "The Enchanted Woods," "The Spirit of Rome," &c., is being issued by the John Lane Company at the Bodley Head in a new edition. There are four stories in all—"Amour Dure," "Dionea," "Oke of Okehurst," and "A Wicked Voice." Of these tales, the author writes in her preface as follows:

> My four little tales are of no genuine ghosts in the scientific sense; they tell of no hauntings such as could be contributed by the Society for Psychical Research, of no spectres that can be caught in definite places and made to dictate judicial evidence. My ghosts are what you call spurious ghosts, (according to me the only genuine ones,) of whom I can affirm only one thing, that they haunted certain brains, and have haunted, among others, my own and my friends'—yours, dear Arthur Lemon, along the dim twilight tracks, among the high-growing bracken and the spectral pines, of the south country; and yours, amidst the mist of moonbeams and olive branches, dear Flora Priestly, while the moonlit sea moaned and rattled against the moldering walls of the house whence Shelley set sail for eternity.

The first story is in the form of a diary, and deals with the adventures of a German professor in Umbria. The second comprises some letters treating of the fortunes of a "sea-waif"; "Oke of Okehurst" has to do with "a phantom lover" and a family superstition, while the fourth tale tells of a musician who hears a voice "from the past."

Architecture From Earliest Days.

The announcement comes from the Baker & Taylor Company of the completion by Russell Sturgis, author and editor of a number of architectural works, of "A History of Architecture" from the earliest times in Egypt down to the present day. Volume I. will appear in October and be followed shortly by Volumes II. and III. Each book will have some 500 half-tone illustrations, in addition to others reproduced by the carbongravure process. Besides the regular cloth edition, there will be another bound in half morocco.

Volume I., which is being hurried through the press, will treat of Egyptian architecture, Babylonian and Assyrian styles, the later Western Asiatic examples, Greek architecture down to about 100 B. C., the earlier Italian work in its different forms, Roman imperial architecture from 100 B. C. to 400 A. D., and other pre and non historic buildings before 400 A. D. In addition, there is to be a consideration of architecture and its development down to 1000 A. D.—the time of the South European Lake Dwellers and Northern Europe's Scandinavians and Celts, Russia, and tropical and semi-tropical America.

In Volume II. the author will continue his history with discussions of the post-Roman styles—Latin, Byzantine, Romanesque, Mohammedan, and the Gothic school of Central and Northern Europe. This volume will also include a study of the architecture of China, Japan, and India up to about 1400 A. D. The subject will be concluded in Volume III., in which Mr. Sturgis will describe the different styles of architecture from the fifteenth century—the French "florid Gothic," the English Tudor style, and the beginnings of classic revival in Italy, down through the years to an explanation of the "failure" of the nineteenth century in architecture, which was succeeded by painting and sculpture. Throughout the work special attention, wherever possible, will be paid to domestic architecture, because, as it is pointed out, in many cases, this art showed more refinement than did the grandiose architecture of temple and church.

⁂

A Biography of Henry Sidgwick.

Arthur and Eleanor Mildred Sidgwick have written a memoir of Henry Sidgwick, the well-known English philosophical and ethical writer, whose "true self" was, as he once wrote in a letter to F. Myers, a theist.

Besides the personal memories of the biographers and the printed records of their subject, the authors have made use of the brief autobiographical "fragment" dictated by Sidgwick in his last illness, a journal kept by him between 1884 and 1892 and sent at intervals to John Addington Symonds, and numerous letters to friends and relatives.

Prof. Sidgwick was a man of many parts. He always placed himself in touch with any new movement that seemed to promise benefits for the human race and with any rising man of genius whose work attracted him for the same reason. In early life he became an eager member of the psychical research society known as the "Ghost Society," and its influence is to be found throughout his philosophical and theological writings. In a like manner, but with more hesitation, he identified himself with the movement of University Degrees for Women. As for his religious views, these are given in the letter mentioned above, written to Myers from Ostend in June, 1870, in reply to the request of the latter to address a poem to Sidgwick:

> I do not feel called upon or able to preach religion except as far as it is involved in fidelity to one's true self. I firmly believe that religion is normal to mankind, and therefore take part unhesitatingly in any social action to adapt and sustain it, (as far as a layman may.) I know also that my true self is a theist, but I believe that many persons are really faithful to themselves in being irreligious, and I do not feel able to prophesy to them.

The volume, which is published by the Macmillan Company, is illustrated with portraits in photogravure.

A Story for Children.

The Saalfield Publishing Company of Akron, Ohio, has down for publication at the end of the month "Witch Crow and Barney Bylow," by Dr. James Ball Naylor. It is a story for boys and girls, illustrated with pen-and-ink sketches and full-page pictures in color.

Dr. Huntington's Book.

The title of the recently published book by the Rev. W. R. Huntington, D. D., rector of Grace Church, New York, is "A Good Shepherd, and Other Sermons," and not "A Good Shepherd and Other Poems." The book is published by Thomas Whittaker.

THE "MAGAZINE PROBLEM" SOLVED AT LAST

What's in the Magazines

A Guide and Index to the Contents of the Current Periodicals

Published Monthly by The Dial Company Chicago

Price 5 cents a copy
Yearly subscription 50 cents

GOOD periodicals have multiplied so rapidly of late that there is a common feeling of despair over what may be called "the magazine problem." Never were the magazines so full of good things that we would not willingly miss seeing; and yet we usually do miss them, simply because we do not know of their existence. ¶ It is the purpose of WHAT'S IN THE MAGAZINES to solve this vexing problem by making the mass of current magazine literature accessible to the busy every-day reader,—to show just what the leading periodicals contain and to indicate the general character and scope of the principal articles. ¶ It is not a mere list of the contents of the current magazines, with titles of articles, stories, poems, and pictures jumbled together without the slightest clue to their character. Everything is arranged and classified, simply but exactly, so that the reader may, if he so wishes, confine his attention to the subjects or the periodicals in which he is most interested. ¶ Each issue presents a bird's-eye view of the magazines of the month, that will give one in five minutes the information hitherto to be obtained only by long and tedious examination of contents-pages on the news-stands. It is a periodical that brings all the other periodicals into a nutshell; and as such must prove indispensable to everyone who would keep in touch with current literature and affairs.

This new little magazine should be of incalculable value to those endeavoring to "keep track" of a particular kind of literary material, as well as to those regularly confused by a superabundance of literary riches.—CHICAGO RECORD-HERALD.

Your Magazine Index is a genuine inspiration, and I am sure will be welcomed.—EMILY HUNTINGTON MILLER, Englewood, N. J.

I am enthusiastic over your Magazine Guide. It is exactly what I have wanted for a long time and what I have tried at different times to get. It will enable one to strike a happy medium between ignoring the magazines altogether and spending all one's time on them.—Prof. F. H. HODDER, University of Kansas.

This guide to magazines should have a wide field of usefulness, and is worth binding up year by year for reference.—SPRINGFIELD REPUBLICAN.

This is just what I have been needing always. It is a great help to the literary worker, and is in convenient form for filing in compact shape.—GELETT BURGESS, Boston.

It forms a ready means whereby may be followed the making of literature and history in the leading American magazines. Should be in the hands of every literary worker, and to many casual readers it will be no less serviceable.—BOSTON TRANSCRIPT.

The announcement of your new enterprise gave me great satisfaction. I have for some time been wanting needing to search the magazines for a special purpose, and the attempt was simply discouraging. Readers who wish to know all that would interest them in the magazine world will owe you a debt of gratitude.—MARY AGNES TINCKER, Boston.

Your publication is a splendid thing, and most helpful to anyone whose time is limited and who is anxious to keep abreast of the times.—MELVILLE E. STONE, Manager The Associated Press, New York.

There is so much of good and so much of trash between periodical covers these days that an opportunity to "size up" the articles before buying the magazine is a veritable boon. To be able to look over the contents of a score of publications, and make such selections as appeal to one's taste or fancy, is the privilege of all who become subscribers to this long-felt want. Why has no brilliant mind been inspired to this plan long before?—LOS ANGELES EVENING NEWS.

Congratulations and thanks. A priceless boon to a busy man.—HENRY TURNER BAILEY, North Scituate, Mass.

A labor and time-saving device that promises to attain an almost universal popularity. The multiplication of worthy periodicals within the past few years has meant a serious embarrassment to those who try to keep in touch with current literature, and despair was heretofore the portion of the man who disliked to miss articles of value wherever produced. As a handy guide to the things one needs or desires, "What's in the Magazines" must fill a long-felt want. It is a veritable path through the forest.—DETROIT EVENING NEWS.

I have long been hoping that such a thing would be published; and many of my correspondents have—especially within the past five or six years—inquired whether there was any publication of that kind. I see no need of improvement of the excellent plan.—WILLIAM A. DRESSER, The Authors' Agency, Boston.

SPECIAL OFFER For purposes of introduction, WHAT'S IN THE MAGAZINES will be sent to any reader of the Times Saturday Review for one year (12 issues) on receipt of 25 cents—just half the regular price.

The Car for Service

Government Commendation

In explanation of their action in selecting the White steamer in preference to any other make of car for the new automobile ambulance, the authorities of the United States War Department report as follows:

"It (the White) is simple in operation. The means of propulsion being steam, it is better suited to the transportation of the sick or wounded than gasoline cars on account of its free and smooth running, freedom from violent vibration, and ease of controlling the speed between maximum and minimum without jerks or jolts."

THE ROOSEVELT BEARS
BY PAUL PIPER.

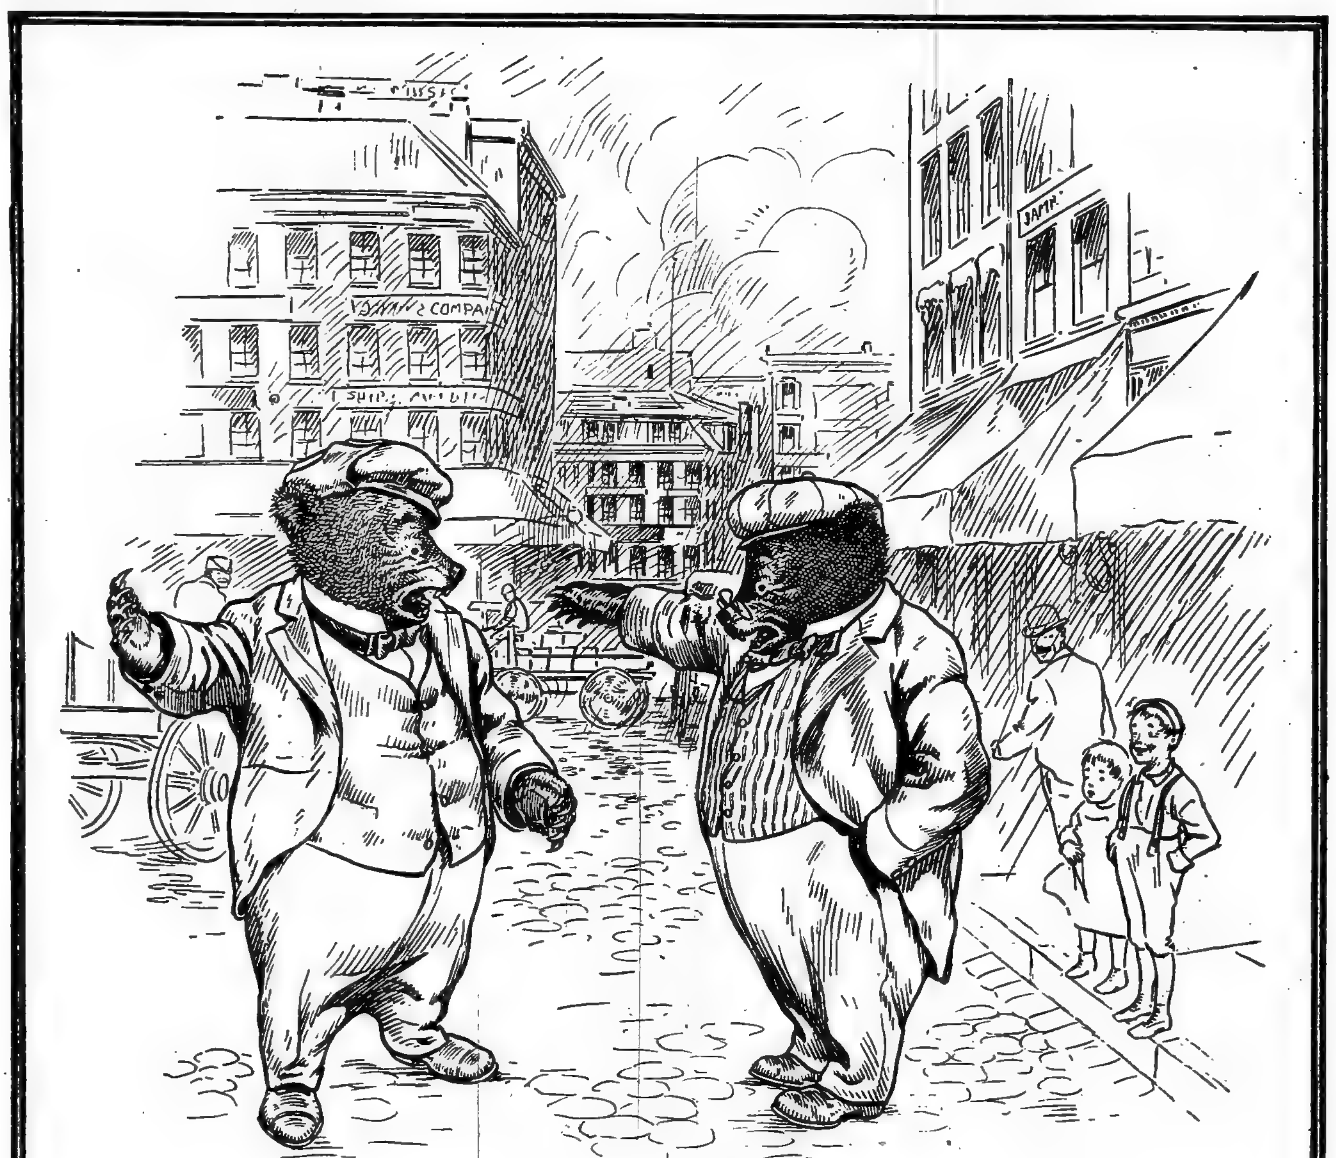
XII. THE BEARS SEE BUNKER HILL AND PLYMOUTH ROCK.

Priscilla Alden and her brother Will
Were unable to go to Bunker Hill.
They expressed regrets to the Roosevelt Bears,
And told them how to climb the stairs
To reach the top and to get a view
Of a dozen cities and the harbor too..
Will gave guide-books to TEDDY—G,
And wrote down things for him to see,
And where they were, and what each cost,
And the thing to do if they got lost.
Priscilla said, "I'm going to write
Some cards to friends to come to-night
To shake your hands and have some fun ;
Stay home, I must, and get things done.
I regret to start you off alone ;
If you get into trouble use the phone."

"When I'm pitching ball," said TEDDY—B,
"I'm a straight and curving G. O. P. ;
And TEDDY—G when at the bat
Is a bitting, dodging Democrat ;
But when we change and I am he,
I'm Democrat and he's G. O. P."

"We're losing time," said TEDDY—G ;
"I vote for children and they for me ;
Good-bye Priscilla ; don't work too hard ;
Be sure to send an invitation card
To-Jack Bodine and his sister Nell
In Vernon Street in Somerville.
We met Jack on a ranch out West ;
He gave us clothes and did his best
With the food he had to put up a feast
And start us happy on our journey East."

Priscilla promised and off they walked
And as they went they played and talked
With boys and girls along the street,
And stopped a policeman on his beat
And asked which way and the street to take
And the square to cross and the turn to make
To go here or there or up or down
Without walking twice around the town.



" They lost themselves in Scollay Square ; they didn't know which way or where."

You're the Roosevelt Bears ; by things you say
I know your names ; you've lost your way ;
These many squares and all this maze
Of narrow paths and crooked ways
Have taught Bostonians the newer light
To walk by faith and not by sight."

The blind man took them here and there,
And showed them all the places where
Patriots were born and cradled, too,
And where they worshipped and where the few
Fought for their rights with stubborn will
In Faneuil Hall and on Bunker Hill.
"We thank you kindly," said TEDDY—B,
"For all these things you've helped us see,
At Bunker Hill we want to stop
And climb up to the very top."

TEDDY—G put cash in the beggar's hat
And said, "You've shown us this and that ;
Some things we're glad enough to see
To prove the dates of history ;
But we started East on this tramp alone
To make some history of our own."
They said good-bye to the blind man there
And started up the winding stair.

They reached the top and saw the view
And there they planned some things to do.
"We'll write our names," said TEDDY—B,
"Where all who pass can clearly see
That we were here, the date and day,
When the Roosevelt Bears came down this way."
"A good idea," said TEDDY—G,
"I want to make some history,
And put my name where it will stand
With all the great men of the land."
So down they went to the ground again.
To a street near by where they had been,
And ropes they bought both good and strong,
And paint and brush to take along.

When the bears returned they barred the door,
And shut the keeper in a store.
TEDDY—B went up to the very top
And from there he let the cable drop
To TEDDY—G on the ground below
Where a crowd had gathered to see the show.
A board was fixed to make a seat,
And up he went two hundred feet,
And wrote "Taken again" where all could see ;
Signed "TEDDY—B" and "TEDDY—G."

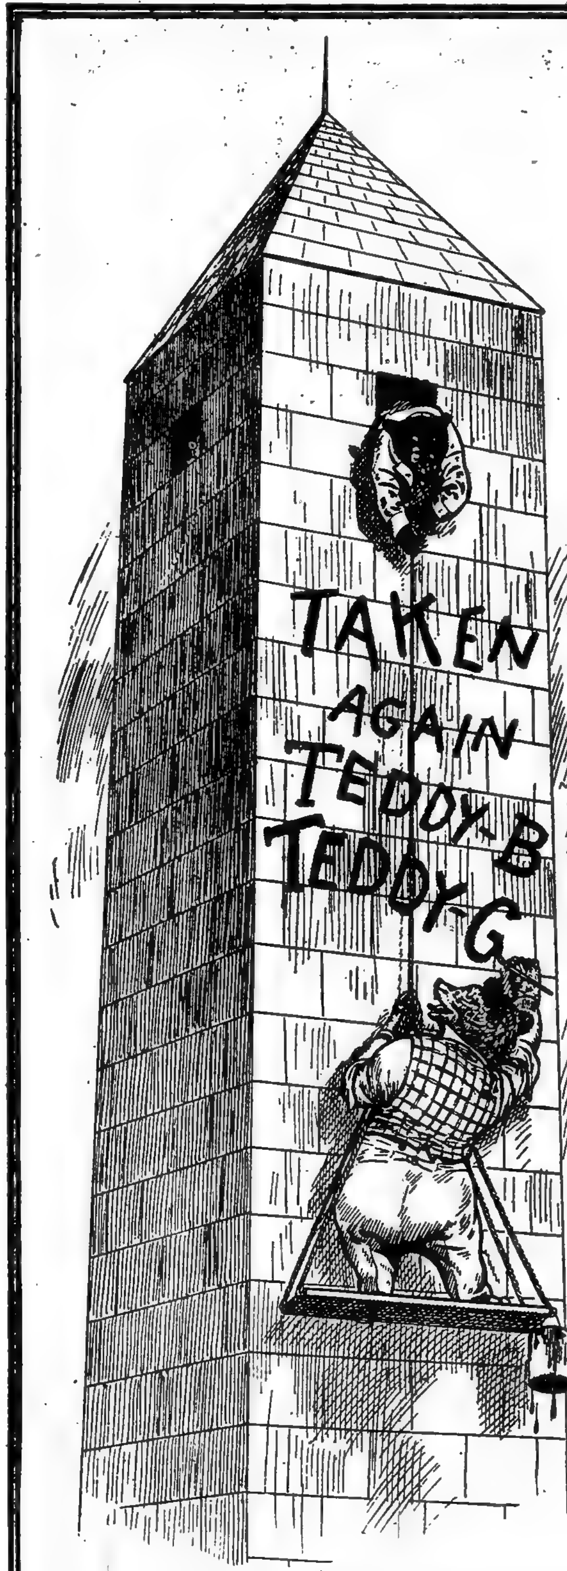
The police came out in squads of six,
And called to the bears to stop their tricks ;
And the boys in blue and firemen too ;
But there wasn't a thing that they could do.
They couldn't get in to climb the stairs,
And their longest ladders wouldn't reach the bears
When their work was through the two came down
The happiest fellows in all the town.
TEDDY—B stood up on a bench near by
And made a speech which made folks cry ;
While TEDDY—G on the other half
Danced a jig to make them laugh.

From Bunker Hill to Plymouth Rock
Was two hours' journey by the clock.
But the Roosevelt Bears were bound to trace
The nation's history from the place
Where the Pilgrims landed to Oyster Bay ;
So off to Plymouth they went that day.
In a small hotel on a pleasant street
They stopped awhile and got things to eat,
And brushed their clothes and shined their shoes,
And rested up and read the news.

"This is the rock," said TEDDY—B,
"Upon which we built this country ;
The rejected stone on which you stand
Is the corner stone of all this land."
TEDDY—G replied, "Where'd you get that?
In Emerson or the Autocrat ?
This rock's too small for you and me ;
How it held the Pilgrims, I can't see,
Unless they sat on each other's knee.
From all the things that I have heard
That Mayflower ship must have been a bird."

And thus they talked for an hour or so
Of times three hundred years ago

The bears returned to Beacon Street,
To Priscilla's home her friends to meet.
Boys and girls of every rank
Had gathered on the river's bank.



"And wrote, 'Taken Again' where all could see ;
Signed 'Teddy-B' and 'Teddy-G.'"

Jack was there with his sister Nell,
The only two from Somerville.
The play went on for an hour at least
When all sat down to Priscilla's feast
Of strawberries and cream and cake
And chocolate sweets of Boston make

They planned next day to have some fun
On the road to Concord and Lexington.
They'd hire an auto for the day,
And make things hum along the way.
TEDDY—G said he would the auto steer,
And repeat the ride of Paul Revere.

GOV. CURRY MISSING AFTER FIGHT IN SAMAR

Engagement Between the Constabulary and Pulajanes.

MANILA HAS NO DETAILS

The Island the Scene of Much Severe Fighting Ever Since the American Occupation.

MANILA, March 24.—A telegram received by the Government to-day from the Island of Samar says that an engagement has been fought between the constabulary and a force of fanatical Pulajanes.

Gov. George Curry is reported to be missing.

Details of the affair are lacking.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 24.—Samar has been the scene of the most bitter and persistent fighting that the American occupation of the Philippines has developed. It was the headquarters and home of the notorious insurgent leader Lukban, whose men, before his capture temporarily took the heart out of them, inflicted at different times the most severe losses upon the American troops that they suffered after the first day's fighting about Manila on the outbreak of the insurrection in February, 1899.

In the early part of 1900 a force of men from the command of Major Gilmore, then stationed at Calbayog, was penned up in a church at Catubig, and got away after a loss of nineteen killed. It was in Samar, at Balangiga, that Capt. Connell's company of the Ninth Infantry was surprised at breakfast and nearly wiped out. It was after that that Gen. "Hell Roaring Jake" Smith undertook the pacification of Samar, and issued the orders that brought him before a court-martial and led to his retirement by President Roosevelt.

It was across Samar that Major Waller of the Marine Corps made the desperate march which resulted in the killing of some of his guides, and brought about his court-martial and that of some of his officers. After the insurgents were dispersed Samar continued to be the centre of guerrilla activity for a long time, and when it ceased to be called that it began to be known as trouble with Pulajanes, Babylanes, Tulisanes, and other kinds of bandits and land pirates.

A rising of the Pulajanes began early in 1905, and it was necessary to reinforce the American troops in Samar. On Jan. 9, 1905, nine American soldiers were ambushed and killed and Lieut. Overy and others were wounded. Soon afterward it was stated that the outlaws had been dispersed and that the island was under control; but hardly had this dispatch been printed when more trouble was reported.

Last September Enrique Dagubob, the leader of the Pulajanes, was killed, together with forty-one of his followers, and it was then again reported that the trouble had finally been suppressed.

Samar has about 200,000 inhabitants. When George Curry was appointed Governor of the province early last year extraordinary powers were conferred on him in order to make more easy the work of pacifying the island. Curry succeeded Gov. Feito, who resigned.

A single performance of his early in 1900 showed the army the sort of man he was. He had had a lot of experience with pack outfits in New Mexico, where he had lived most of his life, and where he had been Sheriff of a county for some time, as well as a member of the Territorial Legislature. When the Schwan expedition for the occupation of Cavite, Batangas, and Tayabas Provinces set out from Manila in January, 1900, Curry was detailed to take charge of a pack train of fifty mules, attached to a squadron of his regiment commanded by Major Nolan. The battalion, with one extra troop, was joined to a squadron of the Fourth United States Cavalry, the whole force being under the command of Col. "Jack" Hayes.

One day this cavalry force was sent across Cavite from Binan toward Naic to cut off the retreat of the Filipinos, who were being driven down the province from the neighborhood of Manila by Gen. Wheaton. The squadron of the Fourth had a pack train in charge of a regular officer. The regulars and volunteers made a race of it that day, and the volunteers got in the lead. Curry, with his string of heavily loaded mules, was close behind his men. To hold his place and keep ahead of the regular troopers he had to keep right up with the last of the volunteers.

The regular pack train early fell by the wayside. It could not stand the terrific pace. But Curry knew how to handle his mules, and he had with him a party of old plainsmen, skilled in packing, and he never let go. It was not until almost sundown that he was delayed. Then, in getting down the side of a precipitous gorge, one of the mules slipped and broke its neck. Curry could have gone on with the rest of them and held his place, but he would not abandon the load of the dead mule. It took a long time to get it transferred to one of the extra animals, and by the time the train was ready to go on again the troopers were out of sight far ahead.

Curry had no guard for his train, and his men were armed only with revolvers. He had no guide, but he could follow the trail of the troopers and did as long as it was light. But when it was sundown he had to quit. The fighting men had all gone by him while he was working in the gorge, but the regular pack train was out of it, and Curry knew it, so he was all the more anxious to keep up. When it grew dark he hauled off to one side of the road, picked out a knoll that gave him command of the surrounding country, and camped. He built fires outside the ring of his camp, so as to hide what was behind them, and all night he kept his men stirring about, making a bustle as if they were a large force, and occasionally ringing the bell of the lead mare, making all the noise he could so as to let on to any prowling insurgents that he was more than ready for them. In that way he staved off an attack that night, and as soon as daylight showed him the trail again he hit it hard. By midforenoon he had overtaken the column once more.

Then he rode up to Col. Hayes and asked for carbines for his packers. He didn't want a guard for the train—all he needed was to have something to fight with if he had to fight. He got the guns, and until the run was ended Curry was along with his squadron every night, issuing rations to the volunteers while the regulars wondered what had become of theirs.

ROCKEFELLER SITS CLOSE.

Hadley's Allurements Don't Coax Him Here—His Health Fine, Says Rogers.

Special to The New York Times.

LAKEWOOD, N. J., March 24.—John D. Rockefeller refuses to be coaxed into visiting New York by the generosity, real or simulated, of Attorney General Hadley. He is still at his country place here. Mr. and Mrs. W. H. De Lap of this village spent the afternoon with Mr. and Mrs. Rockefeller. Mr. De Lap is the young Principal of the East Lakewood Public School. Mr. Rockefeller is interested in the young man, and between Mrs. Rockefeller and Mrs. De Lap there is a warm friendship.

The usual watchmen were on duty at the Rockefeller place to-day, and the arrival of M. E. Palmedo, a process server, did not seem to cause as much excitement among the guards as Mr. Palmedo expected. Palmedo hasn't brought a subpoena. He is in the employ of a New York newspaper, which wants to get a signed statement from Mr. Rockefeller.

H. H. Rogers and William G. Rockefeller both took occasion yesterday, in conversation with reporters at the Missouri inquiry, to tell how little truth there has been in published tales about the health of Mr. Rockefeller's father, William Rockefeller, and of John D. Rockefeller, head of the Standard Oil Company.

"There is no truth at all in the cancer story recently published about my father," said young Mr. Rockefeller. "It is true that my father has been ill, but his illness was not at all serious, and he is now regaining his strength rapidly. He had been overworking himself and needed a rest. That was all."

Mr. Rogers confirmed this, and was equally optimistic in speaking of the health of John D. Rockefeller.

"John D. Rockefeller isn't in bad health," Mr. Rogers declared. "I haven't seen him in some time, but I know there is nothing in the world the matter with him."

Mr. Rogers was asked if he would let a little thing like a subpoena keep him away from a brand-new grandson. He smilingly replied in the negative and remarked that he had a new grandson of his own. The seizure of a Standard Oil launch by Chinese pirates didn't appeal to him as a topic for conversation.

"Tell us a good story, then," suggested a reporter.

"No-o-o," said Mr. Rogers, still genially, "I guess I've done about all the talking that was necessary. But if I was in politics—"

The sentence was never completed. Judge "Sam" Priest joined him and they walked away together.

LITTAUER STILL BOSS.

Wood Defeated in 25th District, but Only After a Hard Fight.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 24.—Representative Littauer, with the help of State Committeeman Cyrus Durey, to-day demonstrated that he is still the boss of the Twenty-fifth District, comprising the counties of Hamilton, Fulton, Montgomery, Saratoga, and Warren.

Ex-Assemblyman Frank C. Wood of Fulton County has been giving him the most interesting time in his political career for the past six weeks, and though failing to obtain a majority of the delegates to the district and county convention, established his claim to be a factor in the political councils of Fulton and Hamilton Counties. The district and county convention was held to-day, and the defeat of Wood was accomplished only after a strenuous contest.

Wood captured delegates in towns where Littauer and Durey were supposed to be invincible. Durey's victory practically insures his continued control of the Fulton and Hamilton districts, and his naming of the Congressional delegates who will ballot for a nominee to succeed Littauer, provided Littauer continues in his intention to retire from Congress at the end of his present term.

RIVAL TO PANAMA CANAL.

Tehuantepec Isthmian Railroad Opened to Traffic.

WASHINGTON, March 24.—Special Agent Pepper of the Department of Commerce and Labor has made a report to the Bureau of Manufactures on the Mexican Railroad across the Isthmus of Tehuantepec and its relation to the Panama Canal. This interoceanic line, with its termini and harbor works at Coatzacoalcos on the Atlantic side and at Salina Cruz on the Pacific, has been opened to international trade after an expenditure of $35,000,000.

Intimations are given that Mexico will now enter upon a series of trade treaties with the Pacific Coast countries of South America, to obtain their international traffic, and also to extend Mexican commerce. The American Hawaiian Steamship Company is to operate nine 8,500-ton steamers on a triangular service, touching at San Francisco, Salina Cruz, and Honolulu. On the Atlantic side, a weekly steamer service is to be maintained between Coatzacoalcos and New York and Coatzacoalcos and New Orleans.

REBATE SUITS SETTLED.

Compromise Whereby Colorado Fuel and Santa Fe Pay $330,000.

ALBUQUERQUE, N. M., March 24.—It was learned to-day from Gallup that a compromise had been reached in the rebate suit of the Caledonia Coal Company against the Santa Fé Railroad, the Colorado Fuel & Iron Company, and the American Fuel Company. The case will be dismissed, it is said.

The suit was brought against the three defendant companies for $400,000 damages and $50,000 attorney fees for alleged rebates in rates to the defendant coal companies by the Santa Fé discriminating against the Caledonia company.

It is said that by the terms of the compromise the Caledonia Company was paid $300,000 and $30,000 for attorneys' fees by the railroad and the two coal companies. For this the Caledonia sells the American Fuel Company, the Otero, and the Thatcher Coal Mines, the Caledonia retaining the company's stores and the coal claim surveys sixteen miles west of Gallup.

MOODY ON LYNCHING CASE.

Says, After Seeing President, That Nothing Is Settled.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 24.—"The Chattanooga lynching case is in process of investigation," said Attorney General Moody to-day after he had talked with President Roosevelt, "and that is all there is to it.

"We have not determined whether this is a question for the State courts or for the Federal courts, and we cannot determine until we have made a most thorough investigation."

MORAN NOW CONFESSES PART IN DYNAMITE PLOT

Implicates Walking Delegates Here and in Jersey.

TRIAL SET FOR TO-MORROW

Members of Housesmiths' Union, He Declares, Paid for Wrecking Post & McCord Buildings.

Charles Moran, one of the three alleged members of the Housesmiths' Union who was to go on trial to-morrow on the charge of attempting to dynamite the Bliss Building, now in process of erection by Post & McCord, in East Twenty-third Street, upset the trial programme late yesterday afternoon by making a complete confession to Assistant District Attorney Arthur C. Train.

"Several walking delegates of the New York and New Jersey branches of the union were implicated by Moran," Mr. Train said yesterday, "but as we have had no opportunity yet to corroborate Moran's story we cannot make their names public. He told me that these men not only put up money to have the Bliss building dynamited, but they had paid to have other buildings destroyed and the work of construction halted."

It was well along toward evening when Moran sent word from his cell in the Tombs to the District Attorney's office that he was willing to waive trial and plead guilty on the charge on which he and the other two ironworkers were under indictment. The message had been no sooner delivered than instructions were issued to bring him to see Mr. Train, and for more than two hours the two men talked together. Moran's counsel was present at the interview, and when the confession had been reduced to writing witnessed his client's signature.

Moran was taken into custody with Thomas Weir and John Guthrie by a squad of Central Office detectives as they were about to place twenty pounds of dynamite in the Bliss building. They were supplied with fuses and everything necessary for the explosion. Indictments were returned without delay, and the men were remanded to await trial.

The trio had not been behind the bars a week when Guthrie confessed, implicating Moran and Weir and naming the walking delegates who had played the part of tempters, according to the tale he told. He was to have appeared as a witness for the State if Moran had been regularly tried.

"Moran told me all about his conferences with the walking delegates," said Mr. Train, after the prisoner had been taken back to the Tombs. "He told me that he had plotted with them to wreck derricks on other Post & McCord buildings, and explained in detail the plans that were laid to dynamite the Bliss building. He was most emphatic in his statement that the money for the carrying out of the Bliss job was put up by the walking delegates."

When Guthrie, the original one of the three to weaken, made his confession, he said that he obtained employment on the Post & McCord building in East Twenty-third Street last Fall, and that he was told by his fellow ironworkers that if he did not join the union he would be killed. Guthrie has a young wife and two children, and he was thoroughly alarmed by the warning. So frightened was he that he went to his employers and told them of the threats that had been made against him.

The firm advised him to become a member of the union. He followed the advice. Shortly after joining, he says, he became acquainted with Moran, who introduced him to the walking delegates as "a man willing to turn tricks for the union." With Moran he attended several meetings of the union, and at a session held in February it was proposed that he should wreck the derrick on the Levering & Gerigues building, at Eighteenth Street and Third Avenue. This job was to pay him $50. The names of the men he accuses of offering him the money are known to the Assistant District Attorney.

Guthrie says he loitered in the vicinity of the building for several days, but never got a chance to carry out the job. Then he was assigned to halt the work on Henkel Brothers' building on Stone Street, receiving specific instructions from the delegates to flatten the cables holding the derricks there. He did not get a chance to do this job, either, and after some little wait the reward offered for the work was increased to $200. However, no opportunity availed itself, and then the Bliss job came up.

Before Guthrie, Moran and Weir planned the dynamiting, Guthrie left the employ of Post & McCord, but was in the plot to destroy the Bliss building, he says, and gave the warning which was acted upon at Police Headquarters by Inspector McLaughlin.

The three ironworkers were followed by detectives to the foot of East Twenty-third Street, where they buried a satchel containing twenty pounds of dynamite in a sand pile.

Then they walked back to the Bliss Building, and, while two kept a lookout, the third man entered the building, and was about to place a heavy charge in a spot where it would demolish the structure, when the detectives pounced upon them. They had twenty pounds of dynamite in their possession, in addition to the dynamite they had buried in the sand pile.

According to Assistant District Atterney Train, Moran has a bad record and has confessed to having been employed in similar jobs.

Thomas Farrell, Secretary of the Housesmiths' Union, has denied that either Moran or Weir is a member of that union. There has been much ugly talk on both sides. The union people say that the alleged plot was a "plant" arranged by Post & McCord to harm the union and break the strike. They are taking much interest in the case for this reason and hope to prove that Guthrie was simply a spy employed by the contracting firm to carry out its plans.

TO RESTORE LAPSED POLICIES

The Equitable's Offer to Holders Frightened Out Last Year.

President Paul Morton of the Equitable Life Assurance Society has sent a letter to policy holders who have allowed their policies to lapse since the beginning of 1905, calling attention to the results shown in the society's annual statement of a few weeks ago after the public accountants had completed their examination and suggesting that they consider the advisability of having their policies reinstated. To this end Mr. Morton has created for the time being a special department to be devoted to handling applications for reinstatement and proposes to facilitate the matter so far as it is possible.

Mr. Morton says:

"You may not know that if you are still a satisfactory risk your policy can be reinstated and you can be restored to the same position which you held as a policy holder prior to your discontinuance, and with all the benefits and privileges existing at that time. You undoubtedly do know that an old policy such as you gave up is worth more to you than a new one can possibly be. The society will be glad to serve you in this connection."

"JEROME MEANT ME"—COLER.

Borough President Calls District Attorney a "Mad Cur" and a "Menace."

Declaring that he was indicated by District Attorney Jerome in Mr. Jerome's reference at the Delta Upsilon Club dinner on Friday night to a Borough President who had sold a certain stock short, on the advice of a newspaper editor, Borough President Coler of Brooklyn made a warm reply to Mr. Jerome yesterday, demanding that the latter tell all he knows about the matter, and speaking of the District Attorney as a "mad cur" and a "menace to the city."

"Jerome," said Mr. Coler, "can mean no other than me. He must have been referring to me, because I know of no other Borough President who was in Wall Street. I am not defending any nameless inueundoes, and it is up to Jerome to produce proof and say whom he is talking about.

"I would like very much to answer any specific statement he may make. For him to try to divert attention from his own negligence in the insurance scandals by making such scurrilous attacks, I consider underhanded work.

"Any man who will make a statement like that and fail to back it up with names, facts, and figures, is a cur. When he gets filled up with whisky and cigarettes he becomes a mad cur and a menace to the city. Let him back up what he says with proof or retract."

SAYS JEROME SPEAKS TRUTH.

F. Hopkinson Smith Assails Lawson and Yellow Journals.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, March 24.—"District Attorney Jerome doesn't make any bones about telling the plain truth, without any softening side explanations," said F. Hopkinson Smith, the author, to-day, in commenting upon Jerome's speech last evening.

"This great evil of abuse," continued Mr. Smith, "has gotten to be a colossal scheme to make money by doing the greatest harm to men who do not deserve it. We cannot afford to let this gigantic journalistic mud-slinging machine go on working if we value and cherish this, the grandest country in the world.

"New York has pure women, and women who do not smoke or gamble. They do not all drink, or play the races, yet who would not think so to read the yellow journals?

"Lawson has only proved a stirrer-up of filth, and instead of starting the reforms he anticipated he has merely left a bad odor behind. Poor people are reading these things or having them preached to them by labor agitators, and such articles form the soul and sinews of anarchy.

"We are defaming our Senate, our people, our customs, our methods, and people abroad are reading it and talking about it to the great detriment of our country and our people.

"The cheap magazines and yellow press are not informers, and that the people will learn very soon. When they do learn this there will be a revolution in the beliefs of the people which will counteract in a measure the harm that is being done by the alarmists. But let us hope that the revulsion of feeling comes soon. We rely on the good sense of the American people to come to the rescue."

Peabody Not to Resign.

A report was published yesterday that President Peabody of the Mutual Life had told a friend recently that he intended soon resigning from the post which he has held since the first of the year. The reason was said to be that Mr. Peabody saw no way out of the dissensions that exist in the company and in its board, and felt that his old business connections would be far more congenial. Regarding this Mr. Peabody said:

"There is absolutely nothing in it."

It is said that unsuccessful efforts have been made recently to get several prominent men into the Mutual's board, among them John Wanamaker.

M. ORLENEFF ARRESTED ON A LARCENY CHARGE

Head of the Russian Players Accused of Fraud.

DIDN'T KEEP AN AGREEMENT

And Had Got $1,500 by It, Says His Accuser — Committee Has Had to Abandon Helping Him.

Paul Orleneff, head of the Orleneff troupe of Russian actors, who have been through many vicissitudes since their arrival in this country a short time ago, was arrested last night by Detective Sergts. Farley and Birmingham of the Central Office on the charge of grand larceny.

A warrant for his arrest was issued by Magistrate Wahle on March 22 at the request of Assistant District Attorney Pinchot, and was served on the actor on his return from Boston last night, where the company had recently been playing.

The complainant in the case is Joseph Goldstein of 153 Forsyth Street. He says that on Feb. 22 he gave the actor $1,500, for which he was to receive a part interest of the receipts of the company while they were playing "Tsar Feodor Ivanowitch, Son of Ivan the Terrible," and become the Treasurer of the company.

According to Goldstein, for being Treasurer he was to receive a salary of $30 a week. This, he says, he received in full during the first and second weeks. In the third week he received only $15, in the fourth $5, and in the fifth week nothing. He then declares that he demanded his money back, but Orleneff refused to give it to him. Later the company went to Boston.

After their departure he went to the District Attorney's office and made a complaint.

Orleneff, who was locked up at Headquarters last night, gave his address as 83 East Fourth Street. Early last Winter the company of which he is the head became financially embarrassed, but was able to fill certain theatrical engagements through a number of special matinées given at the Garrick Theatre, which were patronized extensively by wealthy people.

Several days ago a committee of New Yorkers formed to assist the Russian actors and get them out of their difficulties here was compelled to abandon M. Orleneff and his associates. The principal members of this committee were Mrs. Frances Hellman, Ernest Crosby, Charles Klein, Paul Herzog, and Owen Johnson.

A member of this committee explained last night that business contracts and entanglements in which M. Orleneff had involved himself, without informing the committee, had made it hopeless to try to help him. He had signed a contract with the Tcherikoff Society, in which Emma Goldman is a leading spirit, and which is an organization of local Russians that brought him and his company here last Fall, whereby he agreed not to play under any other auspices without the society's permission.

It had been arranged to present the Russian actor here next week at the Berkeley Lyceum, under the management of Daniel Frohman, the company to be backed by a ten-thousand-dollar fund contributed by New Yorkers, among them Andrew Carnegie. These performances, it was hoped, would pull M. Orleneff out of the financial mire. But when it was found that both the Tcherikoff Society and Goldstein were threatening all manner of legal proceedings, including box-office attachments, the committee decided to quit. M. Orleneff will therefore have to get out of his troubles without their aid.

BATTLESHIP FOR CHINA.

Rush Orders Sent to the Wisconsin at Manila.

MANILA, March 24.—The battleship Wisconsin will sail at midnight for Shanghai to join the American fleet there.

Rush orders to the Wisconsin have been received from Rear Admiral Train.

HONGKONG, March 24.—Details of the capture and looting by Chinese pirates near Canton on Thursday of a launch owned by the Standard Oil Company were obtained to-day. The launch, or tug, the Comet, was proceeding to Kong-Mun, between Wam-Poa and Canton, towing a lighter laden with kerosene.

While the launch was passing what is known as the Second Barrier, or second line of former obstructions to navigation, at 6:30 P. M., and when in sight of Wam-Poa Fort, on the Island of Wam-Poa, (one of the many islands lying between Canton and the sea,) a number of junks manned by pirates closed around the Comet and her tow. A stinkpot (earthen jar containing gunpowder, resin, and hand grenades,) was thrown into the Comet's engine room, the pirates boarded the launch, and her crew were overpowered.

The pirates then beached the Comet and the lighter and removed all the valuables from the two vessels, including a number of Winchester rifles and a thousand rounds of ammunition. The cargo of kerosene was not touched.

The pirates, it appears, missed capturing much more valuable booty. It was the intention of the Standard Oil Company officials to ship $20,000 in specie on the Comet, but the specie was transferred to a freight steamer.

The American Consular officials are investigating the affair.

TRAIN KILLS SEVEN IN WAGON.

Grandmother the Only Surviving Member of Family of Eight.

Special to The New York Times.

SUNBURY, Penn., March 24.—In a grade-crossing accident on the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad here this evening, seven members of a family of eight were killed. The surviving member is the grandmother.

Washington Neidig, a farmer, was driving home with his two sons, Cyrus and Clarence, the latter's wife, and their three children. A curve and a hill hid a Reading express train which was late and was running at a high speed. Neidig whipped up the horses, and the wagon was struck, the bodies being flung in all directions.

When the train was stopped, 700 feet beyond the crossing, the bodies of two of the children were still on the pilot.

ALBANY CLUB FOR HAMILTON.

He Is Elected President by a Unanimous Vote.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 24.—By one of the largest votes ever given at an annual election of the Albany Club, Andrew Hamilton was elected its President to-night. He received the support of every member who voted, a total of 81.

Mr. Hamilton came into the clubhouse just as the polls were closing, at 10 o'clock, and was warmly greeted by the large assemblage of members. The election brought out some of the leading citizens, including Anthony N. Brady, who has just returned from Jamaica.

TROUBLE AT VIENNA EMBASSY.

Ambassador Francis Will Probably Have to Sail at Once.

The situation in the American Embassy at Vienna is such that it will probably be necessary for Mr. Francis to proceed to his post at once.

MRS. OELRICHS LOSES SUIT.

Detective Gets Judgment Against Her and Mrs. Vanderbilt.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 24.—Detective John Seymour to-day got judgment against Mrs. Theresa Oelrichs and Mrs. Virginia Vanderbilt for $11,100 on account of a contract made on May 2, 1902, whereby Seymour was induced to leave his place as Captain of the local police force to assume charge of the defendants' property at a salary of $300 a month for ten years. On June 29, 1904, Seymour was discharged.

The defendants asserted that there was no contract, but Judge Hibbard ruled against them.

STEAMER AFIRE AT SEA.

The Titian Puts Into St. John's—Hold Will Be Flooded.

ST. JOHN'S, N. F., March 24.—The steamer Titian, bound from New York for Liverpool, arrived to-night and reported that fire in the cargo was discovered three days ago.

An attempt to quench the flames by injecting steam into the hold was unsuccessful and the vessel came to St. John's. The extent of the fire is unknown, but is apparently not serious. The vessel will be docked to-morrow and her hold will be flooded.

ZELAYA'S SON MARRIED.

Nicaraguan President's Daughter-in-Law an American.

WASHINGTON, March 24.—Alphonso Zelaya, the twenty-one-year-old son of the President of the Republic of Nicaragua, married to-day Miss Marguerite Baker, daughter of Dr. W. W. Baker of this city. The ceremony took place at the home of the bride's parents, and the Rev. I. O. Baker, pastor of the Church of the Atonement, Lutheran, officiated.

The wedding was the outcome of a long romantic courtship. A few months ago the couple contemplated marrying, but the Nicaraguan Minister, Señor Corea, intervened, it was said, by order of President Zelaya, who thought his son too young and too dependent. According to all accounts, young Zelaya was kidnapped by the Nicaraguan Minister and sent to his father.

The Nicaraguan Minister is absent from Washington on a trip to Cuba. President Zelaya having in the meantime changed his mind, young Zelaya returned to this city and obtained a license without further objection.

GOV. PATTISON BETTER.

Prayers for His Recovery to be Said in Ohio Churches To-day.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, March 24.—Gov. John M. Pattison appears to be emerging from the crisis of his illness, but that he will survive not even his physicians will predict. Dr. E. J. Wilson made this statement to-night:

"It should be understood that the change for the better is so slight that Mr. Pattison is still in a precarious condition, with the odds against his permanent recovery. Much now depends on his strength and the retention of the wonderful vitality."

Prayers will be offered for the recovery of Gov. Pattison to-morrow by his pastor, the Rev. A. E. Craig, of the Broad Street Methodist Church. Similar services will be held in all the Methodist churches throughout the city and State.

YALE PROFESSORS TO RETIRE.

Richards and Wright to Give Up Their Chairs This Year.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., March 24.—Prof. Eugene L. Richards of the department of mathematics and Prof. Arthur W. Wright, who holds the Chair of Experimental Physics at Yale, to-day announced their intention to retire from active labor at the close of the present college year.

The first named was graduated from Yale in 1861, and long has been known as the Father of the Yale Gymnasium. For years he was Chairman of the Faculty Committee on Athletics. His courses will be taken by Prof. Beebe. Prof. Wright was graduated from Yale in 1859, and came here as a professor in 1871. He will be succeeded by Prof. H. A. Bumstead.

STEAMER BODO DOOMED.

Efforts of Tugs to Get Stranded Steamer Off Fail—Cargo Spoiled.

Special to The New York Times.

FIRE ISLAND, March 24.—The Norwegian fruit steamer Bodo, which stranded on the beach ten miles to the west of this point on Monday night, will probably prove a total loss. All efforts by the Merritt wrecking tugs to float her have failed. To-day the tugs endeavored to drag the Bodo's stern, which has settled seven feet in the cradling sand, seaward. The vessel would not budge.

The banana cargo, which was thrown overboard yesterday, was spoiled by the frost, greatly to the disappointment of the beachcombers, who gathered all along the shore in anticipation of salvage fees.

Half the crew have remained on board to assist in saving the vessel. She is in no present danger, owing to the low seas prevailing.

STANDARD OIL OWNS UP, WITH AN APPEAL IN VIEW

The Standard of New Jersey Owns the Missouri Concerns.

HADLEY THINKS IT A VICTORY

Says He Now Has Proof of the Trust's Monopoly—H. H. Rogers and Young W. G. Rockefeller Testify.

"Subject to the objection that it is immaterial and irrelevant, it is admitted for the purposes of this case only, that now and during the period covered by the information, the majority of the stock of the Standard Oil Company of Indiana and the stock of the Republic Oil Company is held for the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, and that all stock of the Waters-Pierce Oil Company on the books of the company in the name of M. M. Van Beuren is held for the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey. This is admitted by all the counsel and by all the respondent companies."

The legal advisers of Standard Oil in these words conceded yesterday the contentions as to stock ownership upon which Attorney General Hadley of Missouri says he depends, in a large measure, for winning his case against the oil companies which he alleges are doing business within the limits of his State in violation of its anti-trust law and in restraint of trade.

There was not even a suggestion of warring interests about the hearing at which the admission was made. The trust lawyers breathed soft words instead of exceptions. They wore winning smiles and vied with each other in finding out just what Mr. Hadley wanted and supplying his wants with the least possible delay. From the witness stand H. H. Rogers beamed approval as the admission was spread upon the official record.

The long-hand method of transcribing the testimony was not persisted in. When the ownership admission of the Standard had been written into the record, Mr. Hadley asked if the usual system of taking testimony in short hand and then writing it out on the typewriter wouldn't serve for the rest of the hearing. There was an immediate and gracious response in the affirmative, and when William G. Rockefeller followed H. H. Rogers on the stand the short-hand man came back into his own and the disturbing click of the typist's keys was no longer heard in the room.

Armed with the decision of the Supreme Court of Missouri as to the materiality of the information he sought, Mr. Hadley came to New York in full expectation of winning the knowledge which he deems essential, but he admitted when the hearing was over that he had been surprised by the complete lack of opposition he found.

"The question of stock ownership is the vital question in the suit now pending in Missouri," he said. "The admissions made to-day constitute the very evidence I have been fighting to get from the beginning. There now remains no doubt of my ability to prove beyond contradiction that the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey controls the oil business in Missouri, and that it is conducting the business in defiance of the law.

"I am now prepared to take up the details of the control that the New Jersey company enforced as a result of ownership, but ownership implies control and additional testimony will be merely confirmatory."

"Will you call off your process servers from pursuit of John D. Rockefeller?"

Rockefeller Not Wanted Badly.

"The subpoena issued for Mr. Rockefeller has not been withdrawn," said Mr. Hadley, "and will not be. That his testimony is essential, however, I am not prepared to say. It may be that he knows very little of the details of the oil business in which I am interested, but I have written him several times, asking him to come forward and testify, and would like very much to find out just what he does know."

Just before the hearing ended Mr. Hadley caused the service upon counsel for the respondent companies of a notice calling for the production of certain books, memoranda, and letters having to do with the relations existing between the Waters-Pierce Company and 26 Broadway.

"It makes little difference to me whether the notice is complied with or not," said Mr. Hadley. "I have copies of everything asked for, secured in Missouri, and the failure to produce the originals will make these copies admissible. They show clearly the control exercised by the Standard Oil Company over the Waters-Pierce concern and the existence of the agreement parceling Missouri out between the different companies."

The Standard lawyers pointed out after adjournment that, under the decision of the Supreme Court of Missouri, the admission made by them was unavoidable, but that it was agreed to subject to the objections of immateriality and irrelevancy, and consequently to review by the higher courts. There was nothing new, in so far as the admission applies to the Standard Oil Company of Indiana and the Republic Oil Company. Its only important feature was the admission regarding the Waters-Pierce Company.

The hearing was scheduled to begin at 67 Wall Street at 10 o'clock. At that hour Special Commissioner Sanborn was on hand, but neither Attorney General Hadley, his assistant, Rush Lake, nor the Oil Trust lawyers were in evidence. As time wore on the Special Commissioner grew impatient. At 10:30 o'clock he announced that if the parties to the hearing had not appeared by 11 o'clock he would adjourn the proceedings until Monday. The hour was striking when Frank Hagerman of Kansas City and Judge "Sam" Priest of St. Louis, of the Standard's forces, appeared.

Right behind them came Alfred D. Eddy of Chicago, Western counsel of the Standard; M. F. Elliott of New York, its general solicitor; W. V. Rowe, H. H. Rogers's personal counsel, and Judge Johnson of St. Louis, representing the Waters-Pierce Oil Company. They had hardly seated themselves when Attorney General Hadley and Assistant Attorney General Lake appeared, with Henry Wollman, their New York representative.

By this time the room was jammed to its doors. H. H. Rogers, who was accompanied by William G. Rockefeller, looked in for an instant and then entered an anteroom to wait until he should be called.

The Special Commissioner announced that he was ready to proceed, and Mr. Hagerman, of counsel to the Standard, rose.

MARCH 1906

"If it please the Commissioner," he said, "certain questions were propounded at the last hearing which were not answered, counsel for the respondent companies in these proceedings contending that they were immaterial and irrelevant. The distinguished Attorney General from Missouri (this with a deep bow to Mr. Hadley) disagreed with the view taken by us, and since then the Supreme Court of Missouri has sustained him. Under the circumstances we are now ready to produce the witnesses who declined to answer at the previous hearings for reexamination."

"I desire to call H. H. Rogers as the first witness," said Mr. Hadley.

Mr. Rogers Is Wary.

Mr. Rogers responded without delay. He bowed to the Special Commissioner and smiled his recognition across to the Missourian. He was dressed in a dark gray suit, and wore a dark tie, relieved by a pearl pin. There was no trace of hostility in his bearing toward Mr. Hadley. He had plainly come before the Commissioner to tell gracefully what he must.

"I will return now," said Mr. Hadley, "to the questions which you were asked here before and which you refused to answer, and ask you if you are a stockholder in the Standard Oil Company of Indiana?"

"I am," Mr. Rogers replied.

Q.—Are you familiar with conditions existing in the State of Missouri with reference to the sale of oil? A.—Not in detail.

Q.—Do you know if any division of trade was made in the State of Missouri between any of the respondents in this case—the Standard Oil Company of Indiana, the Waters-Pierce Oil Company, and the Republic Oil Company? A.—I do not.

Q.—Did you learn last Summer when you were in Oklahoma and Indian Territory that there were certain sections there where the Standard Oil Company of Indiana sold oil and the Waters-Pierce Company did not? A.—No, Sir, I did not.

Q.—Do you own any stock in the Waters-Pierce Oil Company? A.—I do not.

Q.—Do you personally own or control any stock through any other person? A.—I do not.

Q.—Do you know M. M. Van Beuren? A.—I know of him.

Q.—Is he not a son-in-law of John D. Archbold? A.—I have heard so.

Q.—Is H. M. Tilford an officer of the Standard Oil Company of Indiana? A.—I don't know.

Q.—Do you know with what company he is connected? A.—I think with the Continental Company.

Q.—Has he offices at 26 Broadway? A.—I think he has.

Mr. Rogers was particular in seeing to it that he understood the questions put to him and that his answers were correctly transcribed. Not once did he refuse to answer. He said that so far as he knew the Standard Oil Company of Indiana was not controlled by any trade committee, operating in this city, in the sale of its oil in Missouri. He admitted acquaintance with Walter C. Teagle, and said he believed Mr. Teagle had something to do, in some way, with the foreign oil business of the Standard. He knew Mr. Moffatt of the Standard Oil Company of Indiana. They had talked together, probably in connection with matters pertaining to that company.

"Do you know, Mr. Rogers, of the existence of the Waters-Pierce Oil Company of Missouri?" he was asked.

"I have heard of it."

"It is charged, Mr. Rogers, that the Standard Oil Company of Indiana, the Waters-Pierce Oil Company of Missouri, and the Republic Oil Company of New York are in a combination, federation, trust, and agreement in violation of the laws of Missouri. Is it not a fact, within your knowledge, that a majority of the stock of the three companies is held or controlled by the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, and that such a combination does exist in Missouri?"

"My knowledge is extremely limited in regard to the details of such matters," said Mr. Rogers, slowly.

"Will you let me have such information as you may be possessed of on the subject?"

The Surrender.
